KNOCKOUT ROBBERY

A stumble-footed burglar early this morning knocked himself out trying to escape from Esquimalt police.

A police spokesman said investigating officers found the man in Esquimalt Legion, 622 Admirals, wedged in a three-foot deep shaft in an upstairs closet.

He apparently fell after darting into the closet when he heard police approaching.

Two officers on patrol just after 4 a.m. noticed a window above the front door of the legion had been smashed. When they went to investigate they heard someone inside.

They called for reinforcements to surround the building and two officers went inside — only to make one of the easiest arrests of their careers.

Police said the man had about $600 in bills and several dollars in change stuffed in his pockets. The money had been taken from three float trays and two cigarette machines.

The man was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he is in satisfactory condition.

Police said the man has been charged with breaking and entering and theft.

REMEMBER CLOCKS GAIN, SLEEPERS LOSE

Everybody knows daylight saving time arrives tonight, don't they?

At 2 a.m. officially, although hardly anyone stays up just to celebrate that moment.

The question is: which way to turn the hands of the clock, back an hour or ahead?

Just remember: spring ahead, fall back.

CONSUMER, PRODUCER LOSE

Plumptre Raps Food Politics

Beryl Plumptre, former vice-chairman of the Anti-Inflation Board, said here today government policies on agriculture and food are often based on political expediency rather than the needs of consumers and producers.

In a speech to the British Columbia Home Economic Association spring conference at the Queen Victoria Inn, Mrs. Plumptre said there is a "definite trend towards authoritarianism" which stifled the initiative of producers and limited market forces.

Mrs. Plumptre, a long-time proponent of a national food policy which would provide an over-all strategy for food production, processing and marketing, attacked an allegedly excessive use of marketing boards for farm produce.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan is a big supporter of marketing boards.

"Marketing boards certainly have a place in a national food policy in so far as they provide farmers with useful information on markets and agricultural research," she said.

"But marketing boards with monopolistic powers have no place in a national food policy or in our economy, no more than has monopolistic industry."

Mrs. Plumptre, who also headed the defunct food prices review board, said some claimed Canada has an agricultural policy that serves as the national food policy.

"But an agricultural policy is far too limited, and indeed, I doubt we do have a national agricultural policy."

She said some policies encourage production, others limit output; some subsidize farmers to stabilize income while others leave farmers to bear the effects of bad weather on their crops.

Mrs. Plumptre said one example is the dairy industry in which government policy "oscillated between policies to limit or to expand production." It was impossible for farmers to plan production efficiently under those conditions, she said.

Mrs. Plumptre spoke from a text released in advance in Ottawa.

Tonight, Sunday: Cloudy Periods

Guerrillas Get PoW Status

GENEVA (UPI) — The Red Cross has ruled that guerrilla fighters captured by the enemy must be treated as prisoners of war and not as terrorists.

In revising the 1949 Geneva War Conventions to bring them into line with modern warfare, the Red Cross humanitarian law conference Friday adopted an article extending prisoner-of-war status to guerrillas.

But the fighters will be required to "distinguish themselves from the civilian population" and "carry their arms openly" in combat, military manoeuvres preceding an attack or while being watched by the enemy.

Up to now captured guerrillas have been considered terrorists because the 1949 war accords do not give them prisoner-of-war status, which forbids summary executions and guarantees food and medical attention.

The conference vote was 66 in favor, 18 abstentions and two against — Israel and Brazil.

Israeli delegate Meir Rosenne, whose country has been attacked repeatedly by Palestinian guerrillas based outside its borders, argued the change "encourages acts of terrorism."

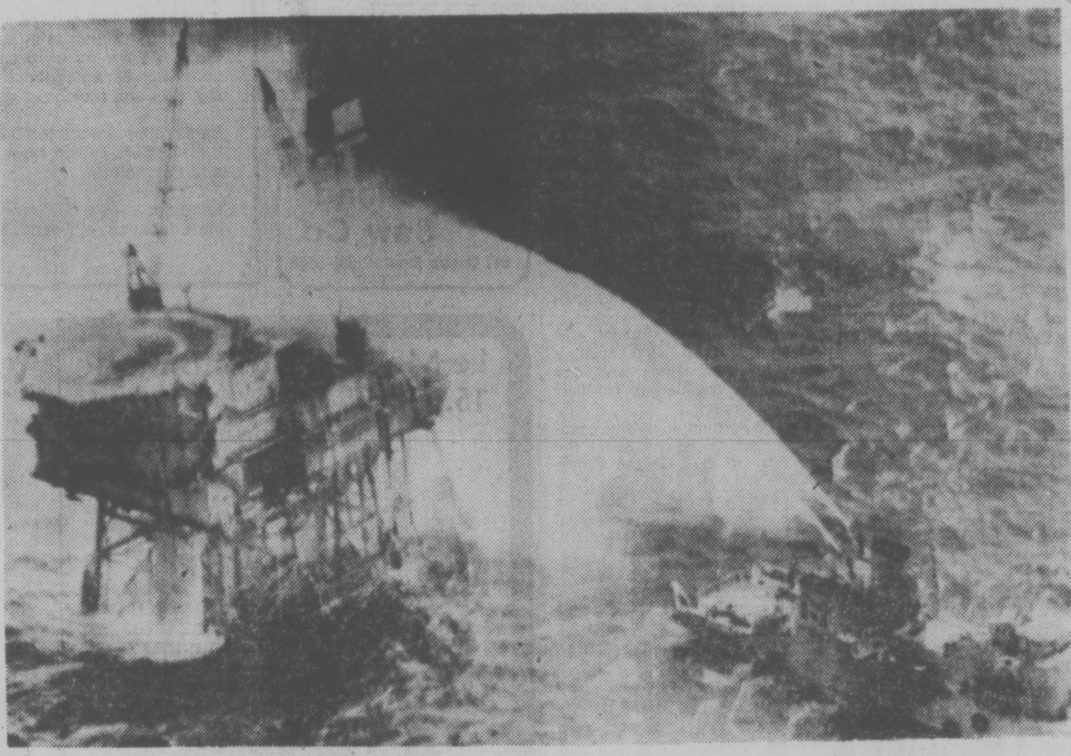
"Civilians are now entitled to take part in combat which is against all the rules of war," Rosenne said.

A delegate from the Palestine Liberation Organization found the change "on the whole satisfactory," but complained it hampers guerrilla infiltrators.

"It recognizes liberation movement fighters as prisoners of war, but with the restriction that he has to show his arms even before the attack," he said.

British delegate David Hugues-Morgan abstained because of objections to the requirement that guerrillas must carry their arms openly while they are visible to the enemy.

"Many armed forces today have electronic devices which enable visual observation to be carried out during hours of darkness and in other conditions of poor visibility," Hugues-Morgan said.



Blowout scene has fireship spraying water on spewing oil platform

Massive Oil Well Blowout Spewing Into North Sea

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — Officials trying to plug a 4,000-ton-a-day oil leak in Europe's largest offshore oilfield said today even a tiny spark by workers could set off an explosion and turn the platform into a "torchlight."

The leak, which began Friday night, has sent an 18-square-mile oil slick drifting toward the western coasts of Norway and Denmark and prompted oil company officials to summon oilfield troubleshooter Paul "Red" Adair to the site.

One official said Adair, a leading American expert on oil blowouts, will have to approach the platform in a small rubber boat.

"A helicopter cannot land on the platform, neither can a ship go near it," said a spokesman for the American Phillips Petroleum Co., which operates the platform 150 miles northeast of Scotland in the Ekofisk field.

"The exhaust could be enough to set it on fire and turn it into a torchlight."

The 112-man crew of the "Bravo" platform in the North Sea was evacuated when the blowout began.

A Phillips spokesman in London said the rig was being "worked over" — undergoing routine maintenance — and the device that prevents leaks, or blowouts, had been removed. When this is done, he said, heavy mud is poured down the hole to maintain pressure.

"But it looks as though there was a sudden upward movement in the pressure."

Norwegian authorities warned all North Sea countries about the disaster, and asked for chemicals and special oil nets to help contain the slick. High seas and strong winds prevented early attempts to control it.

The fire vessel "Seaway Falcon" sprayed water on the platform to reduce the fire hazard, while British Petroleum's fire-fighting ship "Forties Kiwi" rushed to scene to assist.

The Ekofisk field is the largest offshore project in Europe. Discovered in 1969, it now averages 350,000 barrels of oil daily.

The chairman of the Norwegian Fisherman's Association said the accident was "something he had expected to happen sooner or later. We fear severe consequences for the fisheries."

CABBIE COLLARED, PAIR FACE CHARGES

Two men were charged today in provincial court with attempted robbery with violence after a taxi driver was grabbed by the neck in a secluded Colwood area Friday night.

Brian Gordon Bain, 19, of Haney, and Dale Kenneth Parker, 20, of no fixed address, were remanded in custody to Monday for plea.

Colwood RCMP said two men flagged a C & C cab near the Johnson Street bridge at about 10 p.m.

They asked driver Gurnam Sinan Bajwa, 27, to take them to Colwood.

When they arrived one of the men grabbed Bajwa around the neck and started to strangle him while the other attempted to reach for the cabbie's wallet.

Bajwa broke loose and called to a passer-by for help. The passer-by called police.

The two men jumped out of the cab and fled.

Bajwa was taken to Victoria General Hospital and released after a check.

DOG DAYS IN PARIS

PARIS (UPI) — The dogs of Paris won a limited victory Friday when Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac decreed that they would have their own special toilet space on every street.

The victrory was not complete, however, since Chirac's dog plan is a far cry from an expensive 1975 project to set up flower-decorated private flush toilets for the four-footed. That idea never got off the ground.

From now on, Paris dogs will have at their disposal an area of 6 feet by 6 in the gutter of every block. The strategic spot will be indicated by a big white cross on the pavement and by an arrow and a dog figure printed on the sidewalk at the appropriate place. It will be off-limits to parked cars.

In an earlier plan, Paris officials, anxious to encourage dog owners to curb their pets, offered cleanliness medals to all dogs who were reported as law-biding to the chief of police.

The idea never really caught on and only 100 dogs a year out of the thousands that roam the Paris streets in increasing numbers were ever awarded the medal.

The new dog places have received no official name as yet. They are currently being tested in the 6th district of Paris.

What remains to be seen is how the old dogs of Paris will learn this new trick and how the people who live in houses in front of the dog spaces will react.

NEWS BRIEFS

Avalanche Kills 23

BERLIN (UPI) — An avalanche in Romania this week killed 23 persons, including 19 children, the East German news agency ADN reported today.

Postal Complaint

VANCOUVER (CP) — Postal workers protesting against technological change and handling of current talks between their union and the government refused to meet Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais Friday.

Rail Pass Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian National Railway announced Friday it will follow the practice of European railways in offering 30-day rail passes on inter-city trains.

Caracas Gets Games

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (Reuter) — The 1983 Pan-American games were awarded today to Caracas, Venezuela, said a spokesman for a competing group from Hamilton, Ont.

Quebec Gets $300M

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says Quebec has negotiated a loan of $300 million Eurodollars (U.S.) on European money markets in one of the provincial government's largest borrowing operations since last November's election which brought the Parti Quebecois to power.

Oil Exports Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Authorized exports of heavy crude oil will be increased to 122,000 barrels a day in May from the April level of 101,000 barrels, the National Energy Board announced Friday.

CanCel Plans Mill

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. plans to build a $7.7 million smallwood sawmill at Castlegar, company president Ron Gross told the company's annual meeting Friday.

Gross said the mill should create 50 jobs in the West Kootenay region.

He said the new mill is included in $75 million in capital expenditures the company plans for this year, more than the total capital expended by CanCel during the last four years.

Gross said a substantial part of the company's expenditure program is centred around Prince Rupert,

$780M Drained By Ottawa

VANCOUVER (CP) — Economic Development Minister Don Phillips says Confederation will cost British Columbia $780 million this year and "it's still growing."

Phillips said the cost of membership to B.C. was derived from a study by his ministry.

"During the last several years, federal revenues have been 25 to 30 per cent higher than federal spending and has resulted in a direct loss to the British Columbia economy which has averaged $500 million a year since 1971," Phillips told a meting of the Canadian Association of Equipment Distributors.

"When that sort of money is going out of the province, we lose tremendous economic opportunities.

"I don't think anyone objects to the concept that in a vast country such as Canada, the rich provinces should help the provinces not so fortunate. But there has to be reason and there has to be constant adjustment, or the rich provinces will no longer be rich."

The minister suggested that B.C. was being stuck by the federal government with more than it could afford to pay.

Three-Way Talks 'Positive' On Phase-Out of Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Government, labor and big business —— traditional antagonists cautiously entered a new cooperative relationship Friday.

Following a top-level economic meeting between the three groups, Prime Minster Trudeau said initial talks were "extremely positive."

The government found "a great deal of assistance and help" from labor and business leaders in drafting a discussion paper on methods for ending the federal wage and price controls program, Trudeau said.

Labor and big business are opposed to the controls program, but the government is reluctant to lift it early unless there are guarantees there will be no fresh outburst of inflation.

Joe Morris, president of the 2.3-million-member Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), said Friday's meeting was "a good start" towards continued three-way consultations on major economic problems facing the country.

A sub-committee was established to decide on the form future talks should take. In the meantime, top labor and business leaders are to meet Tuesday to discuss common economic concerns.

Ian Barclay, director of British Columbia Forest Products Ltd., said business and labor representatives at Friday's meeting were concerned particularly about the lack of investment in the country and high unemployment.

Barclay said in an interview that if the major economic decision-makers could not reach a decision on an end to the federal controls program, the country would remain in an economic mess.

Without agreement on an end to controls, high inflation, unemployment and a slack economy-operating well below its potential — would continue, Barclay said.

"In the long run, this could tear the country apart if it is not corrected."

The government's discussion paper outlining options for getting out of the anti-inflation program is to be released about the middle of May.

Waterland May Cancel Spraying

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Friday the provincial government's program to spray a section of the Fraser Canyon with pesticides to halt infestation of the western spruce budworm may be cancelled.

In an interview after addressing a meeting of the Cariboo Lumber Manufacturers' Association, the minister said he would listen to both sides of the controversial issue.

The government plans to spray pesticides orthene and seven-4-oil over 10,000 acres of forest infested with the budworm, but Waterland said the government "is certainly not inflexible" and the spraying may not go ahead.

Jobless Soars to 30% for Metis

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The unemployed rate among Metis and non-status Indians in rural communities runs as high as 30 per cent, a pilot survey by the federal manpower department has found.

Preliminary figures tabulated for the survey, not yet officially released, show the 30 per cent rate was hit in northern British Columbia. The Lower Mainland of the province is not far behind. It had a rate of 26.3 per cent.

The survey was conducted by the manpower department in 1975 and 1976 after urging and pressure from the Native Council of Canada (NCC), which speaks for the country's 750,000 Metis and non-status Indians.

Fred Jobin, secretary-treasurer of the NCC, said the council has been concerned that Metis unemployment problems were being overlooked by federal officials.

He said the bureaucrats have ignored the problem because the government had no figures to give it a lead on the gravity of the situation and would not look at information compiled by the NCC.

Some indication of this situation came to light when the first allocations for the $250 million Canada Works emergency job creation program were announced.

Manpower Minister Bud Cullen set aside over $9 million for job creation projects on Indian reserves, while ignoring the specific needs of Metis communities, which do not fare well when competing with rural white communities for government funds, Jobin said. The unemployed situation for both reserve Indians and Metis is horrendous but reserve Indians number only 250,000 compared to the 750,000 Metis.

The Native Council is hopeful that Ottawa will come up with at least $11 million for Metis job creation this year in rural communities.

Jobin said Cullen has agreed to designate money for Metis communities, but no specific amount has been announced.

A request by the NCC to be involved in working out the formula that will decide the Metis allocation was ignored by the manpower official in charge, Jobin said.

The pilot survey suggests that if all Metis eligible, including married women, were in the labor force the unemployed rate in most regions of Canada would run between 40 and 50 per cent.

Many older workers and new entrants, the survey noted, are so discouraged they have given up looking for work.

Alberta had the lowest Metis unemployed rate of all regions surveyed. It was 11 per cent. In neighboring Saskatchewan the unemployed rate climbed to 21.2 per cent and in Manitoba it was 15.4 per cent.

Shoot-on-Sight Orders In Pakistani Violence

Times News Services

ISLAMABAD — The army, under orders to shoot curfew violators on sight, enforced martial law in three of Pakistan's largest cities today after one of the bloodiest days in the six weeks of political violence.

Martial law and round-the-clock curfews were enforced in Karachi and Kyderabad in the south and Lahore in the north, and a curfew was in effect in the northern city of Lyallpur.

The curfew, keeping residents indoors most of the day, was relaxed for two or three hours in all four cities today to allow people to buy food.

As many as 34 persons were killed Friday in clashes between security forces and demonstrators demanding the ouster of Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

The worst violence occurred in Karachi, Pakistan's largest city with 3.5 million inhabitants. Protesters there, taking advantage of a break in the curfew, marched toward a city bridge and were ordered to disperse by army troops. When they continued their march, the soldiers opened fire.

Unofficial reports said 22 persons were killed and 200 wounded. The government said five persons were killed and 13 injured.

The anti-government forces, organized by the opposition Pakistan National Alliance (PNA), have waged an escalating campaign against Bhutto since the March 7 national elections. The PNA contends the elections were rigged to give Bhutto's Pakistan People's party (PPP) two-thirds of the National Assembly seats.

A general strike called by the PNA was being observed in many cities and protest marches were staged in Karachi, Sargodha, Lyallpur, Multan, Peshawar, Bannu, Nawabshah, Sukkurjn Imirpur, Rawalpindi, Quewtta and Dera Ghazi Khan. In areas under martial law, some protesters shouted anti-Bhutto slogans from rooftops.

Two major international airlines suspended flights to Karachi because of the violence. Air France said it would review the situation Monday and Japan Air Lines said it was refusing to make any bookings for Karachi until further notice.

The military administrator in Lahore said anyone caught urging government employees or utility workers to strike could face the death penalty.

In the national capital, Islamabad, the beleaguered prime minister met with PPP members of Parliament to explain his plans and his reasons for imposing martial law. Reports from the capital indicated that Bhutto won the legislators' support.

Observers interpreted this as a hardening of the prime minister's stance against spreading popular opposition to his rule.

Size Replaces Weight On Airline Luggage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Starting June 1, international airline passengers will be charged for excess luggage according to the size — not the weight — of their bags.

The Civil Aeronautics Board approved the new formula and explained that first class passengers will be allowed two pieces of luggage free, each of them no larger than 62 inches (the sum of height, width and depth).

Economy class passengers will also be allowed two bags free, but their combined dimensions added together may not exceed 102 inches, and no one piece may be larger than 62 inches total.

Carry-on luggage for both classes may not be larger than 45 inches over-all.

The change applies to member nations of the International Air Transport Association. Nine countries — the United Kingdom, Spain, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Iran, Yugoslavia, Nigeria, the Philippines and Pakistan — are not members and travel to those countries will still be by baggage weight.

The new formula will be tried for six months to test consumer reaction, the CAB said.

Three Plays In Festival

A gala performance of the 37th annual Greater Victoria Drama Festival will be held tonight at Oak Bay junior secondary at 8 p.m.

Three plays will be presented and include Beautiful Noise by students of McKenzie Avenue elementary school, Little x, Big Y by Lansdowne junior secondary and The Devil and Daniel Webster by Esquimalt senior secondary.

the weather

A warm southerly flow pushed the mercury to record breaking values at several communities on Friday. The mild trend is expected to continue over the weekend. Considerable sunshine is in store for the Interior while skies along the outer coast will be generally cloudy. A series of moist impulses lying off the American coast will press northward today and Sunday. Showers can be expected along the outer coast from time to time as each impulse passes.

Bennett's Ferry Cuts 'Too Vague'

NDP ferries critic Don Lockstead said Friday Premier Bill Bennett's announcement about ferry fare cuts is too "vague".

"It (the government) refused to act quickly and forcefully enough to cure the situation. Vague suggestions of relief are not good enough," he said.

Bennett said earlier in the day fares will be reduced, possibly within three weeks, but would not say by how much or on which routes.

Lockstead suggested a blanket rate cut of 50 per cent for passengers and 25 per cent for vehicles on all routes.

"The need for that decision was demonstrated months ago," he said.

"We need immediate and definite action on a crash basis ... if the coastal region's economy is to be revived before it is too late,' 'he said.

Lockstead also suggested that a ferry such as the Queen of Surrey be put into interim service on the mid and north coast regions and that the government start developing a permanent service for those communities by calling public meetings to see what residents want.

No Beads, Trinkets —Natives

VANCOUVER (CP) — The newly formed British Columbia Coalition of Native Indians says it intends to co-ordinate the efforts of various groups documenting claims against land which was never surrendered to civil authority.

Bill Wilson, president of the United Native Nations, said about 50 per cent of the status Indians in B.C. are represented by the coalition in addition to non-status Indians — the total being about 90,000 people. He said the figure represents about one-third of the Indian bands in the province.

Wilson said the coalition would begin the job of collating Indian land claims without federal funding, but would "expect a reasonable amount of funding" later on.

A news release from the coalition said that within a year the extent of Indian claims should be established, but settlement of the entire issue of aboriginal rights could not be expected within that time.

The statement warned B.C. Indians won't accept a "beads-and-trinkets" settlement.

It said the federal government wants to impose a settlement similar to that made with James Bay area Indians, where a monetary value was placed on land required for the vast Quebec Hydro project.

the coalition statement said indians should stop arguing among themselves and get down to the details of their land claims.

The formation of the coalition has raised the ire of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs (UBCIC).

Chief Philip Paul, a member of the union's executive committee, said the coalition was an attempt to destroy the union.

Paul said the coalition's leaders were the same people who have employed obstruction tactics at union conferences over the past three years. He urged leaders of all Indian bands to attend the union's annual meeting next week at Prince George.

Coalition spokesmen said they were not out to destroy the union, but added the union has lost its strength through internal power struggles and no longer speaks for a majority of Indian bands in the province.

JOBLESS TARGET IN MAN. BUDGET

WINNIPEG (CP) — Unemployment was the main concern expressed by Finance Minister Saul Miller when he brought down Manitoba's $1.158-billion budget Friday but the public will have to wait at least 10 days to learn how he plans to fight it.

Miller avoided raising taxes and allowed several small decreases.

The budget deficit was a $8.6 million — than than one-tenth of one per cent of the spending estimates — even though Miller criticized the federal government for reducing Manitoba's revenues under cost-sharing agreements.

Details of what Miller described as "a fairly massive program to fight unemployment" remain to be announced. The program, if large enough, could increase the deficit, depending on how it is financed.

Opposition leaders expressed disappointment in the budget and said they would have no qualms about fighting an election on the budget proposals.

The government is completing the fourth year of its second term and is expected to call an election this year.

Finning's SOS is as revealing as a blood test

Just as a blood sample reveals the health of a patient, so does an oil sample reveal the health of your Caterpillar equipment.
Finning's Scheduled Oil Sampling (S.O.S.) analyzes oil from various compartments of your machine and measures metals content.
Excessive amounts of specific metal particles indicate trouble that can be diagnosed and cured before premature failure or breakdown.
Just as a blood sample can save your health, so can an oil sample save you thousands of dollars in repair bills and lost production.
The cost of S.O.S. is small and, like most preventive measures, is most effective when done on a regular basis.

Smallpox Wiped Out In India

NEW DELHI (AP) — The World Health Organization (WHO) said today smallpox has been eradicated in India.

Dr. D. A. Henderson, director of WHO's smallpox-eradication program, said no known cases of the disease have appeared in this nation of 620 million persons since May 25, 1975.

Dr. Henderson said it is a "public-health miracle" and should be "a lesson to all people" that diseases can be controlled, if not eradicated.

"In many parts of the world there was real skepticism that a country this large and this complex could eradicate smallpox," Dr. Henderson told a news conference.

WHO officials say 48 cases in Somalia are the only known cases in the world. Officials hope that when these are gone, smallpox will be permanently eradicated.

The announcement, which followed a two-year surveillance program since the last victim was discovered, came after a three-week investigation by an international commission of 16 public-health experts.

Dr. Henderson said he is "100-per-cent certain" smallpox has been eradicated in India, and said he hopes the entire Asian subcontinent will be free of smallpox by the end of the year.

The commission probably will turn next to Bangladesh, where the last case of smallpox was reported in October 1975, Henderson said.

Five at Penthouse Face Sentencing

VANCOUVER (CP) — After 61 days of trial in county court, Judge William Trainor said Friday he has found five of the operators of the Penthouse Cabaret and its company, Celebrity Enterprises Ltd., guilty of conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution.

Joseph Philliponi, Ross Filippone, Jan Sedlak, Minerva Kelly and Rose Filippone were remanded until Thursday for sentencing. Sedlak was the only one of the five remanded in custody.

Domenick Filippone was found not guilty.

Judge Trainor dismissed the second charge of conspiring to corrupt public morals as a charge not known to Canadian law. His decision was contained in a 79-page written judgment.

The investigation, which lasted from May to December of 1975, involved undercover police, both men and women, entering the Penthouse nightclub with concealed tape recorders to gather evidence.

Judge Trainor said the conspiracy charged and proved was an agreement to obtain financial gain by exercising control and direction over the movement of prostitutes who used the downtown nightclub for the purpose of soliciting their customers. He said this aided the prostitutes in engaging in their trade.

The judge, in convicting the company, said the mind and will of Celebrity Enterprises was represented by Philliponi and Ross Filippone, two of its directors who controlled what it did, and that their state of mind was the state of mind of the company.

(Joe was born in Italy and his entrance papers to Canada spelled his name Philliponi. His brothers were born here and their birth certificates registered the name as Filippone.)

The judge said he accepted the evidence given by one of the prostitutes that she was instructed to make further admission payments and pay $2 each to the cashier and the doorman before re-entering after engaging in business with a customer. The witness identified the doorman she made payments to as Sedlak.

Judge Trainor said he was sure nothing was published about the payments and very little was said "but it became well-known by the staff and prostitutes what was expected and acceptable.

"The immediate and specific rewards went to Eleanor Harrigan (an unidicted co-conspirator), Sedlak and Rose or Kelly.

"Celebrity Entrerprises Ltd. and its directors, principally Joe and Ross, benefitted from the efforts of the key personnel who assured a smooth-running and efficient operation that proved attractive to many patrons," said the judgment.

Turning to the issue of credit-card use, the judge said that on separate occasions two undercover police officers had met prostitutes at the Penthouse, negotiated with them about an act of sex for money, and then claimed they had insufficient cash.

"On each of those occasions the prostitutes suggested that funds could be obtained from the management. Each of the two officers went to both Joe and Ross and obtained cash on credit card.

"Each time they were told there was a 20-per-cent surcharge which was added on . . ."

Law Took Gifts —Club Owner

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Philliponi, owner of the Penthouse Cabaret, admitted in county court Friday that he has given gifts of liquor to police officers, court officials and liquor board inspectors.

Philliponi, charged with attempting to bribe Pia Tofini, a liquor board official, into helping him get his liquor licence back in 1976, also said he wished he had a dollar for every free drink he had given policemen in the night club.

Also charged with attempted bribery are Philliponi's brother, Ross Filippone and sister, Florence Pawlik.

Philliponi also told judge John Spencer that he has records of giving gifts to at least two vice squad officers.

"If you buck them (the police) they'll arrest you . . . If you say 'yes, sir, thank you,' they'll let you go," he said. "I had to deal with these people. I had to have good public relations . . . they can cut your throat."

Philliponi said he regularly gave Christmas gifts of liquor and candy to liquor board inspectors until a 1973 government directive forbade the inspectors to receive handouts.

He said he did not want to bribe them.

Philliponi admitted that he tried to send the inspectors gifts after the 1973 special directive but said he thought maybe the rules had changed.

Philliponi also agreed that he had given Christmas gifts of liquor and grocery certificates to a clerk of the small claims court, even though he had 172 claims heard by the court between 1970 and 1975. He said he gave similar presents to a senior clerk as well as members of the sheriff's department.

The trial was adjourned Friday to May 2.

No Local Prosecutors

The provincial government won't house local prosecutors in the Law Courts building, Cecil Branson, president of the Victoria Bar Association, said Friday.

He said the association was informed earlier this week the new fifth floor of the building will be used by the court services branch of the attorney-general plus rooms for quasi-judicial proceedings such as arbitrations.

The association, in a public statement March 11, said word had "leaked out from the higher echelons of the ministry of the attorney-general" that a decision had been made to move the regional Crown counsel and all local prosecutors into new offices in the Law Courts.

The association had protested "the government's lack of concern over the principle of the independence of the judiciary from the executive arm of government."

Boosts 'Too Little, Too Late'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rosemary Brown, New Democratic Party human resources critic, Friday described as extremely disappointing the latest increases in welfare payments to senior citizens and single persons announced Thursday by Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

Brown, member for Vancouver-Burrard, said the increases were "too little, too late."

She said the rate changes were callous after the government boasted of a $100 million surplus.

Brown noted that the last increase was in June of 1974, and said the announced increases did not marginally cover the rising cost of food and utilities.

She called on the government to increase social assistance levels to $230 a month for single people and $340 for couples.

Brown also said the timing of the rental subsidies for singles suggests that the government may be intending to eliminate rent controls this summer.

Bruce Eriksen, vice-president of the Downtown Eastside Residents Association of Vancouver, in whose area many welfare recipients live, said the announcement was "a grotesque joke perpetrated on the needy so the government can reduce required income from big resource companies and millionaires."

He said the $15-a-month basic allowance increase for singles and couples, plus special rental allowances of up to $40 a month for singles and $50 a month for couples, means that in the downtown eastside where there is no rent control on residential hotels, rents will immediately start going up.

Grace Long, of the Federated Anti-Poverty groups, said that everyone on social assistance is still well below the poverty line.

She said the government has done nothing to remove the discrimination against families for the first four months they are on welfare.

Families which go on welfare now get $50 a month less than full rates until they have been on welfare four months. When the increases come into effect June 1, that gap will be cut to $35. Vander Zalm has said the gap was designed as an incentive for people to get off welfare.

Lowther Found Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court jury deliberated for two hours before finding Roy Lowther guilty of murder in the hammer slaying of his wife, poet Pat Lowther.

Mr. Justice J. G. Gould ordered Lowther to serve at least 10 years of a life sentence.

Lowther was accused of murdering his wife about Sept., 1975, in the bedroom of their East Vancouver home. Her naked body was found Oct. 13, 1975, in Furry Creek on Howe Sound.

The Crown alleged that Lowther, himself a poet, was jealous over the wife's success as a poet, was angered because she was having an affair with another poet in Windsor, Ont., and was afraid that she was about to leave him.

Lowther denied in court that he was the killer but admitted he had disposed of the body after finding it in their bedroom.

Politics Before Economics

A testy Premier Bennett won't be heartened by news that the prestigious Economic Council of Canada views British Columbia's economic problems from the opposition's point of view. In a 250-page report on regional economic disparities the ECC notes that the provincial government could do much to solve unemployment problems by lowering taxes. Provincial tax reductions would raise income and thereby stimulate spending, raising local labor demands. Such a cut would be self-financing in the ECC's view, because the government would recover the tax loss through increased revenues from a stimulated economy.

Perhaps even more interesting the ECC says, British Columbia's high average wages provide net buying power below the Canadian average, because of higher prices here. When provincial family incomes are adjusted to the cost of living B.C. ties with Manitoba in fourth place on the basic real income, according to the report.

The 1975 annual report of the provincial department of labor notes that provincial workers have seen their real wages rise by 9.1 per cent since 1971, less than two per cent each year. While this is significantly higher than the Canadian average increase of 6.6 per cent since 1971, it would appear the average provincial worker is not the greedy lout portrayed by some employers in this province.

None of these figures will provide Labor Minister Allan Williams with much joy as 300,000 British Columbians head to the bargaining table this year. And of course it will raise the old argument of what comes first, the chicken or the egg? Are the prices a reflection of the wage demands or vice versa? Nor will it even be partially solved by a legislative inquiry into the food industry which is heavily weighted in favor of the producer. No matter the government, B.C. seems to be a jurisdiction where politics always comes before economics.

The government of W. A. C. Bennett castigated labor and gave sweet deals to every primary producer in the province, including some questionable forest lease renewals, revealed in the Pearse forest report. When the NDP came in it allowed huge wage increases in the public sector, the effects of which are still hurting the private sector. Some of these increases were only fair after the parsimonious years of the elder Bennett's regime. But a few, such as the B.C. ferry strike settlement by Bob Strachan, were ridiculous. Again the economics of B.C. were predicated on politics. Luckily for the new Bennett regime the federal Anti-Inflation Board was in place to take off the heat. Yet the current administration went ahead and heaped personal and corporate taxes on an economy still suffering under an international recession, a policy that has resulted in high unemployment and a reinforced tax depression.

From this brief encapsulation it would appear B.C.'s resource-based economy has been a victim of extreme political ideologies for the past 25 years. Even if the current administration was to govern with an even hand between industry and labor, neither sector would be happy for years. Now the luxurious days of cowboy capitalism and militant unionism are gone forever. Neither of the protagonists in British Columbia's drama seem to realize it, though. Industry screams about low productivity and poor markets, while the province's largest trade union want's a 30 per cent increase this year.

If the average B.C. worker is not as well off as his employer would like to make out — and that seems to be the case judging from the ECC's report — he is going to get the short end of the stick. AIB rules and the international markets for B.C. forest and mining products guarantee this in the short term. Rather than waving supporting documents at the bargaining table it would be refreshing to see industry and labor use documents such as the ECC study as a basis for a larger agreement on the province's economic future. History shows that successive B.C. governments only exacerbate endemic provincial economic problems with short-sighted, one-sided political policies. If industry and labor could grow up, maybe it would have a salutary effect on the province's immature politicans.

Five Year Plan

The British Columbia government's sometime crusade to improve the labor-management climate is on again, but the latest brain wave from our Social Credit leaders is not causing many ripples, except ones of laughter.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, who was last heard from on the topic with dire warnings about companies fleeing across the border because of intolerable conditions in this province, now is proposing a rather radical solution to B.C.'s industrial instability.

He says five-year no strike, no lockout contracts would provide the climate for foreign buyers of B.C. products to feel that it is safe and secure to enter into long term contracts.

Phillips' idea was laughed out of the annual meeting of the Council of Forest Industries, the industry lobby group representing the big forest companies in B.C.

"It has been stated publicly . . . that my suggestion is proof that I am nuts. I won't fight that. Maybe to dream of a five-year period when we all produce without strikes, shutdowns or lockouts is a little crazy. But what would be sane? What period of time should we look at?" said the minister on Wednesday at a seminar in Vancouver.

The timber barons laugh at the idea. The reaction of such as the IWA's Jack Munro is too fearsome for words. But the minister persists. We agree that in an ideal world — call it dreamland — we would all be happy and satisfied to work for five years without striking.

But it cannot be considered in any such isolated form. Forest companies and unions have to live in the world of 1977, where no pulp buyer would agree to a firm five-year purchase contract, nor would a banker give a logger a fixed-interest mortgage for more than a two- or three-year term.

If Phillips could persuade treasury board not to increase taxes for five years, say, or get Transport Minister Jack Davis to agree to a five-year contract during which ferry rates would not be suddenly doubled, his idea might be more seriously received. But as long as he puts it forward in splendid isolation, ignoring a dozen other factors of uncertainty which make life for employers and workers unpredictable from month to month, let alone five years ahead, then he should consider it fortunate there are still one and two-year wage agreements being signed.

Joe Clark and Friends Rebuff Dr. Scott Wallace

If there is trouble at the Tory centre today, things are not that good on the periphery either.

Provincial Conservative Leader Dr. Scott Wallace is still gritting his teeth over a party proposal to sell only federal Tory memberships. That would conveniently wink at federal Conservatives who supported provincial Socreds, for example. Following the last provincial election, in which many Tories actively campaigned for Bill Bennett or blocked Conservative nominations in some ridings, Wallace acted to ensure that no politically schizophrenic Tories could occupy provincial party positions.

Then, out of the blue, so to speak, comes a letter from national Tory committee chairman Harvie Andre proposing the new membership policy and making an implicit reference to Wallace's peculiar situation.

"There will likely be some people in B.C. and elsewhere who will choose to interpret the issuance of a federal membership card as in some way attempting to sever relationships with our provincial associations. You can be sure that is not our intention . . .," wrote Andre.

Whatever the intention, the good doctor from Oak Bay saw red, and wrote Joe Clark, apparently complaining about being presented with a fait accompli by head office.

"I have had his reply to my letter where he acknowledges that consultation could have been a little more effective, and that he'll discuss the matter with the B.C. MPs, and then with the directors of our board in the B.C. association," Wallace said. Nearly two months later the provincial Tory leader has heard nothing on the matter from Ottawa.

Almost from the day he became leader of the provincial party's remnants in November, 1973, Wallace has been plagued with internal rifts, lack of financing and disagreements with the Lower Mainland Tory establishment.

If election time desertions were a body blow to the provincial leader, then Joe Clark delivered a right uppercut when he failed to show for a promised appearance at the Tory annual convention last November.

"I'm just kind of cold-shouldered by Mr. Clark," Wallace says.

"He appears to have assumed that we will greatly increase the number of seats . . . even if he does little or nothing in B.C. I think he's wrong on that score."

Eyebrows were also raised last year when Peace River Tory MP Frank Oberle became provincial party president. Some observers thought that the federal MP might have been an advance scout for his good friend John Reynolds, the fractious Tory MP from Delta. While both men denied the rumors, it is interesting to note that Reynolds is now a Vancouver hotliner, a position that won't hide his light under any bushels.

Wallace denies the rumors too, but ceases to be surprised by any of the federal party moves. In fact he is still considering whether to even run again.

"I haven't crossed any bridges or cut any cords," he says, "but this kind of ongoing problem of forging a unified party doesn't encourage a person to go on . . . batting his head against a wall seven days a week, just about 12 months a year, and see so little return for his efforts."

He also feels that the federal party is so preoccupied with winning the next federal election it has no time for his problems. And any information passed on to Clark by party officials and federal MPs is likely to be slanted for the same reason.

"They feel they need the provincial Socreds to give them the kind of vote they want in the federal election, and anything they do that even hints at support of Scott Wallace . . . makes their job that more difficult."

Embittered, tired and broke, Wallace sees little hope for the provincial party unless there are some changes in attitudes.

". . . I think it should be publicly known that I get no support from the Progressive Conservative party in B.C., other than a few people in the party who choose to put money into what is known as the leadership fund . . . but the party in Vancouver and the board of officers provide me with no help whatsoever, nor does any help come from the federal wing of the party."

Almost as an afterthought he says the leadership fund is broke, "so it is just worth mentioning that if Mr. Reynolds has views about becoming the provincial leader, he'd better build up a nest egg before he thinks of taking the job because he'll get damn little financial help from our party."

One cannot help but make a parallel to the travails David Anderson suffered with the federal Liberals a few years ago. Power goes to power, and nice guys finish last. — G.R.O.

Psychedelic

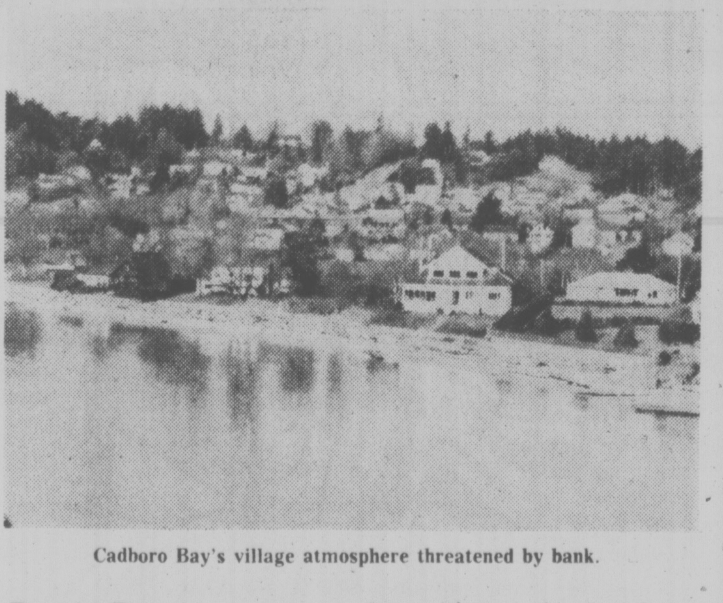
There do indeed seem to be movements afoot to remove the penalties for use of the milder psychedelics and about time, too. Millions of Canadians smoke marijuana but whether they are upper, middle, or lower class seems to me to be beside the point. They are Canadians and should be able to enjoy the benefits of living in a free society. Any person of good conscience should demand a complete hands off, no law, policy regarding the psychedelic substances.

The Times editorial's (Middle Class Marijuana, April 18) characterization of the repression of at least three million Canadian psychedelic religionists as an "esoteric unreal problem" shows very clearly how successful that repression has been. It seems almost impossible for the average 20th century agnostic to recognize the peace that passeth understanding, even when they cough on it.

It's easy to see that the writer of the Times' editorial is one of these middle class potheads and has never had his door "esoterically" kicked in and his person and property manhandled. It is a much "realer" and less esoteric problem for those who have. The psychedelic experience is the religious experience. The psychedelics are not drugs; they are sacraments. The laws concerning these substances and designating them as drugs (an understatement) or narcotics (an untruth) are a smokescreen for the real issue which is the right of the individual to freedom of religion.

There are no unbiased medical or police reports showing that marijuana is fatal or even dangerous or in fact harmful in any way. Stating that medical and police reports have shown such effects "time and time again" is a gross, thoroughly slimy piece of yellow journalism.

The reason that most people don't recognize a religious experience when they inhale one is that they have been conned into thinking that religion means organ music and transcendent gods. Well folks, religion is running loose in the streets (not to mention the armed forces) and eventually these millions of generally mild, upstanding potheads are going to demand the same freedom now enjoyed by the other religions in our supposedly free country. — H. H. Don Oake, O.T. Neo-American Church, 1029 Tolmie Street.



Cadboro Bay's village atmosphere threatened by bank.

Bank Development

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce wishes to have a larger bank in Cadboro Bay village.

In spite of being able to expand its present premises they have persuaded Saanich council to allow them to purchase and build on the corner of Penrhyn and Cadboro Bay Road. This is a site presently occupied by a livable and affordable house.

For various reasons, the most important being that many Cadboro Bay and Ten Mile Point residents were unaware of this planned development the attendance at the public hearing was small. However, it was pointed out to the Saanich council the tragedy of altering the rural atmosphere in Cadboro Bay, the expansion of the commercial area, the encroachment on an area which should always remain residential, the under-utilization of the existing commercial area in the village. None of these arguments were strong enough to sway Saanich council. They gave permission to the bank for its development.

I wonder if the Bank of Commerce is happy that their planned development will anger and depress many residents in the Cadboro Bay and Ten Mile Point area?— Mrs. J. W. Anderson, 2564 Maynard Street.

Marijuana

In reference to your editorial of April 18, Middle Class Marijuana:

It may seem logical to compare marijuana to alcohol and tobacco, but there are vast differences in the social effects of the three. The abuse of tobacco results primarily in personal suffering. The abuse of alcohol results in personal and public suffering. A person who "abused" marijuana would probably fall asleep. Obviously this would be dangerous if the person smoking was driving a car but few people could or would smoke that much marijuana. I have never seen any published references to this happening. I for one do not see marijuana as "a harmless pleasure, analagous to three martinis on a Friday night." It is a harmless pleasure, period. One which is a great deal less harmful that the three martinis you refer to.

You say that "both can be fatal as medical statistics and police reports have shown time and time again." I question the truth of that. I have done a fair amount of study of the medical findings on marijuana and they very emphatically do not show that marijuana can be fatal. I refer you to an article published in Psychology Today last December called The War Over Marijuana which is a lucid and detailed summary of the major findings on marijuana. The author, Norman E. Zinberg, a professor of psychiatry at Harvard medical school and consultant to numerous drug progams and research projects, including the U.S. Drug Abuse Council, says in his introduction: "Not one of the findings that demonstrates marijuana's potential for harm has been consistently replicated by other research or could be regarded as proved. Few of the oldest, most publicized findings (those concerned with the areas of brain damage, lack of motivation, psychosis, and the steppingstone-to-heroin theory) are now supported by any member of the scientific community, regardless of where he stands on marijuana."

An example of the type of "medical statistics" which have misled the public was a report in 1971 by A.M.G. Campbell and his associates which appeared in the British medical journal Lancet. This study of 10 heavy marijuana smokers found that the smokers showed "evidence of cerebral atrophy", brain damage. What Campbell did not say however was that of his ten heavy marijuana smokers found that the smokers showed "evidence of cerebral atrophy", brain damage. What Campbell did not say however was that of his ten subjects, all ten had also used LSD, "eight had used amphetamines, four had suffered significant head injuries and a number had used sedatives, barbituates, heroin or morphine. All had used alcohol, a drug for which there is proof of eventual brain damage." One could hardly call Campell's study a reliable, controlled, scientific experiment, but his findings got wide publicity in the media.

I feel the public should be made aware of the fact that medical statistics have also shown time and time again that marijuana is not fatal. Anyone who is interested in obtaining a copy of the complete Psychology Today article, or a booklet outlining the findings of the Drug Abuse Council on marijuana, can phone me at 382-7796 or could write NORML Canada, 111 East Broadway, Vancouver, V5T 1W1.—Carol A. Canadian Unity

If we truly wish unity in our country we must stop thinking of each other as French, English, etc. But as Canadians. Sure we have two main languages but they are interwoven with other languages.

If we think of each other as one people, Canadians, we will have unity. Without it, Confederation will fail. Neither Canada nor an independent Quebec could survive without the other. — Steve Strugnell, 1269 Oscar Street.

Express Goodwill

We are disturbed by discussions of the possible break-up of our country, Canada. How can we express our goodwill to our French-speaking fellow Canadians?

Families quarrel but with love and willing hearts the quarrel are resolved, because the family is important. So it is with our country with its beauty, freedom and diversity. With one of its members gone Canada is incomplete. It was a French Canadian, born in Quebec, who composed O Canada.

Are you searching for a way to express your friendship towards the people in Quebec? Please write a note or postcard expressing your feelings about this important matter, in French or English, to: — Citizens of Quebec, c/o Council of Canadian Union, 1470 Peel Street, Suite 925, Montreal H3A 1T1

Degrading

Why is it, in a country whose government is incapable of providing employment for its youth, that the very people who suffer most, the young and unemployed, are forced to endure one form of degradation or another from every level of government.

No amount of discouraging form-filling, degrading bargain basement-style job-hunting, or smug and insulting politicians, though, can compare to the humiliation of my encounter with Victoria's police last Friday.

Early in the afternoon of that day, for no reason other than my presence on a city street, I was stopped and asked for identification. I produced my driver's licence which was sufficient to prove I'd done nothing wrong in the past.

The officer, however, was not satisfied. He stood beside me on the sidewalk, as motorists and pedestrians passed with curious glances in my direction, and demanded that I turn out the contents of my jacket pocket. I protested and asked for a reason. There had been several break-ins in the area, he said, and I did have something "concealed" in my pocket.

The officer insisted, forcefully but without actual physical force, and I emptied my pocket, producing one by one my personal belongings to satisfy his own curiosity. It was embarrasing, debasing, and insulting and he felt and looked for himself when I had finished. I had nothing worse than a ballpoint pen.

For the very reason that he readily supplied it on request, I will not mention the officer's name. By doing so, I extend to him a courtesy far above anything granted to me, because I was persecuted for being young and unemployed, and because my hair was longer than his. — Ian Lawrence, 822 Anderson Avenue.

Carter Challenges American 'Concept of Plenty'

Really, it wasn't all that much: the president merely told us we can't have everything we want the minute we want it. Yet his staff called it the "sky-is-falling speech." Why all this excitement?

The fact is, Carter is challenging what appears to be a basic American tenet — the concept of Plenty.

You go into a cafeteria and ask for a paper napkin, and they give you six. You ask for a match with your cigarettes,and you get four matchbooks. Anywhere else in the world you would have to pay extra for matches.

When you visit friends for dinner, people embarrass you by heaping on more food than you can use. In thousands of American homes, food and supplies are stored in closets and freezers: some families could be snowed in for a year and not even run short of toothpicks.

It can be a compulsion. A Boston family I know keeps three giant freezers at its summer place, and the cellar looks like the back room of a Safeway store, with cartons of toilet paper and dinner napkins up to the ceiling. These are people who have three cars and several servants, who live less than a mile from the village store, and who probably could arrange deliveries if they wanted. So why do they have to play store?

I think it's a security thing. It's a tribal memory of the Depression, a poor boy's determination never to be hungry again. It goes back to the Pilgrims: after starving through a New England winter or two, the settlers wanted to celebrate their newfound control over their environment, their stores of grain, their hunting skills, their economic alliance with the Indians.

It is an American farm tradition to this day, a tradition which has outlived by generations the kind of farm life-style Norman Rockwell used to paint, with its table so crowded that dishes are piled upon dishes, stewed tomatoes atop pickled beets, turkey slabs buried under mashed yams.

By MICHAEL KERNAN
Washington Post

There is nothing like a full belly to make you feel secure.

Of course it's much bigger than America. Find a period of anxiety anywhere in history, and you will find people overeating to such a degree that gluttony becomes a social grace: Rome during the Fall; England in the Middle Ages; Germany after the Second World War. Throughout the 19th century, in the U.S. and elsewhere, fatness was a sign of prosperity. The man whose children had double chins was considered a success.

It is a tradition that has persisted among the earning classes—the already powerful and rich being above striving and almost universally svelte—in the face of warnings about cholesterol, heart attacks and that curious modern noun, overweight.

Clearly, we are dealing with a great force, strong enough to overcome even our survival instinct. What happens when it is frustrated?

What happens is that individuals begin to violate the social contract. People start hoarding. Remember all those gas tanks that were installed in backyards during the last gasoline shortage? Remember when Johnny Carson made a joke about being out of toilet paper, and within two days the nation's supermarkets were out of toilet paper?

In 1974 a British TV comic broke everybody up with his one-liner about a strike in the Siberian salt mines. By the end of the week you couldn't buy salt anywhere in England. All it takes is 50,000 prudent shoppers buying one extra pound of salt apiece. (Prudent and silly: since when does England buy salt from Siberia?)

But Americans go beyond hoarding. Still clinging as we do to our self-image as pioneers, we have trouble with queues. Drivers will line up to buy gas, but they won't like it. Tempers run short in a queue.

What it all comes down to is a kind of childishness, a sulky revenge against the world for mistreating us so. And once we can see that, it becomes perfectly natural to accept the president as father figure wagging a finger at us.

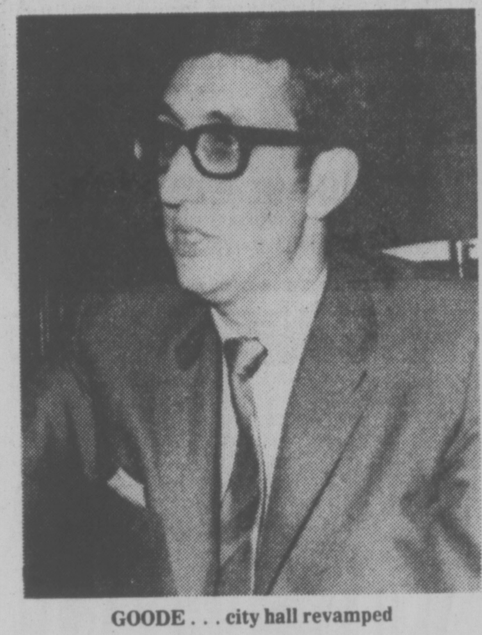
For all our democracy, for all our 18th century Age of Reason Constitution, America reverts under stress to a family. A big family, well over 200 million strong, but nevertheless a family.

President Carter called our situation "the moral equivalent of war." Because war, or the threat of it, is the one thing that can bring us together. Ask the British: dind't they invent the queue during the Second World War? So far from resenting it, they have developed a whole etiquette of queueing that we will doubtless learn.

In other words, he was encouraging us to think in terms of a national family threatened by, say, eviction. Or poverty.

'A Simple Man' Finds Answers

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun



GOODE . . . city hall revamped

Tom Goode, mayor of Delta, is cutting municipal taxes this year by rates varying from 10 to 18 per cent, an achievement roughly comparable with Moses turning back the Red Sea and just about as infrequent.

As one might expect, the multitudes are wondering how Mayor Goode achieved this and people who never asked before are saying, "Who is this guy?"

In appearance he is not an heroic figure. His manner is one of nervous friendliness and his voice is high and anxious. He has the eyes of a bewildered owl. More than six feet tall and loosely hinged at all the joints, it could fairly be said that you could turn out a more graceful man with a Meccano set.

'Must be Honest'

As he himself said when elected to Parliament for a term in 1968, "People look at me and say 'Anybody that looks that dumb MUST be honest.' "

In 1957 Tom Goode was teacher at a one-room school in the almost invisible Cariboo community of Horsefly, Ichabod Crane to the life. He left that job and became a common laborer on a house construction project. He had the notion he, too, could become a housing developer, but common labor was all he could do as a start.

All these remarks, true as they are, would be unkind or even cruel if it were not for the fact that Tom Goode went on to extraordinary success, private and public.

He did launch a land development and house building company. He sold stock in it to fellow shool teachers. Chalk Holdings, they named it. He has now many companies and has done much developing. His personal assets he estimates to be between three quarters of a million and a million dollars. "I would definitely have been a millionaire if it hadn't been for the four years in Ottawa."

Among people in Ottawa he would be remembered for, among other things, delivering a barn-burner of a House of Commons speech which was one of the first and lustiest attacks on the Benson tax reform budget. But he was only a backbencher then, the press gallery ignored his speech and probably scarcely any of his constituents even knew he made it.

Then he became mayor of Delta, elected in his first campaign and returned by acclamation in the next election. He was no longer a back bencher but the man up in front, able to put some of his ideas to practice.

Now when Mr. Goode speaks he is reported. In a rapid-growth municipality he has cut the tax rate while retaining a surplus budget. He has speeded the municipal decision-making process, established his own municipal party, reduced the bureaucracy and built services at a rapid rate.

How does Ichabod Crane explain all this?

A lot of it, he says, is small and simple things. There are, for instance, no more staff meetings at Delta municipal hall.

"They're not completely forbidden but for all practical purposes they are. If one official has something to say to another he walks to the man's office and talks to him, he does not hold a meeting.

"Staff meetings don't produce anything except decisions to hold more meetings."

Although reduced in size, the municipal staff has been given added responsibilities. "We expect our officials to make decisions and make them promptly, not refer every question to a committee or a committee chairman."

Procedures have been slimmed down at the hall, where he spends half of every week day.

"If a citizen doesn't get satisfaction at the front desk he can demand, immediately, to speak to a department head. If he doesn't get an answer there he can come direct to my office.

Delays Hurt

"Certainly, we make some bad decisions. But the worst problems in government are not the bad decisions which are made, they are the decisions so long delayed that by the time they do emerge more damage has been done and more costs piled up."

On the other hand, there is a policy line that the bureaucracy may not step across. At council and committee meetings officials are present only to give information when asked for it, not to participate in the discussion. "In too many municipal governments they do join in policy discussions."

Out of it all, says the mayor, has come a staff which he believes is well-paid and happy in their work. "They can get some satisfaction from their work because they have some responsibility."

Much municipal work is contracted out.

"All the garbage is collected by private contractors and each one owns his own truck. If there's trouble on a route we know who to blame. The individual truck owners make money, we save money and the public is well served.

"In social policies, governments must take the initiative but business is always best left to businessmen, particularly small and independent businessmen."

The mayor has his own team of councillors, whimsically known as the Goode Team.

"We have a rule there too. Nobody can be a candidate for our group unless he has put in one year attending council meetings as a spectator."

Cutting municipal taxes while incraasing services really isn't all that much of a trick, says Mayor Goode, who insists he is a very simple man of very simple thoughts.

'Hard to Watch Without Sadness'

By ELLEN GOODMAN
Boston Globe

MARGARET . . . pressures

She's like a girl let out of boarding school. There goes Margaret, the Rolling Stone photo-groupie. There she goes, describing her bottom to People magazine as "cute." There she goes, telling the world that she's turned on by wearing garters and never shows her nipples at state functions. It's all rather embarrassing, this business of having an identity crisis in public.

There are few of us whose 20s would stand up to public scrutiny much better than Margaret Trudeau's, few who would be able to bear re-reading the 10 most foolish things we did or said at 28.

But there is so much delayed adolescence bubbling over in Margaret Trudeau, so much of the "late-bloomer" in the former flower child, that it's rather hard to watch without sadness. It feels as if we've been there before. Another woman off to New York, giddily in search of herself. Another matter of bad timing. Another marriage on the brink of renaissance or disaster. It is in some ways a classic modern romance.

Eight years ago a girl of 20 met a prime minister of 49 on the island of Tahiti. They shared a passion for William Blake, the poet who once wrote "Love to faults is always Blind/Always is to joy inclin'd."

Two years later, the bachelor politican was ready to settle down, and the 22-year-old was ready to begin. And so they were married. They were supposed to live in the static country of Happily Ever After. By the time she was 26 and he was 55, they had three children, all under three years old. He was still prime minister and she was overshadowed, a premature First Lady.

In 1974 she was hospitalized for what they called mental stress. She called it a conflict. "I prepared myself for my marriage to Pierre Trudeau, but not for my marriage to the Prime Minister." The question she took to the hospital was "whether I should just be a mother and wife or whether I should reach out a bit and try to do something on a more professional level."

She chose to try for "more" and avoid the straitjacket.

It was almost predictable. Rather pat. You could explain it all in a sentence or two. Pierre Trudeau had married a time bomb. Margaret Trudeau should have found herself before she'd found herself with a husband and three children. Surely we should all be wise and reasonable with well-planned lives. But 20-20 hindsight isn't a very useful kind of vision.

Since 1974, the Trudeaus have tried, under great pressure, to manage the most difficult kind of change: change without loss. The years since are marked by her attempts to grow up without going away, and his attempts to support an independence that would stop short of divorce. It all happened in the public eye. Her tiniest rebellions — the T-shirt in Cuba, the singing in Mexico — made page one.

This "fling" may be an interlude, or a prelude to divorce, or a way of avoiding it. But for now, they're attempting what so many other more private couples are: to manage the crisis of bad timing, the problems of separate growing pains, the different needs of partners who want to stay married. As a love story of the 70s, it will do.

It's Happy Ending When They Leave

Recently, by a curious coincidence, a tiny, apparently motherless young Killdeer arrived at the Hosford domicile about the same time as I began reading Clifford Christie's book, And Then They Fly Away (Longman, $10.50).

The coincidence arose from the fact that I was expected to succour the hungry waif and that Christie's book was about his experiences doing just that, caring for injured or sick birds.

It is of little import that my ministrations — as they have so often in the past — proved to no avail. The bird died after a few hours and the difficult task of informing the lad who brought it to me fell to my wife; I wasn't up to it. Somehow I felt guilty; I failed not only the bird and the boy who had faith in me, but myself as well. As always, it had been an exhausting and emotionally draining experience. As always, I vowed not to try it again.

But in reading And Then They Fly Away I found there was nothing unique about my agonizing; Clifford Christie and his wife Joyce had experienced the same sensations often but they had some startling successes that more than offset their failures.

And Then They Fly Away is a simple, straight-forward account of the joys and frustrations, the successes and failures of an English couple trying to meet a responsibility they saw as theirs, in their little garden in Middle Cheney, near Banbury, Oxfordshire.

Their first guest was Beauty, a Redstart, and the first reaction of the Christies to their new acquisition was "What to do?" In describing the events surrounding the arrival of a parade of guests which followed Beauty, the Christies learned "What to do." Starting with almost no experience, and working through advice from friends, a local vet, and reference to any printed material on the subject they could find, the Christies gradually developed their knowledge and their success rate.

Ingenuity was their main tool. To provide food, for example, they collected ant eggs, caught flies, dug earthworms, raised mealworms, and enlisted the aid of a friend in catching minnows — this last to provide for Fishy, the Kingfisher.

All their birds received names, names that were chosen for several reasons. For example, the injured heron became Royston — after the gentleman who brought it; the swift became Squeak because of its call; Misty was a Mistle Thrush, for obvious reasons; and a starling became Fred after some imagined similarity in character with a human member of the community.

As more and more people became aware of the work of the Christies — and particularly of their successes — the parade of birds grew. There was Olly I and Olly II, Tawny Owls; there were, at one time or another, several Magpies; there was also a Lapwing, a Redpoll, two Greenfinches, a pair of young House Martins, and Barny the Barn Owl and Blackie the Blackbird.

The reactions of the birds on first encountering their benefactors ranged from stoic acceptance to violent and sometimes dangerous struggles. But, with patience, complete acceptance usually came in the end. Some became pets on recovery and visited the Christies often after they were released. Others, because of their specialized habitats and styles of life, were released and never seen again. But all that could be were released, thus the title And Then They Fly Away.

As is so often the case with people who accept the challenge of caring for sick or injured wild birds, the Christie home was given over to the birds with sometimes startling and amusing results; for example when an unexpected visitor discovered a Kestrel busily devouring its lunch of a road-killed Dunnock — on the dining room table.

In the never-ending search for natural foods to provide their guests, the Christies found themselves making discoveries like the place of garden snails in the diets of thrushes. After watching a mother Wood-Thrush teach her young to eat snails in his garden, Clifford Christie added these common garden residents to his growing list of the foods the birds ate in the wild and which would be useful in his ministrations.

It was little accomplishments such as this, and bigger accomplishments such as successfully raising a young Swift, that kept the Christies going. But it is the thrill of seeing a bright-eyed, healthy bird return successfully to the wild that makes acceptable their moments of doubt, guilt and agony at their occasional failures.

And Then They Fly Away rekindled my faith in the humanity of humans.

Small Business Stable: Marchand

NORTH BATTLEFORD (CP) — Canadians are realizing they do not have to be big in business to be good, says Len Marchand, federal minister responsible for small business.

Speaking at the annual Saskatchewan Chamber of Commerce convention, Marchand said what Canadians want out of life "is exemplified by the spirit of independent enterprise that underlies small business."

Marchand, MP for Kamloops-Cariboo, said that 98.6 per cent of all Canadian corporations are small or medium size businesses, and that small businesses account for one-half the corporate wages in Canada.

These small firms steady the market place, he said, by producing a wide variety of goods and services and by promoting competition.

To aiding the small business he said his department will be presenting a long-term policy paper to cabinet later this year on government approaches to small business.

Met

Metropolitan Stores of Canada Ltd. reports sharply reduced profits in the year ending Jan. 31, 1977, blamed mainly on inflation in operating costs.

Net earnings for the year were $4,075,766 compared with $5,455,859 in the previous year.

Based on 2,559,163 common shares outstanding, earnings per share declined to $1.50 from $2.03, including an extraordinary profit of $350,620 from sale of land and buildings.

Consolidated sales of Metropolitan, which is based in Winnipeg and wholly-owned by General Distributors of Canada Ltd., increased $25 million to $162.2 million.

Metropolitan owns and operates a total of 235 small department stores across Canada, under the names of Metropolitan, Greenberg and Saan.

Westcoast

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. reports net income of $9.8 million or 84 cents a share for the three months ended March 31, compared with $9.5 million or 82 cents a share for the same period in 1976.

E. C. Phillips, president and chief executive officer, said in a news release that total revenue of $177 million established a record high for the quarter and was an increase of 31 per cent over the same period last year.

Phillips said the British Columbia Petroleum Corp. and the Gas producers in the province received the largest benefit from the increased sales revenue because of Westcoast's cost-of-service contract.

Westcoast said cash generated from operations in the first quarter was $15.9 million or $1.46 a common share, compared with last year's figures of $15.6 million or $1.46 a common share.

Dockyard Rescues Blood Campaign

Blood donors at HMC Dockyard on Friday came on like the Philadelphia Flyers to push a week-long campaign in Greater Victoria over the top at the last moment.

The final clinic attracted 302 donors when the objective had been just 200, Red Cross spokesman Gerry Savage said today.

Five clinics this week produced a total of 1,249 donors. Goal for the week had been at least 1,154. Savage said the surplus helps cut a year-to-date shortage of donors to objective down to just 340.

Guilty Plea by Woman in Assault Case

A 25-year-old Victoria woman pleaded guilty in county court Friday to assault causing bodily harm against a man in the King's Hotel beer parlor Nov. 25.

Karen Lorraine Hunt, 2626 Dowler Place, will be sentenced May 24 by Judge E. J. C. Stewart after he receives a pre-sentence report from a probation officer.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said the man joined a table at which two men and two women, one of them the defendant, were sitting. There was an argument between the two women.

After the argument, the man said to the defendant "why don't you talk?" and are you drunk?"

She then shoved a beer glass into the man's face, then broke two glasses against each other and shoved the broken end of one into the back of the man's neck, Birkett said. Nineteen stitches were required for the two wounds.

He said the woman had a record involving convictions for common assault in 1969 and assault causing bodily harm in 1972.

Slow Civic Talks Recall Sims

Mediator Ed Sims has been recalled in the contract dispute between six Canadian Union of Public Employees locals and the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

Sims met briefly with both sides earlier in the negotiations but stepped out during discussion of non-cost items.

However, Bob Cunningham, spokesman for CUPE's joint negotiating committee, said today talks bogged down Thursday when agreement could not be reached even on the remaining non-cost items.

It was expected the non-cost items could be resolved quickly when both sides begin talks again Wednesday and negotiations could then move on to the wage demands.

Cunningham said wages were dealt with briefly Thursday but no progress was made.

He said the next meeting will be arranged by Sims.

Once the non-cost items are resolved there is still a battle shaping up over the wage demands.

The GVLRA remains adament in its offer of a six-percent wage increase and has refused to discuss the union proposal.

The six locals initially asked for a total package ranging from 10 per cent to 14.6, depending on the local, in a one-year agreement.

Canada, U.S., New Zealand in Naval Exercise

An international exercise involving about 2,000 servicemen from Canada, the United States and New Zealand starts at noon Monday.

Named Marcot, the exercise is being organized by the Canadian forces maritime warfare school in Halifax and is the first of its kind here since 1972.

American destroyers taking part will be the USS McKean, Hamner, Rogers and Orleck of the reserve destroyer squadron 37 of Seattle, as well as the Cook from San Diego.

The senior officer will be Commodore J. B Allen of Seattle.

The New Zealand frigate Otago will take part, as well as a detachment of P3 Orion aircraft from the New Zealand air force, operating out of CFB Comox.

Canadian ships in the exercise will be the Athabaskan and Ojibwa, the destroyer-helicopter and submarine here temporarily from the east coast; the supply ship Provider and the Second Canadian Destroyer Squadron — Terra Nova, Gatineau and Kootenay.

Capt. Michael Barrow will be the senior Canadian officer.

The Athabaskan will be open to the public this Sunday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. in the dockyard. This will be the last time during her visit on the West Coast.

Ottawa Studies Chain of Hostels

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Feasibility of a multi-million-dollar youth hostel construction project is under study by federal government officials.

And if their verdict is favorable, Secretary of State John Roberts could have a firm proposal to put before his fellow cabinet ministers by summer, an Ottawa official disclosed Friday.

What the officials are looking at is a private task force report handed a year ago to former Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner.

The report asked Faulkner for $12 million to build a chain of youth hostels across the country over a three-year period.

Financing of a new, national hostel association embracing the former Canadian Youth Hostel Association and independent summertime hostels, financed for the past seven summers by Secretary of State, was also recommended.

Next week in Calgary representatives of the Canadian Hostelling Association, the word "youth" was dropped recently, and 10 provincial groups representing the independents, meet to work out a merger that would put all 140 hostels under a new, Canada-wide structure.

The coming merger signals an end to a war between the straight hostel people, who worked under the former CYHA, and the independents who, beginning in 1970 started to operate summer "crash pads for young people wandering the country in search of a variety of experiences."

The independents were supported by bureaucrats in the Secretary of State department who dreamed of establishing an empire of federally-funded, youth-regulated hostels, providing free and easy accommodation.

The empire-building aspirations of the federal bureaucrats died with the disappearance over recent years of the "transient youth" phenomenon.

And relations between the sides have improved steadily. The task force report handed to Faulkner, for example, was developed by CYHA and the independent operators.

The Canadian Hostelling Association operates on an annual budget of some $1.25 million. It has 58 member hostels grouped in regional or provincial organizations.

The Secretary of State hostels number about 85. In 1976 financing for the summer-only program amounted to $835,000.

This year Ottawa is putting $739,000 into grants for summer hostels.

Dennis Lewis, executive director of the Canadian Hostelling Association, said in an interview that he believed the federal and provincial governments, so far, have not recognized the tourist dollars potential in youth touring.

He said government tourism officials are tied too closely to the traditional tourist industry. They tend to discount the amount of money young people will spend, and this is a mistaken attitude.

What governments forget, Lewis observed, is that a lot of tourist money is left behind in the country of origin becaused package deals.

Young people may not want to spend $40 a night for a hotel but they are prepared to spend plenty of cash in other ways, he said. And a youth tourist usually spends a lot longer in this country than the regular tourist does.

Travel information compiled by the CHA reflects the same kind of deficit that Canada's over-all tourist picture shows. Last year the gap hit a record sum. Foreigners spent about $2 billion here but Canadian spent $3.1 billion abroad, chiefly in the Unted States.

VETS' PENSION PUSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative and New Democratic Party MPs called on Veterans Affairs Minister Dan Macdonald Friday to continue his fight on behalf of veterans as the Commons gave final approval to legislation speeding review of pension decisions.

Conservative veterans critic Jack Marshall and NDP house leader Stanley Knowles said there are many shortcomings in pension benefits available to those who fought in the two world wars.

Marshall, who represents the Newfoundland riding of Humber-St. Georges-St. Barbe, said the pension system has to be flexible to clear up a backlog of cases.

Knowles repreated calls for pensions for the remaining 200 men who were prisoners-of-war in the First World War.

The legislation, which now needs senate approval and royal assent to become law, will upgrade the Pension Review Board which hears appeals from veterans on decisions on the pension requests by the Canadian Pension commission.

The bill will create a deputy chairman for the board to increase its ability to handle a backlog of 3,000 cases. The five board members will have their terms increased to 10 years from five years. The board also will be allowed to add two temporary members who can sit for up to a year.

Caribbean Join-Up Foiled

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons in effect rejected a private member's bill Friday that would have required a parliamentary committee to decide whether some sunny Caribbean islands should be joined to Canada.

The motion, proposed by Prince Edward Island Conservative Heath MacQuarrie (Hillsborough) never came to a vote in the hour set aside for debate on it. It is unlikely to be debated again in this session of Parliament.

Liberal Maurice Foster (Algoma) said if Turks and Caicos islands, with a combined population of 7,000 were joined to Canada, neighboring islands would clamor for the same new standard of living. Canada could not afford to meet the demand.

Turks and Caicos are two of 10 islands in the West Indies. Five of them are British associate states and five are Crown colonies.

"Ridiculous," Michael Forrestall (PC — Dartmouth-Halifax East) said of Foster's argument. "A rather selfish, very narrow point of view to take."

Forrestall emphasized that MacQuarrie's motion would merely require a committee of MPs and senators to decide whether Canada should have closer economic and political relations with islands in the West Indies.

If any island wanted to join Canada it should be allowed to do so, Forrestall said. It is a way "to recognize that we do have a debt to these people."

Agent System Remains For Selling Candus

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Friday that Canada probably will continue to use an agent mentioned in the Lockheed aircraft scandals to represent it in potential sale of a Candu reactor to Japan.

The minister said in the Commons negotiations are in progress with the agent, Marubeni-Iida, and an agreement probably will be concluded.

He told T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo-Cowichan and the Islands) that Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. would be at a serious competitive disadvantage if it did not use an agent.

Later, AECL said Japan will not be in a position to consider a Candu before 1981.

Douglas had asked whether AECL would cease using agents in view of trouble they had caused the agency in sales to Argentina and South Korea.

This was a reference to the Commons public accounts committee's investigations into unaccounted expenditures by agents used in those sales.

Marubeni has represented AECL in Japan since 1969. An agreement negotiated then now is being brought up to date.

The trading company, which has worldwide connections, represented Lochheed aircraft at a time when the American company is charged with making commission payments to high Japanese officials.

Douglas said large American reactor-producing companies do not use agents. Gillespie said AECL is not a multinational corporation and does not have a large sales department and, thus, needs an agent.

The question was raised a day after Gillespie announced that a safeguard agreement with Japan is about ready for signing. The agreement, designed to prevent use of Canadian nuclear material and technology for nuclear explosions, covers uranium sales and potential Candu sales.

'TROJAN HORSE' PQ MOVE HIT

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Montreal Board of Trade said Friday the language white paper is a "Trojan horse" effort by the Quebec government to establish linguistic separation from the rest of Canada as a first step toward political independence.

In a letter to Premier Rene Levesque and Cultural Affairs Minister Camille Laurin, Board president Bernard J. Finestone said proposed policy to make Quebec unilingually French would create an "enclosed, isolated . . . society."

He said the Parti Quebecois government was elected last Nov. 15 to govern "more efficiently and more effectively" than the previous Liberal administration and was not given a mandate to make Quebec independent.

"The party itself seemed to recognize that any deviation from this mandate could be achieved only by special reference to the people via a referendum," Finestone said.

"While it may be strategically astute to prepare moves towards a referendum and eventual separation, this was not the expressed wish of the electorate when the present government was placed in office.

"In the board's view, the white paper, in brief, is a 'Trojan horse' effort to establish a de facto linguistic separation as a preliminary to political separation."

The Board of Trade, which has 2,900 corporate members, said it welcomed efforts to promote the French language and culture both in Quebec and across Canada.

Canada World Role Urged

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Canada should play a bigger role in world affairs and could start by enlarging its military presence in Western Europe, Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark said today.

"On matters on which there can be no neutrality, Canada all too often gives the appearance of trying to be neutral — or what is worse, just not caring," Clark said at an international meeting of Rotarians.

"I believe the time has come again for Canada to take an active role in world affairs — for a more active pursuit of Canada's goals, and the goals it shares with its traditional allies."

Clark partly blamed Canadian disunity on the loss of the country's involvement in the solution of world problems.

Canada must be particularily cognizant of its role in preventing nuclear war, the opposition leader said.

One way to prevent the outbreak of war was for Canada to beef up its military presence in Western Europe.

"In manpower terms, Canada's deployment in Europe is less than half of what it was in the 1950s and early 1960s and much of the equipment in use dates back to those days."

Some Criminals Lose by Skin of Their Teeth

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The young Vancouver dentist flashed a dazzling closeup of President Jimmy Carter's mouth on his projection screen.

"I always say, 'You can lie through your teeth, but the teeth themselves never lie.'

"A lot of people have forgotten that and have swung for it."

Dr. Larry Cheevers was giving a slide talk to some colleagues, police and others interested in his specialty — forensic ordontology.

The humor underlined his point that to a properly trained person teeth can be as positive as fingerprints for identifying criminals, nameless bodies, victims of crime or accident.

Cheevers is one of two Canadians certified in forensic ordontology, a branch of legal medicine that has a much greater following in Europe than in North America.

His presentation was in conjunction with the annual meeting of the College of Dental Surgeons of B.C. in the Empress in Friday.

Cheevers, a practising dentist, has often assisted the coroner's office in Vancouver in the identification of people who have died violently, sometimes leaving little else but their teeth.

And his evidence has stood the courtroom test. One of his most recent appearances was at the Vancouver murder trial of Roy Lowther.

"People have been identified from time immemorial by theilr teeth," Cheevers said, citing some historic names.

Paul Revere — who will be remembered forever as the man who warned of British troops in the American Revolution—was a forerunner of today's dental mechanic, a silversmith who sometimes made teeth, and by Cheever's account "the father of forensic dentistry."

It was Revere who identified the exhumed body of soldier-patriot Dr. Joseph Warren, killed at the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Positive identification of Hitler deputy Martin Bormann was by way of his bridgework, proving that he is dead, despite recurring stories to the contrary.

"People still don't believe us. I don't know what you have to do . . ." Cheevers said.

Likewise, both Hitler and Eva Braun were identified after their burned bodies were recovered, because of dental characteristics, he said.

Further, every Israeli corpse in the Six-Day War was positively identified because of computerized dental cause of computerized dental records kept by their army.

The recent double-jumbo jet crash in Tenerife and death of nearly 500 passengers points to the need for fore widespread dental record-keeping for today's air travellers whose charred remains may otherwise go unidentified, Cheevers suggested.

Burned bodies often yield well-preserved teeth because they are surrounded by what Cheevers calls "impact parameters" of bone and fleshy tissue.

Bodies are sometimes given names through a single filling, as in the case of a man blackened beyond recognition in a North Vancouver blaze. The remains underwent further deterioration while being transported, with teeth and bones shattering into fragments that had to be x-rayed to reveal the filling.

Cheevers urged his colleagues to be more communicative with police, to tell them what they can do to assist in investigations that might otherwise consume countless unproductive hours.

"You've got to go back and tell the police what you can do for them. They don't know what you can do for them. Even you don't know." said, until small pieces of evidence are collected.

An ordontologist can be helpful in other ways, too, Cheevers said. Bite marks, for example, can be identified and match to known sets of teeth. They may be found on the skin of victims of crime or on foodstuffs recovered at the scene.

But this field of inquiry is "fraught with danger," Cheevers said, rather "like trying to bit a piece of jelly."

Lip prints can be as useful as fingerprints; the circumference of a skull, multiplied by three, can give to within an inch the height of the body to which it belonged; the color of teeth can indicate cause of death, the color of roots how old the deceased was.

The Dog Zapper

Penetrating Sound Waves Bring Uneasy Truce Between The Postmen and Harassing Dogs

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Who'd have thought it possible?

A softening in Israeli-Palestinian relations . . . detente progressing between Russia and the U.S. . . . dogs and postmen living in peaceful co-existence.

Dogs and postmen? Wait a minute.

But it's happening, thanks to modern technology and a dog's super-sensitive hearing.

The technology comes in the form of a Dog Chaser, a pocket-sized gadget that produces high frequency sonic waves that when beamed at a menacing dog, stops him dead in his tracks, and usually sends him packing in the opposite direction.

"Normally once is enough," says Victoria Post Office delivery manager Mary Glover.

The high pitch is barely audible to humans, but causes momentary discomfiture in dogs. It's so effective that dogs, which at one time daily harangued letter carriers, are now docile tail-waggers, or else head for cover at the sight of a uniform.

Some even accompany the letter carrier on his rounds.

But dog-lovers shouldn't be alarmed. The Dog Chaser is not used indiscriminately. A letter carrier has to convince his supervisor a dog is harassing him, and then he is allowed to take the postal station's single Dog Chaser with him for a day or two until the dog is "trained." The sound it produces is harmless — it just persuades a dog to switch rather than fight.

For all its magic, the Dog Chaser isn't the only tactic devised by postmen during the protracted dog wars.

Al Bennett, the letter carrier supervisor for the Victoria Post Office, recalls the time he was on a beat in Esquimalt a few years ago.

It was a fairly doggy route, as routes go, and Bennett wisely befriended three burly mongrels who followed him around his route.

They became his bodyguards, and faithfully fended off other dogs who hankered after a chaw of postman.

The irony of it all was that non-dog owners would shout at Bennett to keep his mutts off their lawn. "I didn't even know whose dogs they were," he says.

A Sidney postman had a confrontation with a German Shepherd every day on the route. None of the recommended solutions worked, so one day he brought along a lacrosse ball.

Today they're great friends, the dog playfully gallops around the route chasing and chewing lacrosse balls instead of the postman.

One of the Victoria area's 19 (out of 252) women letter carriers keeps a box of dog biscuits in her satchel as a peace offering.

There's a woman in Oak Bay whose otherwise friendly dog (as is often the case) has it in for the letter carrier. The only way he can get by the dog is to offer a biscuit.

The woman recognizes this imposition and gives the letter carrier the biscuits that he in turn gives her dog.

Bennett one time had a route where the dog wouldn't let him deliver the mail — that was the dog's duty. Every day Bennett would come to the gate, hold out the mail, and the dog would grab it and take it up to his mistress on the porch.

And woe betide the day when Bennett had no mail for the woman. In an ironic reverse, the dog wouldn't let Bennett continue his route unless he left some mail.

Bennett always carried spare empty envelopes in his satchel for such days. The dog was none the wiser.

Not all the devices used by posties over the years have been successful.

A spray bomb called Halt! is sometimes carried by postmen. It spews a yellow mustard and pepper foam at the dog.

A few years ago, Glover was giving last-minute instructions to nine new postmen who were awaiting inspection the day a new route was being started in a northern community.

The lesson was on the proper use of Halt! Glover pressed the lever, yellow foam blasted out, was caught by the wind and covered the postmen. Suddenly there were nine coughing, sneezing postmen with yellow foam all over their new uniforms.

Another postman tried Halt! on an attacking dog and later filed a report: "Just thought I'd let you know one full can of Halt! lasts 30 seconds. Could I have another can? The dog likes the taste and wants more."

BENNETT
. . . he's survived

But for all the tricks and gadgets, dogs do get in their licks — some serious, others funny.

Not long ago in Victoria, a letter carrier complained he was being menaced by a large dog.

So his supervisor, Bennett went to investigate.

He found a St. Bernard at the address, cautiously approached the house and asked the dog's mistress to keep her dog inside at mail delivery time.

"Oh my goodness," the surprised woman said. "Of course I'll keep him inside if he scares the postman, but look," and she pried open the dog's mouth where there wasn't a single tooth to be found.

On top of that, the dog was so old and arthritic, it could hardly walk.

"The best it could do was gum someone to death," Bennett said.

Once when Glover was the postmaster in Victoria, someone brought the mountain to Mohammed. A customer in the downtown post office tied up her huge dog to the railing outside the door to the lock boxes.

The girl went inside the main post office, and for the next 10 minutes, users of the post office boxes were either trapped inside the lock box area, or prevented from gaining access, by the ferocious canine Horatio at the door.

Dogs aren't the only offenders. Cat attacks are not that uncommon. Bennett remembers walking up to one house where he knew the dog to be friendly.

But there happened to be a strange cat on the porch. The dog cornered the cat. The cat escaped by clawing up one side of Bennett, across his shoulder and down his back.

Bennett set — what must be a record by being a letter carrier for nine years — covering virtually every Victoria route — without ever being bitten by a dog. The cat scratches are his only scars.

Another Victoria letter carrier was ambushed from above by a cat who leaped on him from an overhead rose trellis. (Casting Persians on posties?)

'Darn posties and their new-fangled gizmos'

But the serious attacks tend to dampen the humor of the funny ones. Earlier this week a postman in Victoria was severely bitten three times by a dog that he's known and petted daily for years.

Little mongrels seem to be the worst offenders, not Shepherds and Dobermans as one would expect, Bennett says. This is partly due to the fact that owners of large dogs usually keep them under control.

A postman in Trail took over the route of another who was sick. At this particular house, there was no mention of the German Shepherd on the carrier's log book, because the dog was always chained in the back yard.

However, on the new letter carrier's first morning, the child of the house had been playing with the dog before going to school. She left it unchained.

The letter carrier was bent over stuffing the mail through the screen door. Without a bark of warning the dog hit, sinking his jaws into the postman's rear.

The impact sent him through the screen door, cutting his ear and forehead — and he needed three stitches in his buttock.

A few winters ago, a Victoria postman was startled by a sudden canine attack. He slipped on the ice and cracked his head. His equilibrium was disturbed and he had to quit work not long after. The dog had never actually touched him.

Last year in Surrey a letter carrier required 52 stitches to close a wound.

There were about 10 disabling dog bites involving lost time and medical treatment in Greater Victoria last year, and 236 in all the B.C. and Yukon postal district. This is down from 319 in 1974-75.

Dog owners are liable for all costs incurred by the Post Office, Workers' Compensation Board and department of labor, resulting from a dog bite.

The average cost is $500 per attack, excluding court settlements.

Owners who refuse to control their dogs, are refused mail delivery, and have to go to the Post Office to pick up their mail.

He Thinks of Happy Things—How?

It's amazing, and rather wonderful, how some people can smile through it all.

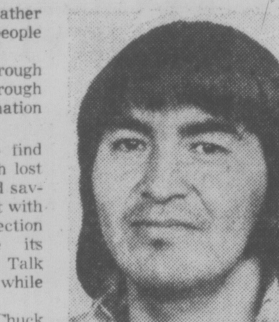
Through tragedy, through ill-fortune and even through the hurt that discrimination brings.

But it angers me, to find that a local family which lost its home, possessions and savings in a fire has met not with compassion but with rejection — simply because its members are Indians. Talk about kicking someone while he's down!

Seven weeks ago, Chuck Sampson left his home on the Tsartlip Indian Reserve in Central Saanich and a couple of hours later it burned to the ground.

Chuck and his wife Marguerite and their five children — Maureen, 13, Maria, 11, Marion, 9, Francis, 8, and 3-year-old O.J. — lost everything. Like many of the homes on the reserve, theirs was not insured. (Because of a lack of fire regulations and the fact most of the reserve's buildings don't meet Central Housing and Mortgage Corporation standards, fire insurance premiums are beyond the reach of most residents).

But Chuck Sampson is in a much worse position than most. A shipwright for 17 years, he badly injured his back in an accident while working for Philbrooks Shipyard in Sidney and hasn't worked for the last four years. Taken off compensation some time ago, he and his family now struggle along on welfare.



SAMPSON
. . . life hasn't been too kind

After the fire, the Friendship Centre (which aids native peoples) donated some blankets, pillows and towels and there were two anonymous donations of $35.

"We even got a couple of $50 donations from people in Vancouver and that helped a lot," says Chuck.

But the material help hasn't made up for the blockades Sampson has run into while trying to put a decent roof over his family's heads.

He has searched and searched for a place to rent while his name goes to the bottom of the list of families waiting for a hope to build on the reserve. Nothing. Three times the Sampsons have moved and each time to something more cramped.

Right now, Marion and Francis are living with Chuck's mother on the reserve but the other five in the family are squeezed into two tiny rooms of a Brentwood motel. And the Indian Affairs Deptartment will only pay for that until the end of this month. After that, they must move again but where?

"Well, we don't know," Chuck says, manging a grin. "But I'm hoping my cousin can get us a trailer and have it moved on to the reserve."

It's all rather disgusting, but Chuck Sampson did have a house lined up — until they found out he was an Indian.

"There was a good place we knew of in Brentwood so I phoned and the agent (for the owners who live in Campbell River) told me 'Sure, it's available; just nip down and take a look and if it seems okay, it's yours'," Chuck explains.

"There was a five-month lease on the house and it was $325 a month. But then I made the mistake of telling him my name and that we were burned out in the reserve fire and suddenly he started saying things like 'oh well, the owner will probably be coming back soon so this wouldn't suit you' and things like 'the water tank leaks and the place isn't too nice anyway.'

"This agent promised to find me something else and call me back but, of course, he never did."

Yet Chuck Sampson isn't bitter.

"It happens all the time to us," he says a little sadly. "Once I quit a job because of discrimination. I was the only Indian there and they gave all the whites a 75-cent-an-hour raise. They gave me a nickel raise and I couldn't believe it!

max
low

"Their argument was that the quality of my work wasn't good enough but I knew that wasn't true because I was a leadhand at the time and none of my boats ever came back for repairs. I took a little longer over it and the workmanship was better. So I just packed up my gear and walkout out."

The evil of discrimination lingers everywhere, though, says Chuck. His own children get a tough time from the other kids and even from some of the teachers at school in Brentwood, he adds, and his nephew has complained bitterly of forever being referred to as "Broken Arrow" or "Wagon Burner" at Saint Michael's University School in Victoria.

Life really hasn't been too kind to Chuck Sampson.

As well as being discriminated against, injuring his back and having his home burn down, his second wife Gwendolyn died during a gallbladder operation when she was only 17, and he, himself, needed more than 20 stitches to patch up his head after a bad car accident last October.

Yet Chuck doesn't believe in bad luck.

"Things just happen," he says with a smile.

He smiles a lot, really, and prefers to think of happy things; of the sports he loves (he's a sports nut and named his son Owen Joseph so he could call him O.J. after American football star O.J. Simpson), of all the kids he coaches in floor hockey, basketball and softball, and of his family.

"I try to be happy all the time," he says simply.

19 Get Help, 25 Refused Civic Grants

Each year there's good news and bad news for a wide variety of organizations which seek financial help from municipal governments in Greater Victoria.

Because there are more good causes than money, Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt councils turn the job of apportioning available funds over to an inter-municipal committee. With municipal budgets being set, this is the time of year the hard decisions have to be made.

Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell, one of the committee members, says many applications are turned down because the organizations fail to supply comprehensive financial statements.

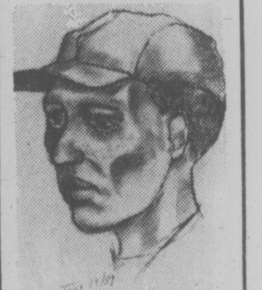
Committee recommendations still have to be approved by the individual councils but this is largely a matter of form. Where grants are approved, costs are shared roughly 41 per cent by Victoria, 11 per cent by Oak Bay, 39 per cent by Saanich and nine per cent by Esquimalt.

Six organizations which sought a total of $141,912 in cash grants are recommended for a total of $71,444. Thirteen other groups which asked for a grant in lieu of taxes are being supported by the committee.

A total of 25 groups asking for $239,233 were refused. Two others turned down were told to apply directly to municipalities.

Groups recommended for cash grants were Need-Victoria Crisis line which sought $12,000 and got $10,700. Victoria Celebrations Society which asked $12,000 and got $10,000; Victoria Conservatory of Music ($20,000) $9,962 plus seven per cent; Bastion Theatre ($34,912) $15,651 plus seven per cent; Art Gallery of Greater Victoria ($60,000) $43,093 plus seven per cent; Salvation Army Christmas Bureau ($3,000) $2,738 plus seven per cent.

Groups recommended for grants in lieu of taxes were Canadian Red Cross, YM-YWCA, G. R. Pearkes Clinic, Fernwood House Society, St. John Ambulance, Goodwill Enterprises, Garth Homer Achievement Society, the Salvation Army, Boys and Girls Clubs, Island White Cross Rehabilitation Centre, Greater Victoria Association for Retarded, Girl Guides and the Cerebral Palsy Association.



Suspect's Sketch Released

Victoria police Friday released a sketch of the suspect in Thursday's robbery of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Douglas and View.

The man is described as about 25 years old, dark olive skin, about five feet 10 inches tall and 145 pounds.

Witnesses said he wore a green cap and a blue zippered jacket.

'$100,000' Tea Set Stirs Up the Museum

There are tea sets and there are tea sets but the one on display at the Provincial Museum is not, repeat not, worth anywhere near the $100,000 reported earlier this week.

Dan Gallacher, curator of modern history, said Friday the set is worth only about $500 . . . and that's tops.

The earthenware set, made in Northern China in the early part of the century, popped into the news recently when Grace Leong of Vancouver announced the set in the museum had been stolen from her home two years ago.

A closer examination proved it wasn't so.

Gallacher said Mrs. Leong had put a value of several thousand dollars on her set.

"It seems everyone who heard the story started adding zeros."

He said when news broke the set was worth $100,000 the museum was flooded with calls. He said three of the callers indicated they had identical sets and were anxious to have them appraised.

The museum acquired its set from a private donor in 1972. It includes a tray, teapot, waterjug, and cream and sugar bowl.

In terms of quality and workmanship, said Gallacher, the set isn't particularly noteworthy but is valued by the museum because it represents an important item in B.C. 70 years ago.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me why Leonard Nimoy wasn't the host of this year's Telethon in Vancouver's Queen Elizabeth Theatre, and if he will be hosting next year's? I'm sure he was missed by a lot of fans.

A. TV show Star Trek's pointy-eared Mr. Spock missed the Telethon this year because he was on tour with an acting company in the U.S. The Vancouver Variety Club says Nimoy may be back in the future, depending on his availability. We were reminded that he also missed the telethon last year because of other commitments.

Old Courthouse Goes To Province for $1

The provincial government and the city of Victoria have signed a formal agreement guaranteeing a home for the Maritime Museum in the old courthouse building in Bastion Square.

The agreement, worked out in January, 1977, was signed this week by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy and Mayor Mike Young.

The site is being transferred from the city to the province for $1.

Under the agreement, the province will take over responsibility for the maintenance of the museum building.

The city has long contended that the cost of upkeep on the building and deferring both rent and taxes on the site have cost it about $60,000 a year for what was essentially a provincial, rather than a city, museum.

The province has agreed to pay the city its normal grant in lieu of taxes for the museum site.

It is possible that the museum may have to move sometime in the future, but McCarthy said it will stay where it is for now.

Roots Sued for Plagiarism

NEW YORK (AP) — A Mississippi woman has filed suit in federal court against Alex Haley, saying that his best-selling book Roots contains parts "largely copied" from her 1966 novel, Jubilee.

The copyright-infringement suit was filed by Margaret Walker Alexander, director of black studies at Jackson State University.

The heroine of her novel—set in Georgia during the civil war era—was based on a slave ancestor of Mrs. Alexander.

Meanwhile, Harold Courlander of Bethesda, Md., said Friday that portions of Roots bear a strong resemblance to his novel, The African, published in 1967.

Mrs. Alexander's suit asked for impoundment of unsold copies of Haley's book, an accounting of its sales and treble damages of an unspecified amount.

It is estimated that since its publication in 1976, Roots has sold more than 1.5 million copies. Last Monday it was awarded a special Pulitzer Prize.

Mrs. Alexander's complaint, assigned Wednesday to Judge Marvin Frankel in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, became known Friday.

Haley and his publisher, Doubleday Co., were listed as defendants.

Haley could not be reached for comment.

Courlander did not say whether he intends to take any action.

The African, published by Crown Books, was a novel about an African boy who was picked up in the slave trade and sent to the United States.

"I have noted a number of similarities between Roots and my book," he said.

"Both thematically and conceptually. Certain thoughts of Kunta Kinte, certain scenes and dialogues, certain concepts and imagery in Roots do seem quite similar to various moments in The African."

PANAMA TALKS SET FOR MAY

WASHINGTON (WP) — The next round of U.S.-Panama regotiations over the future of the Panama Canel will begin May 9 in Washington, state department officials said Friday.

The previous series of talks ended Feb. 22 with no agreement on the major questions of a date for termination of a new canal treaty and guarantees of open access to the waterway after Panama takes full charge.

U.S. Oil Firms Hidden Winners

WASHINGTON (WP) — The invisible winners in President Carter's energy message may be the nation's oil companies.

In a series of technical decisions that have gone largely unnoticed in this week of presidential television appearances, the oil industry has won from the administration what one senior industry official described as "a lot of pluses."

These pluses would add up to hundreds of millions of dollars in additional revenues for the industry by 1980, mostly in the form of subtle price increases that would occur from relaxations of current oil price controls.

There would be no federal tax rebates to compensate the paying public for these increases, which would show up in higher prices for gasoline and all other products made from oil.

The oil companies and industry trade associations such as the American Petroleum Institute have had an intense lobbying effort under way. It began weeks before Carter's inauguration, and reached saturation level in recent weeks.

Under current federal price controls, there are two basic categories for U.S. oil: old oil and new oil. New oil is esentially oil from wells drilled after 1972.

The price of old crude oil is frozen at $5.25 a barrel. New crude oil can be sold for as much as $11.28 per barrel.

What the Carter plan does for the industry — perhaps the most important thing—is quietly to create a third category of oil that would not be subject to price controls at all, and could rise to the so-called "world" or uncontrolled price of more than $13 a barrel.

A second important plus for the industry is a provision under which the price of new oil would automatically rise each year with inflation, and the annual price increases would not be subject to congressional veto, as they are now.

A third technical change involves the "decontrol" of gasoline prices, which are currently tied by law to the controlled price of crude oil. Experts estimate this gasoline decontrol could result in a 3-cent-a-gallon jump in gasoline prices when it takes effect, which under the president's plan it would do this coming fall.

Meanwhile, the White House Friday dropped its emphasis on the sacrifices President Carter's energy program will require, and instead started picturing it as a boon to the average American consumer.

Viets Demand U.S. Aid

BANGKOK (UPI) — Vietnam Friday again demanded U.S. post-war reconstruction aid and said the nation now is producing as much as it was before the United States bombings began.

"It is a matter of responsibility, honor, conscience and morality which the United State cannot escape," chief Vietnamese delegate Dinh Ba Thi told the U.S. Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific.

Americans "should honor their commitment for contributions to heal the wounds of war and to reconstruct Vietnam," Thi told the commission, meeting in Bangkok to discuss regional issues.

Thi said that despite "the ravages of a brutal war," North Vietnam's industrial and agricultural output in the two years since the Communist victory has returned to 1964 levels, a year before the U.S. bombings began.

Thi told the delegates from three dozen countries that Vietnam supports Laotian allegations that Thailand is suspporting insurgents fighting the Communist regime in Laos.

A Thai delegate replied that Laotian charges were "baseless."

Change Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Telephone Company has asked Vancouver subscribers to keep their old directories for a month after its new directories are effective May 1. A spokesman said the new books include number changes for 5,000 Port Moody and Coquitlam area subscribers that won't be effective until June 1.

Gas Tax Rebate Cut on Imports?

WASHINGTON (WP) — A Carter administration official told reporters Friday that rebates on fuel-efficient cars, under its proposed energy program, might not apply equally to imports.

Fred Bergstn, treasury assistant secretary for international affairs, said that the rebates on small imports such as Volkswagens, Toyotas and similar cars might be limited to the number imported in some base year.

In effect, this would give foreign manufacturers less rebate mony to spread among their cars; it would reduce rebates on imported cars, compared to Detroit products getting the same mileage.

He conceded that this could work out to the disadvantage of those countries and companies that have been enjoying large sales here, but said "if there were an unrestrained import rebate," it would reduce the possibility of havifg a "viable domestic auto industry."

London – where else?

Where else to enjoy Jubilee than in London, where pageantry is a daily affair?

The Horseguards at Whitehall, motionless as statues; the vivid tunics of Beefeaters at the Tower; the daily ceremony of the Changing of the Guard.

Come to London and marvel at the magnificence of St. Paul's, or walk, wondering, through the echoing history of Westminster Abbey.

Try to be there in June for the Royal Progress up the river Thames. Or the heart stirring ceremony of Trooping the Colour held annually to celebrate the Queen's official birthday. Surely in Jubilee Year it will take on a special significance.

London. Truly, what better setting for a Royal Silver Jubilee? And where better to spend your holiday?

Sleep easy for $12

Your Jubilee Special flight entitles you to special savings reserved for British Airways Holidays passengers.

We can put you in the middle of Jubilee festivities with a hotel room for only $12 each, based on double occupancy. That's with private bathroom and continental breakfast.

Britain. A treasure at a bargain

By NEIL MORGAN

KILLARNEY, Ireland — In those hours when a sweet melancholy lies over this troubled island the visitor is jostled between joy and sadness. Black clouds scud in off the Atlantic and envelop old gray castles and Ireland looks at once full of exciting mystery and menace.

In one of the greatest of the manor houses near here, Muckross, a California friend of mine lived until he was 15. Now Muckross is a national park, and a folk museum in its basement is an embryonic effort to suggest the glory of this 11,000-acre estate two and three centuries ago.

When my friend, who lives now in San Francisco, returns to Ireland in the summer, it is to a more modern and modest hillside home on the other side of Killarney, on a hill above the village of Beaufort. Now he regards Muckross as dreary. But he was kind enough to write the caretaker when I told him that my wife and I planned to visit his birthplace.

ON A BLUSTERY day we had driven up from Kenmare over Moll's Gap and the scarred hills of MacGillicuddy's Reeks near the southwest corner of Ireland. Soon we were in a valley of handsome forests, driving beside a lake (Lough Leane) dotted with wooded islands. On its east shore is the entrance to Muckross.

Cars park near the road and the labyrinth of wide paths are traversed on foot, by bicycle, or — traditionally — by jaunting car.

The drivers of these little horse carts are known as jarveys, and their garrulous commentary, whether kin to the truth or not, is considered part of the bargain.

MUCKROSS is a massive house, gray and sullen, but standing in one of the most exquisite settings I have seen. From its parlors and its portico one looks out on a crescent view of lake and gentile mountains rising behind. The grounds are lush and well-kept, thick with rhododendrons.

Muckross was an American gift to Ireland.

Arthur Vincent, who with his mother-in-law and father-in-law donated Muckross to the Irish nation in 1932, was American. He was quoted at the time as saying: "I hope that Muckross will be made a real garden of friendship, and that it will be the greatest playground in the world.

"THERE IS not another in the world like it, and I know them all."

The jarveys take visitors along the lake shore to Muckross Abbey, a ruined 5th Century Franciscan abbey that has been faithfully restored. In it are the tombs of the poets of Kerry.

Nearby is a cottage which the jarveys tell visitors was the home of Danny Mann, the boatman in the story called Iridh Parliamentary debates The Colleen Bawn, about an Irish girl murdered in 1819 — an incident which has been the basis of much Irish literature and even a German opera, Lily of Killarney.

BUT IT IS in the house itself where one finds some sense of what Irish country life must have been a century ago.

In the glass-enclosed bookcases things appear very much as they must have been when Muckross last served its owners. A dusty copy of Debrett's Peerage, 1927, stands next to a faded set of the Britannica.

On another shelf are leatherbound ledgers of rentals and accounts, with lists of eviction notices served on tenants in the year 1889. Hume's History of England is nearby, along with a series of annual Country Gentlemen's Estate Books.

BOUND COPIES of these are in Gaelic.

In the game room, with its 15-foot ceilings, one looks out through deep French doors to the lake.

In the bedrooms upstairs, with evidence of the laboriousness with which their plumbing has been added, there remain mementos of my California friend, who now believes that he felt grateful to make his escape from here when he was 15.

The folk museum in the basement treats the history and crafts of County Kerry. There is hand-carved furniture and a wild array of old prints. Among them are the election posters of one Daniel O'Connell in 1832.

To visit Muckross is to sense something of grandness of the Irish past. Other houses and castles have been opened to the public as hotels.

Ashford Castle, at Cong in County Mayo, ranked last year as Ireland's outstanding hotel. Dromoland Castle in County Clare is popular with visitors, as is Fitzpatrick at Killiney Castle near Dublin.

Elizabeth's penthouse up for sale

LONDON — The penthouse suite aboard Cunard's Queen Elizabeth II on a 96-day Pacific Cruise is up for grabs at a mere $150,535.

"Our two penthouse suites are the first to go," said Victor Matthews, Cunard chairman.

"We have no trouble selling them and there are many people who want to spend this amount of money."

Modern, primitive Swiss have it all

By J. G. HARRISON

A pleasant problem of any tour of Switzerland, particularly for the first-timer, is to know what to see. It is a land of such extraordinary variety — from palm trees to glaciers, from immense, ultra-modern machinery to the most delicate of handicrafts — all in an area only half the size of Maine or Scotland.

For our two-week trip my wife and I chose the following itinerary: Geneva, Zermatt, Interlaken (with a day's side trip to Bern), Lucerne, and Lugano. Travel was with a Swiss Railway Holiday Card, which must be bought outside the country and is one of the world's best travel bargains.

From these six locations we could see almost all that Switzerland stands for in the world, from the most comfortably primitive mountain villages to great international centres; from the most sophisticated attractions to Europe's ruggedest terrain. In few other countries is it possible to find such notable diversity so easily reachable and so compactly located.

This tour could have been broken down in almost any combination of overnight stays, but we found it convenient to spend four nights in Geneva, two in Zermatt, three each at Interlaken and Lucerne, and two at Lugano. This seemed to correspond best to what each had to offer.

Geneva is unique even in Switzerland. It is one of the world's focal points for decisions affecting mankind. Seldom without some major international conference, it houses some of the United Nations' most important agencies.

An early centre of Protestantism, Geneva still abounds with intellectual, artistic, and cultural enterprise — all occurring amid scenes of great beauty. There is that bluest of blue lakes under the great bulk of Mont Blanc, the turbulent Rhone, and the gentle slopes of the Jura mountains. In few spots is the marriage of mind and nature more harmonious.

To go from Geneva to Zermatt is as startling as Alice's walk through the looking-glass. One is transported into the very heart of that wild, snow-engulfed, mountain-ringed, Alpine landscape. Zermatt, from which all automobiles and trucks are excluded, is that happy outcome — a village dedicated to tourism but not spoiled by it.

Every season here has its charms. We chose the fall and received an extra and unexpected bonus. Everywhere one turned, one saw the lower mountainsides alive with the vivid golden-orange hue of the larches, which combined with the blue of the sky and the white of the snow like some great flag across the encircling slopes

Interlaken, too, is dedicated to mountains — in its case to that fairest of ladies, the Jungfrau, flanked by the frowning Ogre which threatens her and the towering Monk who guards her.

But Interlaken's dedication is of a different kind. Where Zermatt is rugged and manly, Interlaken is delicate and womanly. Perhaps nowhere else is there such proximity between elegant promenades, exquisitely tended public gardens, the most elegant of shops and ever-present, overhanging Alpine snowfields.

At Lucerne one penetrates not merely what the Swiss themselves call the centre of Swiss tourism, but the ancient, primitive beating heart of Swiss independence. It was amid these mountain meadows overlooking Lake Lucerne that, in the year 1291, the three original cantons swore the Everlasting Oath which sealed not only Switzerland's freedom but also its democracy.

Here is Switzerland's oftenest climbed mountain, the Rigi; here the engrossing medieval treasures of Lucerne — its Chapel Bridge built in 1333, the nine glowering towers of the old city wall, the touching Lion of Lucerne, and the largely unaltered squares hung with gracefully wrought and gilded signs of shops and inns.

At Lugano one enters, purely and simply Italy. Here are the sights, the sounds, the smell, the atmosphere which distinguishes things Italian from all others.

Golden afternoon by Lake Zurich: ferry, sailboats and the daily newspaper.

Farewell to old Hanoi, she bowed to progress

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

HANOI, Vietnam — Goodbye to old Hanoi. She ain't what she used to be.

I saw two girls wearing lipstick, I looked across the Red River and saw the opposite shore blazing with neon.

At the Long Bien Bridge where U.S. navy and marine jets used to be the only hazard, I found myself in a monstrous traffic jam.

The French have been gone for 25 years and the American bombers for three, and this communist capital is going the neon, glass and red skirted way of most cities of the world.

It might be economics or the triumph of Madison Avenue or a snickering fate. But Hanoi is visibly moving into the look-a-like urban era — this time when so much of Tel Aviv, Rotterdam, Belgrade, Helsinki and Tokyo look like Fresno, Atlanta, Dallas, Hartford and Seattle.

Hanoi's old Government House, a yellow canary of a building erected for the beautification of governor generals, is now crowded by pink and blue and green cement and glass structures used as hotels and schools.

The new post office with its marble and concrete housing automatic stamp machines would not feel out of place in Omaha.

Cruise ship literature used to describe Hanoi as The City of Bicycles and now not even Copenhagen's streets were jammed by so many pedaled wheels. A year ago a visitor walked Hanoi all day and spotted but one auto. Today the vehicles jam so often there are traffic cops.

I saw a pith helmeted officer so surrounded by trucks and autos at the Hanoi side of the almost two-mile-long Long Bien Bridge that he was ignoring the drivers honking and waving with all the aplomb of one of New York's finest at Seventh Avenue and 42nd Street.

Gone is the dull blah of the clothes once worn by Hanoi's folk. I saw girls in red skirts and boys in pastel sweaters. The end of provincialism shows even in the bathrooms of the new hotels.

Gone too are the sidewalk bomb shelters. The citizenry dug the single person holes because the government, as one communist official told me, simply could not afford big bomb shelters such as those constructed in the Second World War in Germany.

LAS VEGAS: 'built on immorality'

LAS VEGAS — If this city didn't exist, good old American ingenuity would have to invent it.

It's doubtful, however, that the nation's legendary inventiveness could improve on what chance, in its various shades, has wrought here. An awful lot of Americans crave what Las Vegas offers, the good and the bad of it, the gaiety and the sadness of it.

However one perceives Las Vegas — and the views range from cesspool to innocent escape valve — an insatiable demand exists from Walla Walla to Kankakee to Vancouver for what this place supplies best and in abundance.

So why not put it 'way in the desert and curtain it with mountains?

Tuck it far from the real America, so it will offend none of the sensibilities which recoil at gambling, sexual skylarking or rich food and plenteous drink, some of it free.

And while you're at it, give it an inviting climate.

"Las Vegas obviously is what people in the rest of the nation wanted," said Hank Pesner, a public relations and government affairs consultant — and resident philosopher.

Pesner has watched the city metamorphose from a cozy mob principality into a skyscraper-forested phenomenon on which the corporate fist tightens daily. Owlish and frisky, he knows the territory.

"The tourists have said by their actions this is what we came out here for, this is what we want: gaming, bright lights and nude girls. It's a need created by those who come here from other parts of the country.

"We give 'em what they want. If we don't, some day some place will open that will," he said.

"It's a fun town," said a Las Vegas police sergeant, even though he deals with the city's seamiest aspects. "Anything goes. Nobody cares here. It's a plastic city. Ever notice there are no clocks in the casinos?"

No man or woman, Pesner said, "would dare do in his hometown what he does in Las Vegas. Here he can get lost in the crowd. Nobody knows him, nobody cares what he does. You don't have to hide under a table for fear your neighbor or priest will see what you're up to."

Ted Kerber, executive director of the Las Vegas Rescue Mission, agrees, even if he is less sanguine about the goings-on.

"People lose all sense of responsibility when they come here. Their defences go and they're open for whatever there is out here," he said.

"And everything that causes human nature to be abased can be found here. Easy sex, easy booze. Everything here plays into the hands of greed."

Hardly the kind of image that made America great, but who in Las Vegas worries about image, really?

"They can call it gaming if they want. But this is a dirty old town built on immorality," said a pawnbroker who, nonetheless, accommodates busted-out losers eager for a new stake.

"Sin city?" Pesner asked. "Sure, let the tourists think that. Why destroy the image?"

And, Bob Kennedy, veteran security chief at the Aladdin: "This is the straightest city in the world. You can sit at a table here and you're going to get a square deal. But back home at your country club or your Elks Club, you're going to get cheated by your locals."

After slump, London swings

LONDON — A few years ago there was a restaurant owner whose establishment had an unlisted number. Diners found on their tables match boxes with his photograph, forefinger to lips, and the warning:

"If you know who I am don't say where I am."

There is little danger of a night club or restaurant entrepreneur getting killed in the rush these days, but there are definite signs that after many months on the critical list, London's night life is beginning to revive. Another transfusion this year of American dollars and Arab petrodollars ought to see the patient back to health.

The bashful restaurateur, Alvaro by name, is in business again with a select Italian restaurant which has all the trade it can handle among the late diners, especially since the word is out that Prince Charles occasionally shows up with a girlfriend. He still prefers anonymity, so the location of La Famiglia is withheld at his request but it's in an area of London called World's End.

This extraordinary aversion to publicity is not only a sign that some top places think they do not need any of the moment but also evidence that a number of spots are trying to recapture the exclusivity that made so many London clubs and restaurants prosperous and famous in other years.

Most of the newer ones are members-only clubs and fairly strict about admissions.

One of the wisest heads in London's clubdom sits on the shoulders of a Philadelphia expatriate who has opened three of the most successful spots in his time, and has a share in Tramps, generally conceded to be the most thriving and celebrity haunted of them all.

Fashionably, he will only speak without identification. It's a superstition he has cultivated since, he said, he got all the publicity as a Broadway producer, only to have two big musicals sink under him nevertheless.

His own club is situated in the fashionable West End of London but he feels a new Greenwich Village is springing up in the colorful Covent Garden district vacated by the famous fruit and vegetable market.

Bras buzz in Tokyo's noisiest cabaret

ON THE GO
with Jerry Hulse

TOKYO — Everyone's heard of the girl with a bee in her bonnet? Well, sir, here we have the girl with a buzz in her bra.

It's all part of the act at the world's noisiest, biggest cabaret, the Mikado.

Visualize, if you will, 1,000 hostesses cooing and fluttering their lovely eyelashes at a like number of males, the idea being, of course, to convince their companions that money is unimportant as long as everyone is having a good time, and just as long as it's the customer's money (not the hostesses') that's being spent.

The routine worked out famously when the Mikado employed fewer girls. But as the number of hostesses increased, so did the problems.

In order to keep track of the girls the management installed a public address system. It was a disastrous decision. The din was intolerable. Ordinary conversations were impossible. So noisy was the cabaret that the customer could tell only that the woman's mouth was moving and nothing seemed to be coming out.

It was disconcerting. Unless one read lips there was little hope for any conversational intercourse.

To solve the problem, the Mikado sought the help of engineers. Now, as everybody knows, the Janapese are geniuses when it comes to transistors. After studying the problem the engineers created a brand new gadget for the Mikado's girls: Bras with built-in buzzers.

It was pure genius.

Peace was restored to the Mikado. Now instead of the noisy public address system, only the steady humm of 1,000 brassieres is heard among the tables.

Zzz-zzzzz.

Never mind, there are other gin mills throughout Tokyo. At last count 20,000 watering holes were employing 150,000 hostesses for the entertainment of customers. (It is the customer, of course, who must pay the piper.)

Cash, though, is no particular problem. Not in the land of the big Bank Americard. Just put it on the cuff and weep when the bill arrives.

To steer the reader through the streets and alleys of Roppongi and Akasaka (two of Tokyo's popular nightclub districts) we have prepared a little guide that is offered with two words of advice: bring yen.

—China Town: Although employing fewer hostesses than the Mikado, the China Town is one of Tokyo's livelier clubs. Be prepared, though, to hock your watch and wire home for help. Expensive.

—Mugen: Popular with the young crowd. Also noisy. The admission price for men is $7, while the ladies slip in for only $5. (The cheapest drink comes to nearly $3.)

—Central Park: If you're short on cash, this is the place. Inexpensive, good jazz.

—Mon Chere: English-speaking hostesses. The bar madame is a graduate of Tokyo's famous Copacabana in Akasaka. Drinks from about $2.75.

—Crown: 300 hostesses. Some speak English. A big, splashy Las Vegas-style cabaret. Stage shows twice a night. Plenty expensive. I mean P-L-E-N-T-Y.

—Copacabana: One of the brightest nightclubs in Tokyo. Gorgeous hostesses. Good music. At the Copa the girls bill and coo and the band plays the blues while the customer weeps when he gets the tab. Expensive.

—Latin Quarter: The flashiest fleshpot in Tokyo (also the most expensive). Both Japanese and foreign entertainers. Take a big breath before looking at the check.

—Minyo Kaikan Schichi-Go-San: This is a folksong restaurant. Professional singers, dancers, musicians. But anybody can get into the act (and they often do after a few belts of sake). Attendants in happi coats seat visitors on cushions. Strictly informal — and reasonable. Showtime 5:30 to 11:30 p.m. with only 10- to 20-minute breaks.

Note: Here is a list of inexpensive restaurants for the traveller touring on a budget:

—Red Baron: An American-owned restaurant serving steaks, hamburgers, A good bar. Owner Ken Judd employes half a dozen English-speaking waitresses. Moderate prices, relaxful atmosphere. Ask your hotel doorman for directions.

—San Remo: If you've had your fill of Japanese food try the San Remo. It's operated by the Mama Macaroni Co. (Big spaghetti and macaroni maker). Specializes in various pastas. Phone 591-1865.

—Berni-Inn: A British-style pub-restaurant. Fish 'n' chips, chicken, Watney Ale, sherry. Phone 572-2231.

—Stew Kettle: Just what the name implies — steaming stews. Telephone 583-8404.

—Anna Millers: Another restaurant featuring an American menu (meat pies, hamburgers, cheese cake). Telephone 586-7369.

—Potato Club: Chinese meals, live music, strong whisky. Telephone 585-3907.

—Takano World Snack: Foods of half a dozen countries (German, Danish, Mexican, Italian, Indian, Hungarian) and atmosphere to match. Telephone 354-0222.

—Shabu-Tsu: Reasonable Japanese meals. Specialty: Shabupshabu. Telephone 354-2836.

—Tsunahachi: Typical Japanese restaurant. Specializes in tempura. You sit at a wood counter and watch while the chef prepares the meals. Telephone 352-1011.

—Betchi-Tei: A Japanese farmhouse-style restaurant. Traditional Japanese meals. Telephone 582-8978.

For country-style cooking, try the Inakaya restaurants in both the Akasaka and Roppongi areas. You sit at the counter. The chef kneels in front of the hearth. When your order is ready he hands it to you on a long paddle.

Wear your earplugs, though. The decibel level is about twice that of a jet during takeoff.

So there you have it, a few ideas that'll save you some cash.

I had another suggestion but it's only a warm memory. I had intended to look up an old friend, the former Jewish Mama-San of Japan, Anne Dinken. They tell me, though that she's gone back to the United States. Until recently she ran a dreamy kosher kitchen near Roppongi Crossing, catering to Japanese and Americans alike.

"They love my chicken and Matzo ball soup," she used to say.

From the outside the Kosher Deli looked as if it were collapsing on to the sidewalk. Inside, though, it was something else: pastrami pancakes, knockwurst omelets, lox 'n' bagels, chopped chicken liver, kosher pickles.

Best, though, she guaranteed to "stir up a martini you can get drunk on."

Anne spent 25 years in Tokyo, lost a husband and was "looking for another nice Jewish boy" the last time I saw her.

Maybe she found him. All I know is that they're serving sukiyaki where she used to serve chicken soup.

Wherever you are, Anne, keep the pot boiling, honey.

Giant Angus favorite of tourists

The biggest tourist attraction at St. Ann's on Canada's Cape Breton Island is probably a special museum erected in honor of 2.4-metre (7'9") Giant Angus MacAskill, who lived here in the early 19th century.

He was a mighty man, able to hoist a 900-kg (2,000 pounds) anchor on his shoulders, then walk around with it.

There's a wooden replica of the original anchor in the museum, which is part of the Gaelic College, famous for summer courses in dancing and the Gaelic language.

Other MacAskill mementos include a walking cane which looks like a miniature tellgraph pole, his lofty top hat, his great bed, and his favorite brass-buttoned tunic.

The big Canadian used to go on tour with his opposite extreme, midget Tom Thumb, who danced on the palm of MacAskill's open hand.

Snow festival starts April 27

The annual Aurora Snow Festival will be held April 27-May 1 at Churchill, Manitoba in the town centre complex.

Activities include a broomball tournament, hockey, bowling, ping pong, swimming, billiards and dancing.

The complex, site of the festival, covers approximately 1860 square meters (220,000 square feet).

Churchill, located 425 kms (680 air miles) north of Winnipeg, is the site of a major seaport on the shore of Hudson Bay.

Emeralds can trap unsuspecting

TRAVEL TIPS

By STAN DELAPLANE

It's the rainy season now in Bogota. We're 8,900 feet above the steamy jungles where 90 per cent of the world's emeralds come from: Mined. Stolen. Robbed from the pockets of a murdered man.

They're not choosy about these stones of green fire that can fetch as high as $30,000 a carat. Here you can buy an emerald for half of what it would cost you in North America.

Emeralds conceal easily. Smuggle easily. There's always a market that asks no questions. So Colombia has an endless bunch of gunslingers.

In 1973 — The Green War — authorities guess 250 gangsters were killed.

The underworld traffic is in the colonial heart of Bogota. Along Calle 14 between Carras 6 and 9. The street sellers with an emerald in a crumpled piece of wax paper: "Senor . . ."

"You don't buy on the streets in these countries," says Willis T. Bronkie. "How stupid can people be! Tourists are always bringing me pieces of green glass for appraisal."

Bronkie is called Senor Esmeralda. They say he knows more about emeralds than any man in the world.

Bogota (3.5 million pop.) is growing in skyscrapers toward the north. Away from the small street merchant colonial town.

There Bronkie sits behind a big desk on the 21st floor of the Bavaria (Beer) Building. Jewelers' scales are his ornaments. Photos of jungle diggings decorate the walls.

A sign on the desk says: "Ali Baba was a fortunate man indeed. He had only 40 thieves to deal with."

He played football at Yale. Got a mining engineering degree. He's 64. White-haired. "I've been shot once. Kidnapped once.

"The mines are guarded by Colombian soldiers, but they can't live on the pay. So they steal.

"There were two policmen in here this morning. In uniform, with some stones."

He didn't ask the cops where the emeralds came from.

For $10, you can buy a bracelet charm. A woven gold basket with an uncut emerald in it. Only way to be sure what you're getting is from a well-known dealer. The big hotels have them.

"On the street you might as well buy a Sprite bottle and break it into pieces with a brick.

Bogota's not a tourist town. At 8,900 feet its an average 65 degrees. A fast walk will take your breath away.

We got here because it's a stopover on Braniff's route to Lima and the south of South America. Spent a few days at the Bogota Hilton ($30). Moved to the Tequendama ($20) and more colorful.

Ten per cent service charge in restaurants. The waiter will appreciate your generosity of five per cent more.

Food runs to Spanish colonial. Heavy on chicken and rice and spice. Fresh fish comes up from the coast.

Club Colombia is a good beer. Ron Medellin is a light rum with a nice flavor.

This is on the track of the "mules" — the hired travelers who smuggle cocaine on its way to street pushers in the U.S.

A young American tourist hanging around Bogota for a few days is certainly suspect.

Nobody knows how much the emerald smuggling business runs.

Bronkie said: "There are 30,000 people living in the emerald zone. It's pure, hard rain forest. Soldiers and police are not going to chase into the jungle where they're sure to be killed.

"Soldiers and police don't know how to live in the jungle. These other people do.

That's what you wear on your finger, Madame.

Amok exhibit hits at death

KUALA LUMPUR — The national museum here holds an impressive cultural sampling of Malaysia, including a two-item exhibit of running amok.

One looks like a pitchfork with serrated inner edges on metal prongs set far enough apart to fit around a man's neck.

Mounted on a wall next to this non-agricultural tool is a drawing titled "a Malay running amok." It shows a frenzied, knife-wielding man being chased on foot by other fellows carrying spears and this amok fork to pin him down - when they catch him.

The Malay translation of amok is "to run wildly with desire to kill." The act of running amok is known as "mengamok"; the person who does is a "pengamok." It's said to be an affliction unique to Malaya.

The museum's amok fork shows little signs of wear, perhaps because those who valued their skins seldom tried to bring the pengamok back alive.

Wonders of world revamped

CHICAGO — More than 2,000 years have passed since Anipater of Sidon listed Seven Wonders of the World as a sightseeing guide for ancient Greeks on tour. In that time, all but the great pyramids of Egypt have passed into oblivion.

But a lot of genius has come and gone since the glory of Greece faced. To bring things up to date, the 1977 Rand McNally Traveller's Almanac combed the earth to make its own selection of 101 Wonders of the Modern World.

The Almanac's wonders include many old familiar favorites. There's the Greek's own Parthenon and the Roman's Forum, Colosseum and Pompeii. The Taj Mahal, the Eiffel Tower, St. Peter's Basilica and Westminster Abbey also made the top 101, as did Stonehenge, the Kremlin, the Empire State Building and the Grand Canyon.

Perhaps less well known are the walled medieval towns of Carcassone and Rhodes, the underground Salt Cathedral of Colombia, the rock temples of Ellora and Ajanta in India, the rose-red city of Petra in Jordan, and Rhodesia's mysterious Zimbabwe Ruins, built entirely without mortar.

Bordeaux 'wizard' makes wine sing

BORDEAUX, France — Before that bottle of Bordeaux lands on your table, the "wizard" of wine may well have waved his magic wand over it.

For Prof. Emile Peynaud is one of the world's most famous oenologists, masters of the art and science of chemically treating wine to bolster its taste and color.

From a small office in University of Bordeaux he runs the Institute of Oenology, whose list of alumni spans the globe. His intimate knowledge of the noble grape has been imparted to winegrowers from Chile to California and South Africa.

He also acts as a consultant for many winegrowers in Bordeaux, and this is where he practises what he preaches — prevention is better than cure.

"For example, a winegrower comes to see me complaining that his wine is too harsh, contains too much tannin, or takes too much or too little time to mature," he said.

"So we go back to the harvest stage and see exactly how ripe the grapes are when he picks then, how much he crushes them in the presses, the fermentation temperature. All these are factors."

That to him is the true role of oenology. Act before rather than afterward, when only a limited range of permitted chemicals can correct the balance. More than 60 rules and regulations in France cover such "tampering."

Peynaud is not a chauvinistic defender of Bordeaux. "I return humbled from abroad and tell the Bordelais that they won't always be the world champions," he said.

Globetrotting has convinced him that for a sound wine industry a country with a strong economy is needed together with people who can and want to buy good-quality wines.

"Chile and the Argentine certainly make good wines but they don't have clients to pay for better-quality wines," he said.

"The United States has good wine consumers and great economic strength. Californian wines will eventually rival European wines.

"South Africa has wines of German origin which are often exhilaratingly good."

Peynaud is one of the few people in this wine capital to have welcomed the 1974 "winegate" scandal, when leading traders were condemned for mislabelling or doctoring wine. The case sullied the reputation of Bordeaux wines.

Oenologists discovered that the wines had been mixed with humbler stock from the mass-production Midi region, and Peynaud commented: "The trial showed that we could catch the crooks.

"Instead of discrediting Bordeaux, it should have shown how well we defended our wines."

For Peynaud French legal safeguards to cover wine treatment are adequate. He went further, and said: "In Europe wine is the best-protected food product."

His lifelong love affair with the world's vineyards is still going strong because for him "wine is like finding a woman you thought you knew well, only to discover she is full of surprises."

Russian Jews Find Life in Canada Is Tough

TORONTO (CP) — When Boris Livshitz was confined to a Russian prison he dreamt of Canada and the good life.

A professor of civil engineering, Livshitz was sent to jail for four years for giving private lessons to students. He came to Canada in 1975 and now works for an electronics repair firm. But like thousands of Russians who have come West, Livshitz has discovered an unattractive side to paradise.

"All the time I wanted to come to Canada to be free," Livshitz said in an interview. "I never realized how difficult it could be to find a good job or learn a new language."

Livshitz, who lives with his family in a multi-storey apartment building, is still embarrassed about his limited English. His wife Ina, who was a pediatrician and dentist in Riga, Latvia, gently corrects him.

"The problem (in Russia) was that we were Jewish," Livshitz said. "It was in big black letters on our passport. I knew there was no future for me or my children."

His children's future depends on him. His wife, who does not qualify to practise medicine here, sells hats in a downtown store.

She admits she earns more than she did as a physician in Russia, but she is impatient.

"People tell us it takes 10 years to get adjusted," she said. "One woman told me her mother came here with $30 and washed floors for a living. I said, 'I'm sorry, but your mother wasn't a doctor.'"

Joseph Kage, executive director of Jewish Immigrant Aid Services in Montreal, says Russians find it harder than most immigrants to adjust to life here.

"The Soviet immigrant has not been a part of Western society," Kage said. "He doesn't understand about looking for a job or signing contracts or paying the rent—concepts which were different in a state-controlled system."

About 2,500 Russians, most of them Jewish, have taken advantage of improved East-West relations to immigrate to Canada. Once or twice a month, an airplane lands in Toronto or Montreal with another group of anxious families.

"We were like little children when we came," recalled Alla Krasnov, who arrived in Toronto last year from Leningrad with her husband. "We couldn't speak, we couldn't work, we couldn't do anything. The people who helped us were like our parents."

Anatoly Pivarunas, 46, was an automobile and boat engine designer in the Central Scientific Research and Design Institute in Leningrad before he came to Canada in September, 1975, with his wife Rita and 20-yearold daughter Helen.

Pivarunas, who has a PhD in automotive science, works as a service mechanic for Mercury Marine Ltd. in nearby Mississauga.

One of his inventions, an automotive carburetor that allows a 10-per-cent fuel saving, is in widespread use in Russia. Pivarunas brought the patent to this invention and 10 others with him but he says the only way he can take advantage of them is to move to the United States.

"We came to Canada because the scenery and nature are a lot like Russia and we heard the United States was full of criminals and crime," Pivarunas said. "My wife is very happy here but maybe we'll have to go."

Relief workers here say more than 70 per cent of the Russian immigrants in Toronto were professionals who found themselves targets of official displeasure at home because they were Jewish or political dissidents.

There have been efforts to reduce conflicts. The department of manpower and immigration has set up a program with the Association of Professional Engineers in Ontario to assess qualifications and help job-seeking Russian engineers.

Of 25 Soviet doctors who have arrived in this area, more than 20 have passed qualifying examinations to practise in Ontario.

Alex Dovenman, a 39-year-old civil engineer from Odessa who now works for a downtown firm, says he is happy, "according to the English meaning."

"But the word in Russian means a different kind of happiness, I can't really explain it; it's something like being complete when there is absolutely nothing that bothers you," Dovenman explained.

"I guess we don't feel that yet."

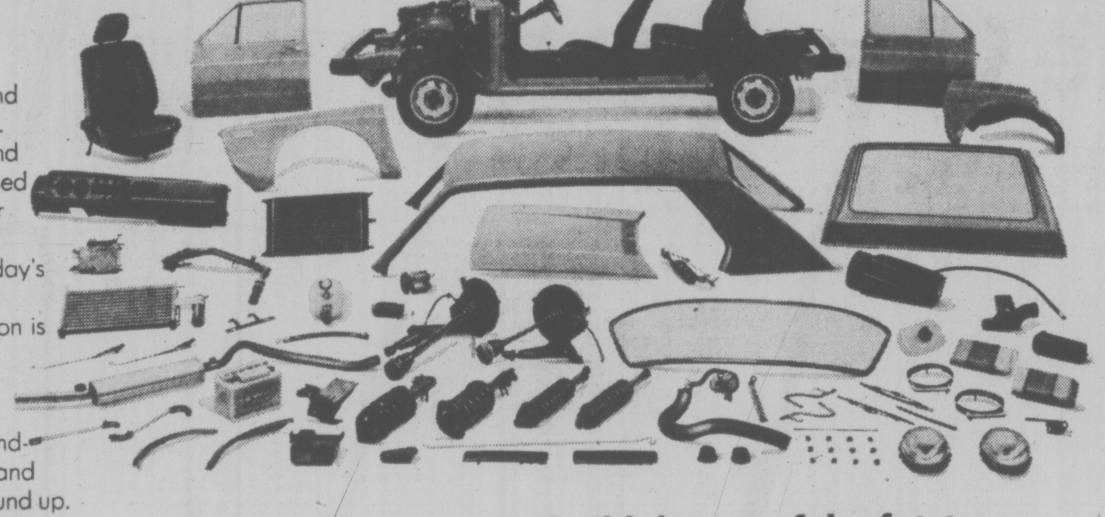
What you hear may change your life!

All cars aren't created equal.



The majority of "new" cars around today, are in matter of fact, "old" cars.

They're based on engineering and automotive concepts that have remained essentially unchanged the last number of years.

The past is not the answer to today's and tomorrow's driving needs.

A dynamic, genuinely new solution is required. A total re-think of every old concept of car design.

Enter the Volkswagen Rabbit.

It took our top engineers five mind-bending years of planning, inventing and testing to create it, fresh from the ground up.

Naturally, it gets sensational mileage. 45.2 miles per gallon on the highway and 30 in the city*. Unnaturally, the Rabbit can also give you incredible performance. 0 to 50 mph in a sizzling 7.7 seconds. (That combination alone is unmatched by any car in the world.)

When you set out to build the car of the future, you don't use parts from the past. We didn't.

Also, by putting the engine in sideways up front, we created a terrific amount of space in back. (A staggering 87% of the car is sheer passenger and cargo area.)

Besides carrying four people comfortably, the Rabbit can also carry the things that people need to carry.

With the rear seat folded down it's got more trunk space than a Cadillac Fleetwood.

And thanks to its rear hatchback, you can load odd-shaped items that won't fit in most other cars.

For an exhilarating ride, the Rabbit has the precision of rack-and-pinion steering.

It has front disc brakes.

A unique "independent stabilizer rear axle" makes the car more stable on rough roads. Add to that, front-wheel drive for superior road-hugging capabilities.

And since it's a tough world out there, the Rabbit's reassuring safety package includes a "unitized safety cell" passenger compartment.

There are self-restoring bumpers. Reinforced steel side beams in the doors.

There's a dual diagonal brake circuit. (If one circuit should go, a second one is still there.)

A double-jointed steering column breaks aside in the event of impact.

Even the rear window defrosts electrically.

All in all, no details were overlooked in its creation.

Inside or out.

Stop in at your nearest Volkswagen dealership and take a Volkswagen Rabbit out for an uncompromising test drive.

It's more than equal to the task.

The Volkswagen Rabbit
There's no comparison.

Swedish Goalie Stumbling Block

VIENNA (CP) — Coach Johnny Wilson praised the opposing netminder and had little to say about the officiating after Canada dropped a 4-2 decision to Sweden in the world hockey championship Friday night.

Goaltender Georan Hoegosta, considered to be the Swedes' No. 2 goalie behind Hardy Astroem, was one of the main reasons for Canada's setback as he stopped 25 shots — many from close range.

Wilson may have had some legitimate reasons for criticizing referee Ivo Filip of Czechoslovakia, but Canada had plenty of chances to win the contest when the team was at full strength.

"I'm not going to comment on the officiating," Wilson said.

"We took some bad penalties at probably crucial times which we have all along. It's cost us some hockey games. At least, put them on the scoreboard before we could get organized."

The Canadians, represented by 21 National Hockey League players, received eight minors and a major — Wilf Paiement of Colorado Rockies was assessed three minors and the major while the Swedes got four minors.

Mats Ahlberg's goal at 5:43 of the first period, giving the Swedes a 1-0 lead, was the only scoring done on the power play.

In other games Friday, defending-champion Czechoslovakia downed West Germany 9-3, the Soviet Union beat Finland 11-6 and the Unted States, which lost its first game 4-1 to Canada on Thursday night, beat Romania 7-2.

The results left the Swedes, the Czechs and Russians in first place with 2-0 records, followed by Canada and the U.S. at 1-1, and Romania, West Germany and Finland with 0-2 marks.

The Swedes led 2-0 after the first period with goals by Ahlberg and Lars Eric Ericsson, a breakaway, at 7:08.

Ericsson increased the margin to 3-0 at 7:07 of the second period before Jean Pronovost narrowed the deficit.

Wilson pulled goalie Tony Esposito with 43 seconds remaining in the game and Pierre Larouche scored at 19:34 with Pronovost assisting to make it 3-2 for Sweden.

However, 14 seconds later, Per Olov Brasar found the empty net from centre ice and clinched the victory for Sweden.

The Canadian felt he was on the opposite side of the centre line when he fired the puck but general manager Derek Holmes wasn't sure whether he would protest the goal.

The Swedes had 19 shots on Esposito, who appeared shaky at times, and a good number of them came from power plays.

Paiment, who scored 41 goals this season and took 101 minutes in penalties, stormed off the ice after the contest, refusing to participate in the traditional ceremony of shaking hands.

However, after a brief argument with Alan Eagleson, chairman of international hockey for Canada, the right winger met several of the Swedes.

Commenting on his penalties, Paiment said: "I don't know, maybe I was trying too hard. It didn't help the team to be in the penalty box. I know I've got to cut down."

Eagleson, executive-director of the NHL Players Association and Paiement's agent, said the 21-year-old native of Earlton, Ont., has been taking too many penalties.

The tournament resumes Sunday with four games scheduled. Romania meets Czechoslovakia in the first game, then Finland takes on Sweden, West Germany plays the U.S., and Canada takes on the Soviet Union.

Still Critical

VANCOUVER (CP) — The professional football career of running back Barry Houlihan was in jeopardy Friday as he remained in critical condition in Vancouver General Hospital after an automobile accident.

A spokesman for the B.C. Lions said Houlihan suffered a severed thumb, broken jaw, leg fractures and lacerations, broken tailbone and ruptured spleen.

BRONCOS SWEPT ASIDE

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Brandon Wheat Kings needed overtime Friday night to defeat Lethbridge Broncos 8-7 before 3598 fans — and win their best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League semi-final in four straight games.

Brad McCrimmon scored at the 6:41 mark of sudden-death overtime to give Wheat Kings the right to meet New Westminster Bruins in the final starting Tuesday at Brandon.

Wheat Kings, who trailed 7-5 with less than three minutes remaining in regulation time, got goals from Kelly Ferner and McCrimmon 10 seconds apart to force the overtime. Ferner scored at 17:45 and McCrimmon at 17:55.

Brandon also got goals from Tim Lockridge, Bill Derlago, Dick Kerr, Murray Thomson, and Ray Allison.

Steven Tambellini scored three times for Lethbridge with other goals going to Doug Morrison, Dean Solheim, Darryl Sutter and Mike Schneider.

Brandon fired 48 shots at netminder Rollie Boutin. Glen Hanlon in the Brandon net faced 36 shots.

Nine minor penalties were handed out, five to Brandon and the teams shared two majors and two misconducts.

Beck Named MVP

CALGARY (CP) — New Westminster Bruins' defenceman Barry Beck was the only player in the Western Canada Hockey League to win two awards.

He was named most valuable player and top defenceman in voting conducted by the 12 coaches. There were no unanimous choices.

Brian Propp of Brandon Wheat Kings was named rookie of the year and Brandon coach Dunc McCallum named coach of the year.

Steve Tambellini of Lethbridge Broncos was named most gentlemanly player. He received 90 points, 10 more than Tony Currie of Portland Winter Hawks. Tambellini earned 84 scoring points while picking up only 23 penalty minutes during the 1976-77 regular season.

Each first-place vote for each award was worth 20 points while each second-place vote received 10 points.

Beck, a stalwart of the New Westminster defence, contributed 16 goals and 46 assists in 61 games. He missed the last 11 games of the regular season with viral pneumonia.

Brandon goaltender Glen Hanlon had earlier won the top goaltender's award by registering the best goals-against average.

Following is the complete voting for the awards:

Most Valuable Player — Barry Beck, New Westminster, 100; Kevin McCarthy, Winnipeg Monarchs, 70; Bill Derlago, Brandon, 50; Glen Hanlon, 30; Rocky Saganiuk, Lethbridge Broncos, 30; Murray Bannerman, Victoria Cougars, 20; Brad Maxwell, New Westminster, 10; Dave Parro, Saskatoon Blades, 10; Reg Kerr, Kamloops Chiefs, 10.

Rookie of the Year — Brian Propp, Brandon, 160; Brad McCrimmon, Brandon, 80; Rocky Saganiuk, Lethbridge, 30; Perry Turnbull, Portland Winter Hawks, 20; Brent Ashton, Saskatoon, 20; Geordie Robertson, Victoria, 10.

Top Defenceman — Barry Beck, New Westminster, 170; Kevin McCarthy, Winnipeg, 100; Brad Maxwell, New Westminster, 50; Wayne Ramsey, Brandon, 10.

Most Gentlemanly Player With Ability — Steve Tambellini, Lethbridge, 90; Tony Currie, Portland, 80; Tom Roulston, Winnipeg, 40; Brian Propp, Brandon, 40; Ron Areshekoff, Medicine Hat Tigers, 20; Bill Derlago, Brandon, 20; Curt Fraser, Victoria, 20; Tom Bast, Medicine Hat, 10.

Coach of the Year — Dunc McCallum, Brandon, 200; Mickey Keating, Flin Flon Bombers, 60; Gerry Brisson, Winnipeg, 20; Ken Hodge, Portland, 20; Harvey Roy, Kamloops 10; Jack Shupe, Medicine Hat, 10.

SMU Still the Champs

There is little doubt about it. Coach Mike Walsh's St. Michael's University School side is the king of high school rugby in Victoria.

For the third straight year, SMU captured the Howard Russell Cup with a 17-6 victory over Victoria High School Titans before 600 fans Friday at Windsor Park.

It was the fourth straight appearance in the final for SMU and the first for the Titans since 1973.

Vic High last won the trophy in 1964.

Although the final margin of victory gave a big edge to SMU, Vic High didn't give up without a struggle and were in the game through the first half.

Playing an aggressive game, Vic High might have taken the lead but kicker Mike De Goede missed two long penalty goal attempts early in the half.

The turn of the card came later when Keith Battersby, given the same opportunity for SMU, connected on two penalty goals and SMU had a 6-0 lead.

The Titans came back to score the only try of the half, Marty Mader going over from about five yards out and De Goede converting to bring the Titans even at the break 6-6.

In the second half, SMU dominated most of the action except for the sporadic Vic High foray.

Grant Jones set up Mike Drose for the prettiest try of the match, breaking through and then passing off to Drose who romped 20 yards for the score. Battersby missed the conversion attempt but was to get another chance a short time later when Dave Cousins went over for a try.

This time he made no mistake. SMU finished off the scoring with a penalty goal by Battersby about five minutes from time.

Because of other commitments, SMU, which finished second last year, will not take part in the annual B.C. championships at Coquitlam, May 13-14, but Victoria will be represented by three teams.

Vic High, Claremont and Spectrum will compete and Claremont warmed up for the tournament with a 34-0 victory over Garibaldi of Maple Ridge, Friday. Claremont will meet Mountain High School of Langley in another exhibition game at Claremont, Thursday at 3.30 p.m.

A Star Is Born in Texas As Hansis Scores Winner

By The Canadian Press

The state of Texas, long known for its oil wells, cowboys and panhandle, now can boast at least one hockey player.

Ron Hansis, the only native Texan ever to play major league hockey, scored a closerange goal 32 seconds into the final period Friday night to help Houston Aeros beat Edmonton Oilers 4-3 and wrap up their best-of-seven World Hockey Association quarter-final playoff series.

The two-time WHA champion Aeros clinched the series 4-1 and now advance to the semifinals beginning Tuesday night against either San Diego Mariners or Winnipeg Jets.

"I'm just thankful to the Aeros for giving me a chance to play," said Hansis, born in Brownsville, Tex., before moving north when he was two years old. "This has to be the biggest thrill I've ever had."

In the other quarter-final playoff Friday night, San Diego beat Winnipeg 3-1 to force and seventh game Sunday night in Winnipeg.

"This team was tougher than ever expected them to be," Aeros coach Bill Dineen said. "But our biggest incentive tonight was the thought of having to get back on that plane and go up there if we lost."

"It's been a struggle," said Oiler player-coach Glen Sather, who took over March 3 and rallied the team to the playoffs. "We were just glad to get here and give them a hard time.

At San Diego, where the Jets haven't won this season, Kevin Morrison started a three-goal outburst in a four-minute span of the second period to lead the Mariners to victory.

The third period was delayed for 25 minutes when Jets centre Ulf Nilsson entered the penalty box to resume a fight with Ray Adduono.

EDMONTON (3): Bryan Campbell (3rd), Dave Langevin (2nd), Randy Rota (3rd). HOUSTON (4): Rich Preston (3rd), Ted Taylor (3rd), Gordie Howe (2nd), Ron Hansis (1st). Attendance: 11,022.

WINNIPEG (1): Anders Hedberg (2nd). SAN DIEGO (3): John French (1st), Kevin Morrison (1st), Rich Sentes (4th). Attendance: 11,450.

BIDDING for fifth Vancouver Island Open golf crown is Cowichan professional Bill Wakeham (above). He'll face Gorge Vale amateur Dave Donaldson in one of four quarter-final matches scheduled to start at 9:30 a.m. Sunday at Glen Meadows. Winners go back on course for semi-finals starting at 1:45 p.m. Final will be played at Gorge Vale May 1.

Can Canadiens Do Better?

By The Canadian Press

Montreal Canadiens are in the unique position of having to improve on near-perfection.

Last year, the eventual National Hockey League champions had a bye in the first round, then took only 13 games to easily win the Stanley Cup, one more than the minimum.

The only game they lost was in the semi-finals to New York Islanders, the team they face at home in the Forum tonight in the opening game of this year's best-of-seven semi-final series.

Philadelphia Flyers, fresh from their six-game win over Toronto Maple Leafs in the quarter-finals, play host to Boston Bruins in the other semi-final series starting Sunday.

The Bruins, who took a three-game lead in their quarter-final with Los Angeles Kings before dropping the next two, finished off the Kings Thursday night in Los Angeles.

"You have to get out there and prepare yourself to win four games," said centre Doug Risebrough, now in his third year with the Canadiens and looking forward to having his name on the playoff championship trophy for the second consecutive season.

"The team has pride in itself with the successes. It took work to do that. In a short series, you can carry momentum or you can lose momentum."

In their four regular-season meetings, the Canadiens were winners each time and outscored New York 16-7.

But Islanders' coach Al Arbour does not appear concerned that his team must meet Montreal to try for the third year in a row to gain an elusive final berth.

"If we are going to win the Stanley Cup, we are going to have to beat them somewhere along the line," said Arbour. "What difference does it make if it's in the semi-finals or finals."

Four-Year Term Up, Charlton Quits Post

MIDDLESBROUGH, England (AP) — Former England soccer star Jackie Charlton resigned Friday as manager of Middlesbrough at the end of the four-year term he set when he took the job.

Charlton broke the news to reporters as he took up his First Division squad to Ipswich for an English League match today.

"There's no ill feeling involved," he said. "I've always said I'd leave after four years because that's as long as I wanted to do the job."

Charlton, 42 next month, is the fourth manager to quit or be fired in English soccer this week.

His former Leeds United colleague, Johnny Giles, announced on Wednesday he'll leave First Division West Bromwich Albion at the end of the season. Second Division Plymouth sacked Tony Waiters on Thursday and Stockport manager Eddie Quigley said he's leaving Fourth Division Stockport by mutual agreement with the club's bosses.

Charlton played 35 times for England and was a member of the squad that won the World Cup in London in 1966.

His playing career began when he signed with Leeds in 1952. He stayed with the northern club until he quit playing four years ago.

Cincinnati Fires Slater

CINCINNATI (AP) — Terry Slater was fired as coach of the World Hockey Association Cincinnati Stingers Friday, less than a week after his favored club was eliminated from the WHA playoffs in four straight games.

Bill DeWitt Jr., executive vice-president of the club, said the move was made because "we need a fresh start next year." He said the club had no immediate candidates to replace Slater.

Slater's three-year contract expires at the end of May. Slater will not remain with the club, a club spokesman said.

Slater, 38, termed the firing a shock. "It threw me. I did everything I could do with a young hockey club." He said he hopes to remain in pro hockey.

Thorburn Leads In Quarter-Final

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — Cliff Thorburn, 29-year-old Canadian snooker champion from Victoria and Toronto, took a 5-3 lead Friday over Eddie Charlton of Australia in the quarter-finals of the world championship. The second session of the 25-frame match will be played today.

Earlier, world amateur champion Doug Mountjoy of Wales beat Irish champion Alex Higgins 13-12 to qualify for the quarter-finals. Mountjoy and Thorburn are favored to meet in the final.

Thorburn, who defeated Rex Williams of Britain 13-6 on Thursday, took a 3-1 lead but the Australian champion fought back to tie the match 3-3 before the Canadian ended the four-hour, 10-minute session by winning the next two frames.

Although he wasn't in top form, Thorburn played doggedly, especially in the sixth frame when Charlton opened with a 51 break. Thorburn came back to tie at 64-64 before the Australian sank the tie-breaking black.

"That must have been one heavy suitcase!"

Leading Race Drivers Need Help

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

The schedule has been drawn up, a new Island circuit has been set up and the cars have been tuned up. Now bring on the sponsors, please.

Two top drivers are looking for new backers as Western Speedway prepares for its 24th opening night of stock car racing two weeks from tonight.

Roy Haslam, one of the more successful Victoria campaigners in the Pacific Northwest, and Bill Price, last year's superstock driving champion at Western, need sponsors.

Price, in fact, may be looking for a new car to replace the 1964 Chevelle he campaigned locally last year. It's reported to be on the trading block.

Haslam has his car back, a 1965 Chevelle, but he's trying to locate a major sponsor. So far he has lined up Malloch and Mosley logging, Empress Motors and Valvoline oil, but needs more help to spend another season on the northwest open circuit.

Last year Haslam ran 46 races, completing 43 of them and finishing in the top four 36 times. Considering the fact that he was up against some free-wheeling spenders, that's an impressive record.

"A car coming off the Island pretty well has to provide its own financing through race winnings," Haslam explained Friday at Western Speedway's pre-season press conference at the Tally-Ho Travelodge. "But a lot of the hot-shoes from the United States — drivers like Hershel McGriff (of Portland) and Don Dowdy (of Yakima) have a lot easier time finding sponsors. Money is more available in the States.

"A lot of the drivers down there have three engines where we usually have to make do with one. We must operate on the kind of budget where everything counts. We can't afford to buy equipment that isn't going to work. U.S. drivers, though, can buy different kinds of equipment and experiment with it. It gives then a big edge."

Haslam doesn't mean to cry poor, but facts are facts.

"You could class us as back-yard racers running in a businessman's world," he said. "Considering the circumstances, I'd say we're not doing badly."

Two years ago it cost Haslam about $23,000 to campaign throughout B.C., Alberta and the northwest U.S. Last year he cut back, reducing the cost to $18,000 to $19,000.

"We dropped out of the last two races of the IDC (International Drivers' Challenge series) for the first time since the series began," Haslam said. "The car wasn't winning enough for us to afford to continue. We have to rely on winnings to make it to the next race."

Haslam has about $20,000 tied up in the car. This is the third year he's campaigned it and he hopes to drive it in a three-day Can-Am series in Prince George May 21-23 (where he's the defending champion); the Canadian 8000 Nationals in Edmonton (again he's the defending champ) on June 21; the Carling Canada 200 at Western Sept. 10; the four-race B.C. Open Championship series at Western and Langley Speedways; the Grand National Western at Western Speedway in July and the IDC for superstocks at Yakima, Portland, twice at Western, Langley, Skagit and Olympia Tenino, also in July.

"If we can pick up more sponsors, we'll try to run some races in California," Haslam added.

The car currently contains a 350-cubic-inch engine but Haslam and his crew of Denny Rand, Ian Boon, Robert and Mel Pallister, Steve Beggs, Al Walton and Dave Ferguson hope to drop in a 427-inch mill for racing on the longer tracks.

CLOSING LAPS — There'll be 13 local hobby and superstock shows at Western this year along with an increased number of special stock car and open-wheel races. Drivers aiming for points championships will have to compete in the Island series at Nanaimo and Oyster River as well as Western to qualify . . . Langley Speedway, run by 19-year stock car driving veteran Gordie Himrich, rejoins the IDC superstock series for the first time in three years . . . Time trials at Western May 7 are 7 p.m. with racing for superstocks and hobbies at 8.

Announcing duties at the speedway this year will be handled by Reg Midgley, Ron Robinson and Bing Foster, who'll be starting his 29th season calling the cars. Robbie Dunn will again work the infield microphone . . . Pony cars — smaller versions of medium-sized cars — will be permitted for the first time this year and at least three will campaign: Al Wade in a 1973 Challenger, Bill Smith in a '70 Nova and Bobby Collins in a '68 Cougar.

When Doing Well Isn't Good Enough

By The Associated Press

Seattle Mariners did everything a team can do in a baseball game. Everything, that is, except win.

The Mariners got terrific fielding and pulled off a triple play, got splendid hitting and rallied to take a 5-4 lead in the eighth inning. But they didn't get the thing they needed most—the right pitch from Dave Pagan, a native of Swift Current, Sask.

Pagan gave George Brett something good to hit and the Kansas City slugger belted a two-run double with two out in the ninth inning to provide the Royals with a 6-5 American League victory Friday night.

Lee Stanton made a diving stop of Brett's hit in the right-centre field gap, one of many fine plays made by the Mariners. It stopped the ball from going to the wall, but it didn't stop the Royals' winning runs from scoring.

In Friday night's other American League games, Minnesota Twins beat Texas Rangers 4-1, California Angels turned back Milwaukee Brewers 7-4 and Chicago White Sox routed Oakland A's 8-2.

With two outs in the ninth, Kansas City's Fred Patek and Pete LaCock singled. Joe Zoeb pinch-ran for LaCock and eventually scored the winning run on Brett's double.

Roy Smalley, Lyman Bostock and Butch Wynegar hit home runs to account for all of Minnesota's scoring as the Twins defeated Texas. Bostock hit a two-run homer in the eighth after striking out three times against Texas starter Bert Blyleven.

Wayne Simpson pitched seven strong innings and Jerry Remy keyed a three-run rally in the fifth with a triple, leading California over Milwaukee.

In the National League, Dave Parker of Pittsburgh Pirates hit a two-run homer off Tom Seaver of the New York Mets in the eighth inning and Ed Ott singled home Phil Garner with the winning run in the ninth as the Pirates edged the Mets 4-3, Atlanta Braves scored two runs in the ninth to end Los Angeles Dodgers' seven-game winning streak 7-6, San Diego Padres defeated Houston Aeros 4-2, St. Louis Cardinals trampled Philadelphia Phillies 10-1, and Montreal Expos edged San Francisco Giants 3-2 in 10 innings.

Barber Gains Share of Lead

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — While Craig Stadler rested, Miller Barber caught up with him.

Barber fired a 66 Friday in the rain-delayed portion of the first round of the $175,000 New Orleans Open. The 66 score gave him a tie with Stadler going into today's second round.

Stadler got his 66 Thursday before lightning and rain cancelled play for the day. He didn't listen to news reports Friday as Barber made his charge. He didn't find out that he was no longer alone atop the heap until he came back to the Lakewood Country Club to practice.

"I didn't know what was going on today," Stadler said. "I figured I'd have company, but I didn't find out until I looked at the scoreboard a few minutes ago."

Six golfers—among them Masters champion Tom Watson—were tied at 68 going into today's round. Keith Fergus got his 68 Thursday. Bobby Cole, Don January, George Knudson of Toronto and Chi Chi Rodriguez got theirs Friday.

Pat Bradley Sets Record With 64

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) Hard-driving Pat Bradley, taking advantage of ideal weather conditions, pieced together a tournament record eight-under-par 64 for the first-round lead Friday in a $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Bradley's round, which included seven birdies and an eagle, enabled the fourth-year pro to take a three-stroke cushion over JoAnn Carner, who managed a 67 on the rolling 6239-yard par-72 North Ridge Countrp Club layout.

Just behind Bradley and Carner in the race for the $7,500 first-place prize were a pair of the LPGA's biggest stars, Judy Rankin and Kathy Whitworth, both of whom came in with rounds of 69.

Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., now living in Florida, had a 70, while Jocelyn Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., shot a 72 and Dale Shaw of Victoria carded a 78.

Jabbar 'Incredible' Says Laker Coach

By The Associated Press

The playoffs are a time when brilliant individual performances can do a lot to lift a team.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar came through for Los Angeles Lakers, Lloyd Free for Philadelphia '76ers and Dan Issel for Denver Nuggets on Friday night. That meant victories for all three teams as the National Basketball Association playoff quarter-finals continued.

Abdul-Jabbar was "incredible," said Lakers coach Jerry West. The seven-foot two centre amassed 40 points, collected 19 rebounds and blocked nine shots to power Los Angeles past the Golden State Warriors 95-86 for a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven matchup.

"It was one of the finest ball games I've seen an individual play from the standpoint of offence, defence and team play," marvelled West. "He was absolutely magnificent. It's a good feeling to have a force like that."

Free was benched in the first half for not shooting enough, but returned to bomb Boston Celtics from long range.

"What defence is designed to stop 28-foot shots?" asked Celtics centre Dave Cowens after Free collected 20 second-half points to pace Philadelphia's 109-100 triumph over Boston and give the '76ers a 2-1 lead in their series.

"If we'd lost, we'd really be in trouble," said Issel, whose 36 points and eight rebounds helped Denver score a 121-110 triumph over Portland Trail Blazers and tie that series at one victory apiece.

The Washington Bullets-Houston Rockets series, also tied 1-1, resumes with the rest of the matchups on Sunday afternoon.

The Nuggets broke the game open after Portland's Bill Walton fouled out in the fourth quarter. Maurice Lucas scored 29 points for the Trail Blazers, who hit seven of their first eight shots to take a 16-6 lead but faltered after their big centre departed.

OFFERS FOR RED SOX ACCEPTED

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Red Sox, owned by Tom Yawkey for 43 years until his death last July, are for sale.

In a statement issued this week, Mrs. Yawkey said: "Consideration will be given to offers to buy the Red Sox."

"Offers are not being sought nor will they be sought," the statement said. "A time limit is not in mind nor will one be fixed."

Dick O'Connell, executive vice-president and general manager of the American League baseball team, said the decision was made by trustees of the late owner's estate.

"We are not trying to keep anything secret," said O'Connell, a member of the estate's trusteeship. "We had a meeting Thursday. Then we told our employees first and then the players. Everything is out in the open."

The reported price mentioned for the purchase of the Red Sox was about $12 million. However, that appeared to be a low estimate because of the property involved.

NOTES FROM THE CANDIDATES' MATCHES

Korchnoi-Petrosian in Lucca, Italy.

Viktor Korchnoi of Holland (formerly of Russia) played a frosty match against Tigran Petrosian of the U.S.S.R., a former World Champion.

The two Grandmasters did not greet each other and as soon as one would make a move, he would get up and leave the table. Even the offer of a draw was made through the arbitor.

They drew a remarkably small house, about 20-30 spectators on the weekends, less than half that number at other times. A sad affair which Korchnoi eventually won 6½ to 5½.

Spassky-Hort in Reykjavik, Iceland.

In Reykjavik, the scene was different. Lots of spectators every day, but they were disappointed by too many listless draws.

Reykjavik must have brought back some bitter memories to Boris Spassky, who lost his world title there to Bobby Fischer in 1972. After 12 games his match with Vlastimil Hort of Czechoslovakia was tied — one win, one loss, ten drawn.

Larsen-Protisch in Rotterdam, Holland.

Here the great turn-out of spectators got more than their money's worth in the slugfest produced by Bent Larsen of Denmark and Lajos Portisch of Hungary. Lajos won the first and fourth games, Larsen won the third. But when he lost the sixth, Bent was not able to recover and once again lost his chance to become World Champion, a thing that he has claimed to be about to achieve more times than I can remember.

At the start of the match, the playing arena was invaded by a band, playing a Sousa March. The players were transferred to another site, only to be confronted by a Senior Citizens Chorale! The music finally ended and the chess began.

Mecking-Polugajevsky in Lucern, Switzerland.

Here, Alex Crisovan directed the match of Russia's Lev Polugajevsky and Henrique Mecking of Brazil. Lev should have won the first game, but drew; Henrique should have won the second but instead lost and suffered a nervous relapse which postponed the match for a few days. After that, it was almost all draws.

ROUND-UP

Korchnoi and Polugajevsky will meet in the semi-finals in June. Polugajevsky beat Mecking 6½-5½. Portisch beat Larsen 6½-3½. As this is written, the Spassky-Hort battle remains in doubt.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. N-K6, PxN; 2. Q-B mate; or 1 . . . PxB; 2. Q-B3 mate; or 1 . . . P-B4; 2. QxP mate; or 1 . . . P-B3; 2. Q-N4 mate.

Almanac Lists 101 Wonders

CHICAGO (AP) — More than 2,000 years have passed since Antipater of Sidon listed Seven Wonders of the World as a sightseeing guide for ancient Greeks on tour. In that time, all but the great pyramids of Egypt have passed into oblivion.

But a lot of genius has come and gone since the glory of Greece faded. To bring things up to date, the 1977 Rand McNally Traveller's Almanac combed the earth to make its own selection of 101 Wonders of the Modern World.

The Almanac's wonders include many old familiar favorites. There's the Greek's own Parthenon and the Romans' Forum, Colosseum and Pompeii. The Taj Mahal, the Eiffel Tower, St. Peter's Basilica and Westminster Abbey also made the top 101, as did Stonehenge, the Kremlin, the Empire State Building and the Grand Canyon.

Perhaps less well known are the walled medieval towns of Carcassonne and Rhodes, the underground Salt Cathedral of Colombia, the rock temples of Ellora and Ajanta in India, the rose-red city of Petra in Jordan, and Rhodesia's mysterious Zimbabwe Ruins, built entirely without mortar.

Other selections include the fjords of Norway, the Great Mosque of Cordoba, Leningrad's Hermitage Museum, Old Jerusalem, the palace and gardens of Versailles, the Church of St. Sophia in Istanbul, the Red Fort of Delhi, Hong Kong Harbor and the temples and tombs of Luxor.

Named among man's newest wonders are the ultra-modern city of Brasilia, rising like a futuristic vision from the midst of Brazil's wilderness; Gateway Arch in St. Louis, the tallest man-made monument on earth; Japan's bullet trains whizzing past age-old temples at 130 miles an hour.

City Firm Favored For Centre

DUNCAN — Farmer Construction Ltd. of Victoria will be recommended to build Duncan's multi-million dollar community centre.

The centre committee this week chose the Victoria firm but final approval must be given by Cowichan Valley Regional Board which meets next Wednesday.

Lowest bid was submitted by Grimwood Construction of Vancouver at $6,068,000. Farmer bid $6,086,000 and Cana Construction of Vancouver $6,087,000.

Farmer got the committee nod because it guaranteed completion within 72 weeks, considerably better than other bidders.

Patient Asked for Trudeau

RED DEER (CP) — A 63-year-old mental patient who escaped from Alberta Hospital at Edmonton Tuesday was apprehended Friday on Parliament Hill as he attempted to see Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, the Red Deer Advocate reported.

The Advocate said that police in Ottawa told it that Nikolay Bezprozewanny was taken into custody by RCMP security forces after he entered a government office building and asked where to find the prime minister.

Bezprozewanny, a patient at the hospital since 1966, was apparently seeking Trudeau's intervention to help him get his release from the hospital, police said.

He has been the subject of a province-wide alert since Tuesday and was described by police as dangerous.

Police said the man apparently travelled to Ottawa by train after saving the $55 senior citizens fare out of an allowance at the institution. He carried only the clothes he was wearing, an electric razor and a copy of a review board's decision on his apparent request for release or a hearing in November 1976.

He was co-operative and not unruly when taken into custody and was transferred to the Royal Ottawa Hospital.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 21-year-old man, whose young wife and child were in provincial court watching Friday, was sentenced to nine months in jail for an April 15 break-in at a medical-dental building.

Judge Harold Alder imposed the sentence on Clifford George of 1158 Yates, after reading the pre-sentence report.

George pleaded guilty April 15 to breaking and entering the medical-dental building at 1120 Yates earlier that morning. Victoria city police, tipped by a silent alarm, caught George, after a short chase, on the fifth floor of the building.

Defence-lawyer Ted Hanman, appealing for a lenient sentence, asked Alder to note that George had a serious problem with alcohol and that his client currently had his first real opportunity for gainful employment as a groundskeeper.

However, Crown counsel Robert Mulligan opposed the application, pointing out that George had had four appearances in adult court, three this year.

After passing sentence, Alder said he would recommend George be placed in the Alouette River unit for alcoholic rehabilitation.

An 18-year-old charged with attempted armed robbery in connection with Tuesday's holdup try of taxi driver Simon Leung in Esquimalt, elected trial by judge without jury.

Conrad Gregory Lucas, of 2049 Church, was also charged with possession of a dangerous weapon and was remanded in custody until next Friday to fix a date for a preliminary hearing.

A 22-year-old man who admitted he got a "little carried away" while testing out a motorcycle was fined $300 after pleading guilty to dangerous driving April 14 in Esquimalt.

Court was told William John Sargent, of 129 Gorge Road East, was spotted by Esquimalt police in the 1500-block Esquimalt.

A chase began just before the noon-hour traffic rush along Esquimalt Road and Mulligan told the court Sargent reached speeds of 65 miles an hour on Lyall Street before he was stopped. Sargent told police he was testing the bike which belonged to a dealer.

Two Victoria drivers were fined $500 for failing to remain at the scenes of accidents.

Timothy Allan Thornley, 27, of 1475 Fort, pleaded guilty to failing to stop at a motor vehicle accident in the 600-block McKenzie, Saanich. The mishap occurred at about 6:45 a.m. Feb. 8.

Also fined was 24-year-old Dale Marshall Rintoul, of 344 Irving. He pleaded guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an April 8 accident in the 1000-block Fort. Court was told Rintoul's vehicle hit another vehicle while changing lanes and didn't stop.

Fined Friday for having blood-alcohol contents over .08 were Glen Lee Johnston, 20, of 2011 Idlemore Road in Sooke, $500; and John Glen Poirier, 35, of Galiano Island, $500.

Hard Times Spawn Sugar-Plum Saga

A Film Review
By Nora Hutchison

Carradine as Guthrie . . . mythicized

Bound For Glory, Hal Ashby's film about American composer-singer Woody Guthrie, is so swathed in romanticized memories of the lean, hard Depression years that it can almost choke you. Ashby, I think, had in mind a saga of heroics and heart in which Woody would ride the rails from Texas to California, uniting the poor with his songs and his love; what he's got instead is a sort of folk opera with too many acts and not enough substance.

The screenplay, by Robert Getchell, is based on Guthrie's 1943 autobiography, and covers the period of the late 1930's when he left Pampa, Texas, where he and his wife and two children had settled, to escape the poverty of the town and the hold his family had on him. By hitchhiking, riding the rails and walking, he found himself in L.A. and quickly discovered that it wasn't a city paved in gold and oranges but littered instead with migrant workers desparately looking for some kind of relief.

Guthrie's social conscience was quickened by the disproportionate myth of the "golden" west where survival was not an easy game. Painting signs, charming the well-to-do volunteers in the soup kitchens and singing revolutionary tunes to the squatters in the migrant workers' camps, combined with a certain native cunning and luck had, as its end result, a successful audition with a local country-music show on radio, and Woody was suddenly a part, though only a small part, of the L.A. entertainment scene.

All this is by way of setting up the conflict Ashby and Getchell have excerpted from the autobiography — will the California ethic compromise Woody's ideals? With a modest success behind him as costar of a show with Ozark Bule (a brightly cheerful folksinger who sings union songs to the farm workers in the afternoons and then performs innocuous country hits on radio at night), Woody is offered his own show, with one condition, that he provide his sponsors with a list of his material in advance of airtime (they like his style but they're terrified of his politics). And his wife wants him to comply, too; she's tired of their haphazard style of living.

Woody sees the problem as a clear-cut choice — between his family whom he loves in an off-hand kind of way, and "the people", to whom he honestly believes he has brought spiritual comfort and encouragement. This screenplay gives us Guthrie uncorrupted — there is no compromise possible.

Woody's friends say he had a natural talent for making up songs, that they used to "pour out like a mountain stream". They say he felt as if he were one of the voices of the people. The problem with the movie is that there is no hint that Guthrie, who saw himself as a troubadour for the left, was aware of the political implications of his music.

Did he ever wonder if he was being used by the union organizers, the Communists or the pro-Communists, who were so involved with the greater goals that they paid little attention to the immediate consequences their actions were having on the people they had set out to help? Did he think that his being lionized by the radical chic of the late 1930's really helped his chances of "touching the people"?

The movie's focus is too much on the myth. Guthrie, as portrayed here, couldn't have really existed — the compulsive drifter borne down with ideals; the family man who's too restless to stay Guthrie's life, could support a loosely structured, episodic screenplay.

Ashby believed that the film would work as a picture of the time, that the essence of the period would give it momentum, and he has worked terribly hard to provide images reflective of that time. Most of the movie is extraordinarily handsome, and throughout there is a sense of documentary realism, a little like that reflected in the photographs of Dorothea Lange or the film of Pare Lorenz — images that document the grim reality of the Depression.

But the images of this film — the people of the dust bowl, the migrant camps, the farm workers, the western highways crowded with families in pickup trucks, their possessions strapped on the sides — are suffused with a glow of sentiment. And the epic journey of those people, represented by Woody's rail-riding, union-organizing adventures, takes on an uncomfortably self-conscious sort of aura.

Clearly, Ashby really loved the possibilities that this movie had a folk-epic, and as a reflection of the American spirit, and I think that he put; the middle-class Oklahoman, caught up in the flux of the Depression, and radicalized by the "salt of the earth". The screenplay ignores the ambiguities of Guthrie's character. It scantifies him instead. He was, in many ways, a tough, thoughtless guy who used his family and friends when he needed them but ignored their needs. The movie, however, suggests that he couldn't keep his family without compromising his ideals.

As Guthrie, David Carradine is often very good. He makes us see Woody as hard-headed and determined about his own destiny, and his physical sense of Guthrie is right, too. He gives him a loose, shambling stride, and it's a nice juxtaposition to the emotion he lays in the character — a tautness, like a kid who had been told not to let his feelings show.

Hal Ashby has a particularly good eye for detail, and a very strong sense of how to make Movies work visually. His last film, Shampoo, was a social, sexual and political farce set on election eve 1968, and it neatly observed the mores unique to those months. Ashby says that he made Shampoo because he felt that it told something about the America of 1968. He wanted to make Bound for Glory because he believed that it could tell us a great deal about the America of the 1930's — "people working hard and trying to get out from under, and realizing that human rights were more important than property rights."

In an interview with Ashby earlier this year, he told me that he "loved the concept of Guthrie as the folk artist who managed with his music to reach a whole segement of the American people." And it's likely that he thought that the warming, camp-fire circle feeling of togetherness of such Guthrie tunes as This Train is Bound for Glory, or This Land Is Your Land, for example, and the folksy background of thought that it would have appeal for all those people who are looking for their roots in that era, and who are trying to back away from the implications of the 1970's.

He sees Woody as the little guy who fought against greed, who found himself in the people, who believed that brotherhood was the most positive thing he could wish for. But the movie plays false to itself. It glorifies the hard times Guthrie fought against. It's a golden view of a dust-grey era.

SHAKESPEARE'S Taming of the Shrew is the inspiration for the Cole Porter musical, Kiss Me Kate, Victoria Operatic Society's spring production which opens at McPherson Playhouse Friday. Bianca, shrewish Kate's charming, younger sister, is played by Barb Shears, seen with three eager suitors who are forbidden to woo her seriously until the elder sister finds a husband. Suitors are, from left, Ron Webb, John Birtt and David Underwood. Directing the show which runs through May 7, is Colin Skinner. Charles Dorrington, baritone, stars as Petruchio.

Turn It Down, Please

audrey johnson

The Greater Victoria Music Festival for 1977, which gets into full swing Monday after preliminary rounds of folk dance sessions this week, may be physically fatiguing for those like myself who follow it keenly from day to day, but at least we can count on one thing: It won't be ear-splitting.

Of all the gimmick-oriented and mostly indefensible practises that plague our world the one having the least logic and one of the greatest potentials for harm is the fad for heavy-handed electronic amplification on every possible occasion. The only glimmer of hope has been that because of its sheer irrationality, this love affair with the boosting of sound to its optimum decibles would die an unlamented death.

It probably will eventually, but that death is too long coming and in the meantime too many occasions that should be pleasurable are made into hideous experiences.

It's not the rock groups, the folk and country performers that bother me. They would if I ventured in their direction, but freedom of choice allows me the privilege of staying away.

And the fact that thousands of young people who have spent their teen years under a fairly constant barrage of souped-up sound will probably be plagued with hearing problems in middle life, is something no one can do anything about.

A few years ago in Victoria a group of talented teenaged musicians put on a performance of that delightful and near-perfect rock oratorio, Joseph and His Technicolor Dreamcoat.

It was very well done but within my enthusiasm and admiration for the young group there was just the one reservation — that I would have enjoyed it that much more if the sound level had been a little closer to natural. Still, that could be overlooked on the grounds that it was the current style and like most styles, would pass.

But only the years have passed so far. Years that have seen sound amplification cropping up where it has no right or reason to be. As a specific example, there was a long-awaited visit of Canada's third professional ballet company in February — Les Grands Ballets Canadiens.

The finances connected with touring a big dance company across this country being an astronomical affair, probably no one expected an orchestra in the pit. An orchestra on tape was fine and a better solution to the problem than, for instance, the duo pianists who used to accompany one if our national companies.

That is, it could have been. The classical, and one of the principal items on the program was Swan Lake, Act I. The lush Tchaikowsky score, a-drip with melodic romanticism, poured out — alas — several levels above the natural and ample sound of a pit orchestra.

Why? What possible excuse could there be for such blatant tastelessness and effrontery to the artistic integrity of the whole?

The effect for me, and many others who have since commented on it, was to almost completely hinder enjoyment of both the dancing and the music to a point where we wished we were anywhere but in the Royal Theatre on that occasion.

It seems strange in a period when so much emphasis is being placed on naturalness — foods, fibres, life-styles generally — and particularly by the young generation, that something so anti-natural and destructive of the more sensitive levels of hearing should be the vogue.

Experts tell me there is no question but that too continuous exposure to such volumes of noise are desensitizing to our aural faculties. There are many of us to whom sound of that intensity is not just potentially harmful but actually painful.

The fairly recent symphony ball was a case in point. The band was probably not aware of the numbers of people who retreated to the outer foyer with throats sore from trying to converse, buzzing ears and incipient headaches.

Surely the dance music for a symphony ball should be more in keeping with the maturity and tastes of the people who typically patronize such an event.

Well, having had my say (the irritation has been suppurating for a long time) and being aware of the need to keep an open mind, I'd like to extend an invitation — or even a challenge:

I'd really like to hear from someone on the subject; someone who would be prepared to defend the heavy use of amplification and could give me sensible or at least entertainable reasons for the massive whomping up of the sound of the Irish Rovers, for instance, or any pop group in live concert, or any other musical event.

I'd like them to make the attempt to convince me that it is not just a question of a useful electronic device being abused by non-discriminating people. I promise to listen with ears somewhat numbed but still alert.

Amity Plans New Season

A similar format to the successful one followed by Amity Singers for the 1976-77 season is to be followed by the chamber choir group in 1977-78.

With the last notes of the Bach St. John Passion barely stilled in Christ Church Cathedral, Amity announces that the first concert of the fall will take place Oct. 19 and 20 and will again consist of an evening of candlelight and song in the Empress Hotel crystal ballroom.

Conducted by musical director Jon Washburn, the choir will feature folk songs from Canada and Europe. Following will be another Amity Christmas at the Cathedral on Dec. 17 in which festive music will be accompanied by Victoria's professional Western Brass Quintet.

Final concert on April 21, 1978, will feature Mozart's Requiem with guest soloists and chamber orchestra.

Norman Organ Recital

An organ recital of music by Bach, Handel, Reger, Leighton and Widor will be presented by Edward Norman, organist of St. John's Anglican Church, Wednesday at 8 p.m. The church is at the corner of Quadra and Mason.

Other Wednesday recitals scheduled include one of music for tuba, trombone and flute entitled Both Ends of the Spectrum — a reference to the extremes of range offered by this unusual selection of instruments. Artists will be Eugene Dowling, tuba; Tom Eadie, trombone, and Barbara Eadie, flute. Norman will accompany the group. This will take place May 11.

AT THE GALLERIES

An unusual exhibition of great richness and charm is scheduled to open at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria on Wednesday at an invitational preview. Three Centuries of Needlework is comprised of English, Spanish, Turkish, Greek, Chinese and American embroideries ranging from early 17th century to the present time.

Included will be 20 pieces by the late Mrs. Nancy Pendray and recent embroidery by talented Victorians. The exhibition has been organized by Mrs. Peggy Bartholomew. There will also be demonstrations several times a week during the exhibition's three-and-a-half week course.

Also opening at the Gallery Wednesday and on view until May 22 will be a series of drawings and lithographs by young Vancouver artist Catharine MacTavish, and an exhibition of work by Liz Magor.

Ending Sunday will be the Takao Tanabe paintings, Goya, Disasters of War, Part Two, and the children's exhibition from Richmond Elementary School.

Paintings and drawings relating to the nude figure are the subject of a month-long show opening at Utley's Art Galleries, 9182 East Saanich (just off McTavish), Friday. The preview opening hours are 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and the show continues through May 29.

Artists involved are Nita Forrest, Myfanwy Pavelic, Valentina Polushin, Herbert Siebner, Jack Wilkinson and Windsor Utley.

Another gallery in the Sidney area is Truffles Art and Craft Gallery, 2417 Beacon Avenue, which will feature an exhibition entitled Portraits of Nature, a series of watercolors by Peggy Day.

A preview and reception to meet the artist will take place Sunday, May 1 from 2 to 5 p.m. Daily hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The exhibition will be on view through May 14.

At the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, drawings of Jessie Lovering and Sid Barron are on view until May 6. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Choral Concert

A choral concert featuring the Theresa Mass by Joseph Haydn will be presented at St. John's Church, Quadra, Sunday at 8 p.m. The performance, however, is not a liturgical one, but a straight concert by the combined choirs of St. John's, Glenlyon School and the Cantabile Singers.

Madeleine Groos, who for the past nine months has been choir director at St. John's, will conduct the choir. Miss Groos, who has done fine work with all three choirs, will be leaving in the near future to take up residence in Europe and this concert represents some of her last work here.

Also leaving Victoria shortly is Christ Church Cathedral assistant organist Paul Halley, who will accompany the performance of the Mass.

There is no admission charge but a collection will be taken.

No Sparks

SASKATOON (CP) — A hotbox on a Canadian National Railways freight train has been ruled out as the cause of fire last week in the city that resulted in $200,000 damage to businesses in the industrial area.

Police detective Ken Wagner said Friday CN officials checked a scanner tape which showed no leaks in any of the train wheel hub casings. But Wagner said in an interview he still believes the train is responsible for the blaze.

GOSLEY . . . the target

Jerry Gosley Roast 'Just for Fun(d)s'

There's a dual purpose behind the Jerry Gosley "Roast" which is to take place next Saturday at Cedar Hill Community Centre. It's to honor the 25th anniversary of the Smile Show that occurs this summer and to bankroll Four Seasons Musical Theatre Society's upcoming season of Gilbert and Sullivan, Noel Coward and Victorian Vaudeville.

The Just For Fun(d)s dinner dance and Roast will see personalities Bebe Eversfield (emceeing the show), Charles Barber, Ida Clarkson, Mel Cooper, Jock Dunbar, Gorde Hunter, Len Lauk and Steve Ivings among others, taking pot-shots at Jerry.

Entertainment will be provided by Bill Hosie and Dan Costain with excerpts from the recent Belfry show, Puttin On the Ritz; songs by the Four Seasons Musical Theatre group consisting of Marge Adelberg, John Heath, Nan Long, Richard Margison, Janie Woods-Morris and Susan Word, and a quartet from Puccini's comic opera, Gianni Schicchi.

Dancing will be to favorite tunes played by Howard Denike and friends. All this will follow a steak dinner by Felice with all the trimmings. The dinner is at 7:30 p.m.

Proceedings begin at 7 p.m. and all artists and others are donating their time and talents to the occasion. Tickets are $25 a couple and the amount is tax-deductible. Singles are available at $12.50. Reservations can be made by calling 598-8307 (afternoons only).

EEC Takes Stand On Rights

LONDON (Reuter) — The European Economic Community (EEC) will seek U.S. backing for their stand on human rights in Eastern Europe when President Carter comes here next month, EEC officials said this week.

Meeting here Monday, EEC foreign ministers agreed to maintain pressure on the Soviet Union and its allies for better treatment of dissidents while not embarkng on a crusade.

Some EEC countries, notably West Germany, have felt President Carter adopted too high a profile in his support for dissidents in Communist countries.

At a NATO summit here next month, the Western allies will try to align their positions for the Belgrade conference opening on June 15 to review progress on detente since the 1975 East-West Helsinki declaration.

The nine believe that progress in all sectors of the Helsinki "final act"—its economic as well as its human aspects—should be considered in parallel, the officials said.

On Africa, the other main topic of their meeting Monday, the EEC ministers backed the Zaire government's efforts to safeguard its territorial integrity and indirectly warned the Soviet Union against trying to set up a sphere of influence in Africa.

They also backed efforts by British Foreign Secretary David Owen to resume the stalled negotiations on Rhodesia's future.

Variety Marks Week at Belfry

A week of entertainment at The Belfry, starting Sunday, will cover song, theatre, dance and a one-man show based on uniquely Canadian material.

Sunday's artist is Jane Mortifee, who will appear in concert singing a program ranging from Piaf-like chansons to folk and rock. She will be accompanied by instrumentalists Wayne Kozak, Brett Wade, Gerry Inman, Rene Worst and Jim Vallance. Time is 8 p.m.

Victoria Youth Theatre returns to The Belfry stage Tuesday through Thursday with productions of Chamber Music by absurdist playwright Arthur Kopit and an original piece created by Youth Theatre members under the direction of Jim Leard.

Friday and Saturday will be devoted to performances by the Terminal City Dance group from Vancouver. This is an emsemble of seven who draw individually on a personal vision of dance, both as choreographers and performers, and on a wide vari teyo backgrounds.

The result is a unique dance idiom incorporating ballet, modern dance, mime, yoga and gymnastics. The group comes to The Belfry from an engagement at Edmonton's Espace Tournesol.

The Great Canadian Gold Rush is the title of Hank Stinson's recounting of stories and poems based on the works of Robert Service, at The Belfry, May 1. Stinson has performed several times in Victoria, including playing a principal role in Bastion Theatre's The Fantasticks last season.

All the shows begin at 8 p.m. and ticket information is available at The Belfry, 1291 Fernwood, 385-6815.

Homemade UFO Really Flies?

ACAPULCO (UPI) — A Mexican engineer says he has built a model of a flying saucer with a "completely new metal system" that makes it fly when hit with a one million-volt electrical charge.

Guillermo Jaimes Gonzalez, who also says he is in touch with alien beings, showed off his small, gleaming model Friday at the International Congress on UFO Phenomena, which ends today.

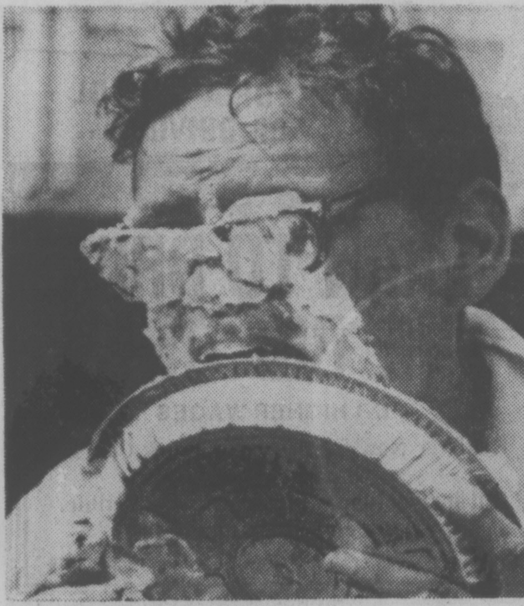
He refused to divulge his building materials but said they convert solar energy into electricity and enable the model to fly and perform odd manoeuvres of which "real" flying saucers are said to be capable.

Gonzalez read a paper on his experiments that was so technical most of the audience had trouble following it. But mathematicians and physicists who heard him said his reasoning seemed "pretty sound."

Conference organizer Guillermo Brave of Mexico said the meeting had lost about $45,000 because only about 200 paying believers came to this Pacific coast resort.

Gonzalez said flying saucers from other worlds have visited earth to observe magnetic changes and that in recent years they had caused a series of earthquakes and other physical disasters.

He had a list of temblors in a dozen countries and said he could demonstrate a relationship between the frequency and intensity of the quakes and the sum of the digits of the dates on which they occurred.



FACED WITH VICTORY — and lemon meringue pie — Dudley Albrecht took a no-holds-barred approach to a pie-eating contest during Gold Rush Days at California State University in Sacramento. His total involvement in the competition paid off when he was declared the winner, despite sticky competition.

ATLANTIC SOLO ON A RAFT

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexican archaeologist Santiago Genoves, who three times has crossed the Atlantic in tiny boats, has announced a fourth trans-Atlantic voyage aboard a motorless raft, this time alone.

He plans to set sail in about 10 days from somewhere on Africa's west coast or the Canary Islands and expects to land somewhere in the Caribbean 100 days later.

"The northern equatorial current and the Aliseos winds should take me to some place in the Americas," said the archaeologist, who will carry no electronic gear except for a radio. He will also take a sextant.

Genoves, 53, designed his metal-framed, $70,000 raft, named "Solo," and had it built in Japan.

"The only danger is that a ship or a whale could run it over," he said. "If it's turned over, I'll be able to right it."

It has a single mast. All food and equipment will be stored on the raft's sides.

He will eat cold meat most of the time along with any fish he catches. The boat will carry 53 gallons of fresh water.

Genoves took part in the Ra I, Ra II and Acali expeditions with Scandinavian explorer Thor Heyerdhal.

25 BEERS NOT DAILY: BILLY CARTER

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Billy Carter, here for a charity fund-raising weekend, says his smoking and drinking habits have been blown out of proportion by reporters.

"Ain't no way I could drink as much as they say I do," the president's brother said Friday. "Maybe some days I do smoke six packs of cigarettes. Some days maybe I drink 20 to 25 beers — but not every day."

The American Cancer Society withdrew its participation in the weekend events after Carter said recently in an interview that he is not concerned about cigarette smoking being linked to cancer.

Queen's an Old Friend: Idi

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Ugandan President Idi Amin says he will go to London this summer to celebrate Queen Elizabeth's 25th year on the throne and chat with her about "the secrets we share."

Amin also said Friday reports of mass killings in his country were not true and said his people were "actually enjoying themselves."

On a surprise visit to Kinshasa to offer help to President Mobuto Sese Seko in fighting invaders in the south, Amin said he had known Queen Elizabeth well "even before her husband, Prince Philip."

"We know each other very well," he told reporters. "No one knows the secrets we share."

Amin said he will take 250 other Ugandans when he goes to London in June to help the monarch celebrate her silver jubilee, and already has sent security agents disguised as businessmen to scout various hotels.

The British government has expressed concern over Amin's plans to visit London, and there have been reports he will not be invited to the traditional meeting of leaders of former British Commonwealth countries and colonies.

Coffee Costs $25 —For One Shot

VANCOUVER — It cost a 50-year-old sportscaster $25 to throw a cup of coffee during a National Hockey League game Jan. 15 at the Pacific Coliseum.

Al Davidson of Coquitlam pleaded guilty Friday in provincial court to a charge of common assault — dumping a cup of hot coffee on public relations man Mike Sone, 40, of Vancouver.

Defence counsel said there had been "bad blood" between the two due to Davidson's on-air criticism of British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference, for whom Sone previously had worked.

Sone's way of responding to the criticism was to walk up to Davidson at a party and inquire about the sexual preferences of Davidson's daughters.

LONDON — British wartime comic Issy Bonn died here in a nursing home Thursday. He was 74. His trademark was a dry Jewish humor. A singer as well as a comedian, Bonn rose to fame in the 1930s as a radio performer after being discovered in an east-end music hall act.

PARIS — Margaret Trudeau refused to co-operate with French photographers waiting for her in Paris Friday night.

While they chased after two taxis apparently called to her hotel to mislead them, Mrs. Trudeau slipped out a back door.

After she returned to her hotel shortly before 2 a.m. today, it was learned she had dined at a Paris restaurant with officials of French mineral water firms.

SAINT JOHN, N.B. — Malcolm Curtiss Mott, 18, has been jailed for failure to comply with the terms of an earlier probation order from the court.

Mott was convicted March 28 of making a false statement to police and was granted probation if he copied the four-page statement 200 times.

Mott has been given cell space, paper and pen and given until Monday to complete the copies.

For your friends, a condominium, townhouse or apartment is well worth studying. They probably regard Victoria itself as a tiny city. To live on the waterfont in the Inner Harbour provides them with one of the most interesting and everchanging views on the Island. Parliament, parks, the museum and the heart of the city are all within easy stroll.

Laurel Point condominium apartments are large. One and two-bedroom models are available. Features include fireplaces, balconies, roof patios with barbecues. The seven luxury tri-level townhouses are 3,000 square feet.

For people who prefer to stay home, Laurel Point has its own library and club rooms, a workshop, swimming pool and saunas. Prices range from $60-$160,000.

Northern Game again at Woodward's

We are pleased to be able once again to offer this domesticated Northern Game that proved to be so popular with our customers last year. In 1976 we obtained a supply because Silas Kangegana, the owner of "Canadian Reindeer Ltd." had a sales problem. The wild cariboo had been so plentiful that the local residents, whom Silas traditionally supplied, had their freezers filled. The Federal Department of Agriculture asked Woodward's to aid Mr. Kangegana by marketing his surplus supply. The response by our customers to the roasts and steaks we offered was overwhelming, and we said that if arrangements could be made we would like to offer Northern Game as a yearly feature, at least. Silas and his 6-man Eskimo herder team have rounded up the prime animals, and a federal inspector has supervised and graded the meat. There is a limited quantity at Woodward's Food Floors now . . . so shop early!

Fork Used to Pin Amok Malaysians

By KENNETH L. WHITING

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — The national museum here holds an impressive cultural sampling of Malaysia, including a two-item exhibit on running amuck, or amok in local spelling.

One looks like a pitchfork with serrated inner edges on metal prongs set far enough apart to fit around a man's neck.

Mounted on a wall next to this non-agricultural tool is a drawing titled "a Malay running amok." It shows a frenzied, knife-wielding man being chased on foot by other fellows carrying spears and this amok fork to pin him down if-when they catch him.

The Malay translation of amok is "to run wildly with desire to kill." The act of running amok is known as "mengamok"; the person who does so is a "pengamok." It's said to be an affliction unique to Malaya.

The museum's amok fork shows little sign of wear, perhaps because those who valued their skins seldom tried to bring the pengamok back alive.

"Amok is the Malay equivalent of suicide," says Encyclopedia Britannica.

"Some cases are due to sudden madness, some to disease, some to the heat of the peninsula and others to the use of drugs. A typical amok may be connected with the wish to die fighting," another encyclopedia reports.

There's more to it than that, according to the physician who is Malaysia's deputy minister.

In a book The Malay Dilemma, published in 1970, Dr. Mahathir bin Mohamad said a Malay who runs amok has finally burst cultural bonds which impose a lifestyle of deference and restraint.

"The courtesy and self-effacing habits of the Malays are but one aspect of the Malay character. The constant restraint the Malay imposes on himself is unnatural. There is always an internal struggle, a conflict, and this conflict finds expression in a variety of ways," Dr. Mahathir wrote.

Amok represents the external physical expression of the conflict within the Malay which his perpetual conservance of the rules and regulations of his life causes in him. It is a final and complete escape from reasoning and training.

"But the transition from the self-effacing courteous Malay to the amok is always a slow process," Dr. Mahathir wrote.

"It is so slow that it may never come about at all. He may go to his grave before the turmoil in him explodes."

"WE DO A COMPLETE JOB"

Our major industries are in trouble.

People are leaving to work in Alberta. Businesses are leaving to re-locate in Washington State. Over 100,000 people are unemployed.

High unemployment means we have to pay more than we should in unemployment insurance and welfare costs.

It means that workers lose their jobs, and their homes.
It means $540,000,000 in lost productivity.

ICBC rates went up 100-300%. The sales tax went up 40%. Business went down.

But, the Socred regime did give a $32 million tax break to the millionaires, by abolishing succession duties.

The economy of B.C. is in trouble. And the government does nothing.

For small business, they've done nothing. And there's been no major capital investment in 16 months.
There is no planning, and no economic strategy. We call it an economic emergency.

They call it "pay-as-you-go".

Millionaire Offers To Buy Orient Express

By ADRIAN DARMON

PARIS (Reuter) — When the French railway announced that the famed Orient Express train would end its career in May, a millionaire telephoned from Texas and said: "OK, I'll buy it."

The magnate—his identity was not disclosed—was unaware that the celebrated train which started to run from Paris to Constantinople in 1883 had been reduced to one car.

The single car contains 11 compartments, a Compagnie des Wagons Lits spokesman said.

"The train has become a legend because of writers like Agatha Christie and Paul Morand," he said.

The original Orient Express, which was carpeted throughout, its carriages decorated with velvet, crystal chandeliers and expensive furniture, disappeared on the outbreak of the First World War.

For more than 30 years, it was the meeting place of kings, nobles, millionaires and diplomats.

The First World War disrupted operations and by the time peace came another train, the Simplon-Orient Express was carrying high-society travellers between Paris and Istanbul.

Paul Morand wrote that the Orient Express had lost its trappings with the rise of a new generation of diplomats and the fall of the old aristocratic class.

A third train which crossed through Switzerland and Austria, the Arlberg-Orient Express was inaugurated in 1924. In the 1930s only part of the old Orient Express reached Istanbul after a stop in Budapest.

After the Second World War, the route to Turkey was abandoned by the Orient Express. The expansion of airlines forced the French railway to cut down the number of sleeping cars, and modernization eased all traces of the "belle epoque" era.

In 1962 a new express train, the Direct Orient, was introduced but only one of its cars reached Istanbul. It is this leeping car, described as the last relic of the original Orient Express, which will make its last trip to Turkey next month.

When Belgian engineer Georges Nagelmackers started the Compagnie des Wagons Lits, he did not know his Orient Express train would become a legend.

From 1883 to 1889 the trip to Constantinople took 81 hours and 30 minutes. The train stopped at Varna, a Black Sea resort in Bulgaria. From there, travellers transferred to a ferry to reach the Turkish city.

In 1889, the trip was reduced to 67 hours and 35 minutes with the 246-foot-long train reaching Constantinople via Sofia.

This train was the one which founded the legend, with its 2,-000-mile journey, its luxury and its distinguished travellers.

The Orient Express was also called "the train of kings." When Leopold II of Belgium travelled, the company added an extra car for his mistress, Cleo de Merode.

Abdul Hamid, the Sultan of Turkey, always brought his harem with him and no ticket collector ever dared to check the car booked for his wives.

Despite May's official closing, the Orient Express may well live again. A Swiss company last year organized a special trip from Zurich to Istanbul aboard carriages dating back to 1925.

Some 75 passengers paid $750 each for the return trip and received lavish treatment with dances and dinner parties.

Credit Unions In the Red

WINNIPEG (CP) — Thirty of Manitoba's 56 credit unions were in the red last year and had a combined deficit of $5.6 million, the annual meeting of the Co-Operative Credit Society of Manitoba was told.

Douglas Ramsey, general manager of the Manitoba Credit Union stabilization fund, said most of the institutions are not in financial difficulties despite the deficits.

The most serious losses in 1976 were at the Dauphin Plains and Cartwright credit unions. The Dauphin Plains institution received a grant of $250,000 from the stabilization fund and an interest-free loan of $1 million.

Ramsey said the 26 other credit unions in the province which are operating profitably have a total of $9.2 million in general reserves, so the movement as a whole has net general reserve of $3.6 million.

Better Food or Fancy Casket?

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: I don't agree with what my sister's doing. I'd like to see if you do. She's saving up a little money from her pension cheques every month, putting it aside for her dog's funeral. She plans a big, expensive funeral for Peppy, including a fancy casket and plot which costs a small fortune. She thinks it's terribly important that Peppy be laid away in style. Peppy isn't dead yet. In fact, he doesn't look like he has any intention of dying soon. I think he'd do even better if she'd feed him better. She buys the cheapest dog food she can find so she'll have money left over to save for his funeral. To me her priorities are all turned around. What do you think — T.K.

DEAR T.K.: Agreed. She should put HER money where HIS mouth is. Certainly Peppy's personal priorities would place being fed ahead of being buried. Peppy's plan, if he had his druthers, would undoubtedly be to put all available resources into a longer, happier life, and making do with whatever's available when it's over. Preparing for a pet's death is a task neglected by many. I personally consider this no great omission. Certainly if it comes to a choice, how much better to take care of and revere the living than the dead. Ideally, one would do both. If it comes to a choice, though, you can bet Peppy would prefer a good meal and a pat on the head to a padded casket.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The older my cat, Sundance, gets, the more she drools. It's getting very messy around here. Any way I could get her to desist? — B.W.

DEAR V.W.: Stopping Sun- the common mouth problems dance's saliva flow, or at least reducing it some, is feasible if it's related to some of which include gum infections and (in older cats) loss of the front teeth. This allows the tongue to hang out a little, providing a pathway for saliva flow. Drooling is often related to involuntary nerve stimulation of the salivary glands. The cat is usually nervous or happy. If the latter condition's the cause, you wouldn't want to turn it off, but a checkup by your veterinarian regarding the condition of the mouth — as well as other parts of the anatomy — seems reasonable.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If I'd followed you advice and kept Peterkins in a cage he'd be alive today. I wouldn't have sat on him. Pretty Boy, my new parakeet, is going to be kept in his flight cage. You can bet on it. He's going to have the right temperature, no drafts, plenty of attention, and I'm going to keep track of him so I'll know if he's getting sick. What else can I be doing to help keep him a long, long time? — G.B.

DEAR G.B.: Your parakeet preservation program sounds good. Locating a local bird-oriented veterinarian is an important first step, however, since, ideally, a new bird should be examined immediately after purchase to be sure you're not starting with a problem. He can also give you important pointers on bird nutrition, a very important area since malnutrition is the most common chronic problem parakeets encounter.

Since seeds should form the base of the budgie diet, high-quality fresh seeds, along with the basic canary and millet seeds and as much variety as possible, help considerably in maintaining good nutrition.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Both times that I've taken a trip to Mexico, I've come back with Montezuma's revenge. On our last trip, we took our dog with us, and she got it, too, or at least I think that was it. Could it have been? — I.L.

DEAR I.L.: Escherichia coli is the most common cause of the diarrhea affecting newly-arrived visitors in Mexico. Your canine could have been afflicted with the same organism, though there are numerous other possibilities for dog diarrhea south of the border AND north.

If you find roots above the ground on the plants you set out late last summer, gently push them into the soil. If the ground's too wet or still frozen, cover the bare roots with shredded bark or coarse sand (not leaf mulch because it packs too much). If you don't protect the roots, the plant could die.

In case you didn't know it, colored exterior finishes on bakeware allow for baking 25 degrees lower than plain-finished pans. The colored finishes increase heat retention. But no matter what type of baking pans you use, adjust the oven racks to divide the oven space evenly. Stagger baking dishes so that there's free air circulation around each one. You'll take out better baked foods if you do.

Roots Leave Him Smiling

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Mack Gill picks up a piece of plant root from his native India and swishes it around in a cup of boiling water.

When the end is sterilized, soft and beginning to shred, he grins, puts it in his mouth and uses it to brush his teeth.

"It might look unusual but it tastes very minty, sweetens your breath, whitens your teeth and is completely natural," said Gill, owner of a clothing store in this city and a fledgling cosmetic-manufacturing company in Pembroke, Ont.

He said he plans to revolutionize the cosmetic industry with toothpaste made from a powdered form of the root, which he will not identify in case competitiors try to steal the idea.

Gill said in an interview that his formulas for natural cosmetics, incense and perfumes have been approved by the federal research institute of Canada. He hoped to begin producing those products in a few months at the Pembroke plant of his company, Trafalgar Square Cosmetics Ltd.

Meanwhile, the federal food and drug administration has been doing tests on the toothpaste, which he said will contain no chemicals.

Gill, in Canada for three years, said most toothpastes on the market do not really clean the teeth.

"They do not have many abrasive elements and are mostly synthetic and artificial. There is a large market for other cosmetic products made from essential herbs and roots; why not this."

He said it was a food and drug spokesman who told him the toothpaste might cause a revolution in the industry because it worked so well.

"When I saw other companies' toothpaste formulas, I was really shocked. They use chalks, flavoring, fluoride, a little bit of a chemical used in some detergents and a lot of sugar and water.

Tracking Down Fever

your health

I have had fever of one or many months. It's so frustrat- two degrees above normal for ing to go from doctor to doctor and not be able to find out once and for all what causes this. Is there any hospital or doctor who is a specialist in this kind of a problem? — Mr. H.U., Calif.

Dear Mr. U.:

Fever of unknown origin is perplexing to patients and to physicians. There are few more difficult experiences in the practice of medicine than the inability to establish the casue of unexplained fever.

When first confronted by such a baffling problem, doctors consider all the possibillities and then procee to rule each one bout be detailed studies.

Going "from doctor to doctor" only complicates the problem because no one phusician is given sufficient time to uncover the cause o fthe fever.

Infections are always prominent n the cause of sustained fever. The other conditions tumors (benign or malig- that must be considered are malaria, liver disease, vascular diseases, lung disorders fever, rheumatoid arthritis, amoebic dysentery, rheumatic nant), typhoid fever, typhus, and a variety of intestinal problems.

These conditions represent a fraction of the long list of possibilities to be eliminated unexplained fever. in determining the reasons for cause consists of intricate

A thorough search for the blood agglutination tests, sedimentation rate studies and chest, the liver, the gallbladder and the intestinal tract can add crucial knowledge to the correct diagnosis.

There is no hospital or doctor that specializes in unexplained fever. I suggest that you stay with one physician. Let him become the clearinghouse for consultations. Co-ordination between you and him is the key to tracking down such a puzzling body disorder.

I notice that I get hoarse just before my menstrual period. Is there any explanation for this? — Miss D. L., Maine

Dear Miss L.:

The pre-menstrual and menstrual phase may bring with it changes in body chemistry and accumulation of fluids in the tissues of the body. Just as other tissues, such as the breasts, may become engorged, so is it possible for the delicate covering of the vocal chords to be affected. This may account for your hoarseness. Have your doctor check your larynx for other possible causes.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Give Mother a fragrant flowering plant . . .

Unfortunately we've never been a mother . . . but we have it from unimpeachable sources that mothers of all ages enjoy receiving gifts of plants from their offspring on Mother's Day! . . . Plants are so alive . . . they live on and remind our mother every day of how much she's loved! . . . which brings us to Leaves Alive Plant Shop in Cordova Bay Plaza which we visited last week . . . Such beautiful plants of all kinds . . . and we assure you from personal experience that they're good, healthy plants that with proper care will last literally for years! . . . By next weekend Leaves Alive should have received most of their gorgeous flowering plants . . . Hibiscus in a variety of colors . . . Tree fuschias, potted gardenias and roses . . . mums and African violets . . . and spring baskets full of geraniums . . . lovely to hang on mother's balcony if she lives in an apartment . . . There are lush green tropicals of all kinds . . . pretty macrame hangers, and wicker baskets to display then in . . . Honestly, just thinking about all this leafy beauty makes us want to rush back! . . . Anyway, you'll find it not only enjoyable but well worth your while to take a spin out to Cordova Bay and visit Leaves Alive . . . Not only are their plants extra fresh and healthy . . . but they're priced lower than anything you'll find in town! . . . (Shop's open on Sunday too from noon to 4 p.m.) . . . Leaves Alive Plant Shop, 5126 Cordova Bay Rd., 658-1131.

Quality gifts from Norway . . .

Back last fall we told you about a newly-opened gift shop on Oak Bay Ave. . . , Nor-Design Imports . . . and what beautiful and tasteful Norwegian merchandise they carry . . . Well, we visited Nor-Design again this week . . . and are more "sold" on it than ever! . . . Noticed many new patterns in their big selection of 100% cotton fabrics . . . Nordic designs in unbelievably beautiful colors . . . suitable for draperies, slip covers, cushions, long skirts . . . in fact anything your imagination can devise! . . . New, too, are the linen place mats packaged in sets of four . . . two different sizes . . . glorious colors and patterns . . . More choice items are the Royal Copenhagen faience ash trays, boxes, vases, etc. . . . each individually hand-finished . . . almost collectors' items, we're told . . . Crystal mobiles in the shape of stars, bells and birds are intriguing . . . David-Anderson jewellery includes little enamel zodiac medallions which can be worn on either a neck chain or charm bracelet . . . and oxidized sterling zodiac rings . . . There are slender crystal candle holders for tapers . . . Stainless-steel cutlery with rosewood or teak handles (very well priced) . . . Little glass fish, and animals on the endangered species list . . . (A percentage of the sale of these goes to the Wildlife Fund . . . so if you buy one you're helping the real animals too!) . . . For that special gift, visit . . . Nor-Design Imports, 2027 Oak Bay Ave., 595-3414.

Exciting Albert Nipon cottons for summer . . .

Visiting Gibson's is like walking into a copy of Vogue come to life! This week we were shown the new looks in Albert Nipon 100% cotton dresses . . . so very new that not by the wildest stretch of imagination could you mistake them for anything but spring and summer 1977! . . . Instead of describing styles individually, we'll just give you the highlights which make them out of the ordinary . . . Narrow stripes . . . small tops . . fitted and tucked . . . scoop necks . . . elastic at cuffs . . . short jackets on the two-piece styles . . . dark striped cottons . . . straighter skirts . . . But we simply must mention the "big city" summer dresses . . . one a black cotton sundress with striped trim on the back yoke of jacket and around the pleated skirt . . . and a classic striped shirtwaist in camel and navy . . . You could wear the former all day . . . then take off the jacket for cocktails and dinner! . . . There are about 12 different styles in these Albert Nipon dresses . . . All are smart . . . many are downright exciting! . . . Moreover, every single one of them comes with a matching scarf! . . . We're sure you'll want to see them soon . . . and while you're there look at the first collection of Halston scarves now on display at . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

The last word in skin care plus . . .

A lot of us women spend time and money on dressing up our bodies . . . but seem to largely forget our faces . . . which, if they're not properly cared for, will make a lot of the foregoing count for naught! . . . What we're trying to say is, that facial treatments at Cosmetique a la Carte . . . using the latest European methods . . . will do absolute wonders for your whole appearance . . . besides relaxing you and making you feel like a new woman . . . You ll leave the studio after a couple of hours walking on air . . . And all for an outlay of just $15! . . . This is a good time of year to have a special peeling treatment if your skin warrants it . . . It's painless, it refreshes the skin and fades blemishes . . . wrinkled skin can be rejuvenated with a collagen treatment . . . Two new services now being offered at Cosmetique are electrolyses by the Instantron method . . . which removes unwanted hair PERMANENTLY . . . and Minnie Smith nails . . . Not artificial or glued on, but actually built up on your own nails . . . Liza Minelli, Cher and other glamorous ladies all have these remarkably beautiful nails . . . and so can you! . . . Especially-trained Alexandra here at Cosmetique will build you new nails and then manicure them with a special machine! . . If your nails are brittle . . . or you're a nail biter . . . you'll be enchanted with your lovely new nails! . . . Why not make an appointment for a new you at . . . Cosmetique a la Carte, 830C Pembroke St., 388-5353.

You'll have a ball at the Bath Boutique! . . .

For goodness sake, what are big gorgeous shopping bags with wheels on the bottom doing in a bathroom shop? we wondered when we breezed into the Bath Boutique last Monday . . . Seems that owners Wally and Louise McMullen couldn't resist them . . . and now we understand why! . . . So if you have to do your grocery shopping via Shank's mare . . . do go get yourself one pronto . . . you'll love it! . . . Apart from all the almost irresistible bathroom accessories at the Boutique . . . there are any number of small items which would make unusual gifts . . . like the rolls of toilet paper printed with crossword puzzles which you can actually work out! . . . you get a suction cup wiht pen and a solution book . . . all for $1.98 . . . There's another roll printed all over with $100 bills . . . one way to get that rich feeling, we'd say! . . . We picked up a little Swiss sachet with an initial done in petit point . . . smells delicious, and great to tuck in a card or letter . . . If you've trouble with messy bath soap . . . get one of the magnetic soap holders . . . we bless the day we procured ours! . . . Admired the Bath Boutique's new line of bathroom accessories to match the colors of their Fieldcrest towels . . . All sorts of things to make a bathroom a perfect symphony! . . . Bath Boutique, James Bay Square, Simcoe and Menzies St., 385-2523.

Beautiful casuals at Roy Imports . . .

Visited Roy Imports new Village Shop yet? . . . If not, don't wait another day! It's so very attractive and the new spring clothes will delight you! . . . This week Roy's received their spring shipment of Liberty blouses . . . 100% cotton, easy to launder as a handkerchief . . . Tagged at just $35! . . . Noticed a couple of very smart Jaeger tailored pantsuits in a wool and polyester blend. One is hot pink, the other emerald . . . $185 for these . . . Pair-Ups Unwanted

DEAR ABBY: I am a reasonably attractive, well-mannered bachelor in my late 30s who receives many social invitations. I recently turned down an invitation to a dinner party. I frankly told the hostess that I was no longer accepting invitations that did not allow me to bring my own date. Very irately she told me that if I didn't want to go to parties alone I should get married.

Why do so many people think a single person should be eager to accept invitations to go to a party alone? I always feel like a fifth wheel, or else I get stuck with a dateless woman who shares my embarrassment. Am I wrong? — SINGLE SIMON.

DEAR SIMON: If you'd rather bring your own date than gamble on what the hostess has paired you off with, say so. But most bachelors are invited to parties to provide escorts for the single women. And I'd like to see the dateless woman who would feel "embarrassed" to find her dinner companion a reasonably attractive, well-mannered bachelor.

DEAR ABBY: For a long time I've suspected that my husband had an apartment or room or girlfriend somewhere because he would leave home in a gray suit and come back in navy blue.

When I first called him on this, he tried to make me believe I was losing my mind.

I am sure there is nothing wrong with me, and he is obviously changing clothes somewhere. What do you think of a man like that? — HOUSEWIFE.

DEAR HOUSEWIFE: I think your husband has: (1) more suits than he needs; (2) a closet elsewhere; (3) a very poor memory.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you print this. I'm sick and tired of people telling me to smile. If I'm not smiling and they don't like it, they can always look the other way.

I've had people come up to me and ask who I'm mad at just because I'm not smiling. That really bugs me.

Friends and relatives keep telling he I should smile more. Abby, if a person doesn't smile, there could be a reason for it. They could have a serious problem or some kind of illness, and they don't appreciate having some stupid idiot tell them to smile.

If somebody is ugly or sick, you wouldn't go up to them and say, "Boy, are you ever ugly," or, "Gee, you look sick." To me it's the same thing.—NO GEISHA GIRL.

DEAR NO: I understand your irritation, but I don't agree with you. Facial expressions are habit-forming. A smile is a universal, unspoken bid for friendship. A gloomy countenance, for whatever reason, turns people off. Think about it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who has two daughters, ages 7 and 5. The 5-year-old strangled her cat with a ribbon and seemed very pleased with herself. When I asked her whatever made her do such a terrible thing, she said, "My brain told me to do it," and she showed no remorse whatsoever.

The 7-year-old confided that she has been stealing money from her friends and school supplies from school. She says she knows it is wrong, but she can't stop doing it.

The girls' mother knows all this, and says she doesn't see anything "unusual" about it. ("All kids steal and kill animals — it's just part of growing up.") She even hides these facts from her husband.

I am worried sick. Tell me what to do before it's too late. — A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: The mother and daughters need treatment, and as a friend who's "worried sick," you should tell the woman's husband what's going on immediately!

KNIT and CHAT

Shades Can Be Saved

By MAY E. MacLEAN

If for some reason the edge of a bedroom window shade becomes soiled, torn or generally in need of repair, why not use a border of crochet? I saw an excellent example of crochet used in this way in a lovely bedroom which had been exquisitely furnished with antiques.

I immediately thought of my pattern No. 7703 which appeared in the column just a few weeks ago. It was featured as the border trimming for a long hostess gown, in the popular spider web design. As this particular border is six and three-quarter inches deep, it would be ideal for using for an edge to a window shade, and would look rather pretty with the sunlight shining through the pattern.

Another border crochet pattern which would be suitable for the same idea is No. 7704, this too appeared a few weeks ago as the trimming for a lampshade. The lower border has the crocheted bobbles, which would make a rather interesting border for a shade.

By the way, for those of you that have inquired whether I have another crocheted lampshade pattern, I do have two others. No. 7453 is Trimming for a Tiffany Lampshade, with the long deep fringe. No. 7564 is an over-all lacy design in crochet which gives a very pretty effect with the light on.

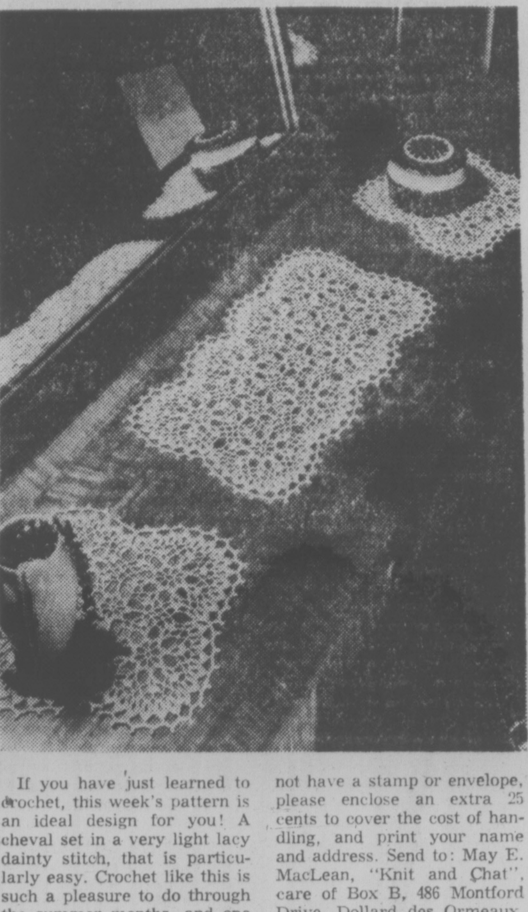
By now with the warmer weather we are all thinking of summer handbags, so why not crochet yourself one this year? Three very pretty styles are given on leaflet No. 7158, you can even add beads to one of the designs for that added glamour!

If you would like a crochet Tote Bag, more in style with today's younger look — Instructions are on Leaflet No. 7457. While on No. 7351 there are instructions for a very attractive shoulder style, crochet with the aid of curtain rings, giving a different and unique appearance!

Many readers have written asking for crochet basket instructions, and I do have two leaflets. No. 6852 is a very pretty design having ribbon threaded through the handle. No. 7365 is a slightly taller basket in the pineapple design. Both of these baskets would hold real flowers provioding you use a slim bud vase. Or if you want to use the plastic flowers, they will look equally attractive.

I should mention here No. 6864 which I consider a rather unique design, being in the shape of a water-lily. The green leaves are spread on the table, while the flower petals which can be crocheted in either ecru or pink, form a cup which can hold a small pot, either a plant or flowers.

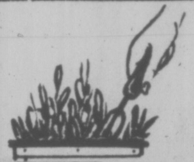
In closing this week, I would like to thank the readers who have added a line or two to their letters with good wishes for a speedy recovery from my car accident. I have appreciated your kind thoughts, and though I have not fully recovered, I am feeling quite a bit better.



If you have just learned to crochet, this week's pattern is an ideal design for you! A cheval set in a very light lacy dainty stitch, that is particularly easy. Crochet like this is such a pleasure to do through the summer months, and one or two of these mats make ideal gifts.

To order Leaflet No. 7708, or any other leaflet mentioned, send 75 cents for each, PLUS a stamped, self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling, and print your name and address. Send to: May E. MacLean, "Knit and Chat", care of Box B, 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, P.Q. H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. All patterns are now 75 cents. Please allow two weeks for normal delivery.



indoor gardens

Spring is here — the season of new beginnings, new awakening. Romantics have written much about the season of love in bloom, the season of life.

The plants eagerly greet the spring by stretching, readying themselves to grow, to reach their potential and to realize the purpose of their lives as they go toward the light.

Planting, nurturing and loving our plants is our service to them. Fruit on the tree, flower on the vine and the lush greenness of our houseplants are our rewards.

Now is the time to get your houseplants ready to grow. Check all your plants to see if they need transplanting. (Remember to use only indoor potting mix and not too big a pot.)

Aerate by stirring with a fork below the soil and begin a regular feeding program (once a month) supplementing the plant food (fertilizer) with a vitamin-hormone. A warm bath will be appreciated after sitting all winter in overheated rooms. Above all, open up the windows and get as much fresh air into your environment as possible.

There is no better time to prepare your cuttings than early spring. By the end of summer your plant population ought to increase dramatically.

It is through our service to our plants, performed unselfishly and with love, that we experience the rebirth of nature.

Religious Barriers Fall

It's more than seven years now since Mrs. H. H. Youson, then president of the United Church Women's Presbyterial received a letter that was to result in an imaginative experiment that today is a well-established fact.

That letter, written in the fall of 1969, by Mrs. L .Shelling of Chemainus, president of the Catholic Women's League, suggested that the three large denominations — Anglican, Catholic and United Church — join in a movement that would see women's groups from many religions, working together in community projects.

Mrs. Youson liked the idea. She, in turn, got in touch with Mrs. F. A. Goodwin, president of the Anglican Church Women of the Victoria diocese, who also saw promise in the suggestion.

A committee was formed with representatives from the three denominations. There was a series of meetings (the first in Mrs. Youson's home) where decisions were made on ways and means of presenting the idea to as many church women as possible.

Finally, with preliminary plans completed, the Sacred Heart Parish offered its hall for a first general meeting.

There, more than 200 women met in their individual groups in the morning and then, in the afternoon, joined together to form the Ecumenical Women's Outreach.

Mary Youson remembers the enthusiasm generated that day.

"When women from Baptist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Free Methodist, Catholic, Anglican and United Churches, the Salvation Army and the Society of Friends, pledged to work together to help the young and the old, the sick, the poor and the handicapped."

No time was wasted. A steering committee was named also several sub-committees, each with representatives from the various denominations. The first workshop, titled Live-Love, and hosted by the United Church Presbyterial was held in the spring of 1970.

It chose six community concerns on which to focus attention — minority groups, poverty, alienation, youth's turmoils, the aged and special needs of the handicapped and those in chronic care.

One of these concerns, it was decided, would be taken up each year, starting with the aged and their needs.

Second workshop, in the spring of 1971 was titled The People's Tree and it was centred on nursing homes.

Laura Hagglund, a United Church representative on the steering committee and presently immediate past president of the EWO, remembers that workshop was a tremendous success.

"We were assisted by an advisory committee from the Community Council as well as key people from some of the nursing homes. And at the end of that day 140 members of the Ecumenical Women's Outreach volunteered to go into nursing homes and lead singing, write letters, form auxiliaries and give therapy."

It was then decided to hold two events a year, a workshop in the spring focusing on community concerns and a fall rally, focusing on sharing experiences as church women around the world.

One of the workshops was titled The Human Touch, and centred on mental health.

Here, the slogan "people for people" was stressed, the idea behind it being "the head, the hands and the heart of the community nourishing the mental health and the emotional needs in our society." Again, EWO volunteers went out to help.

Another workshop, named A Happy Home on a Shoestring, brought together women on small incomes to learn how to stretch the dollar, provide nutritious meals at little cost and to keep within a budget.

Others focused on youth problems, on educating women to the need for specific action regarding wills, pensions, funerals and estates, and on family life conferences as a part o fcommunity services.

Discussions were held on ways and means of influencing movie houses to show cleaner pictures, on relief centres, the spiritual aspects of the EWO and coming together through music, sharing and fellowship.

The Ecumenical Women's Outreach was instrumental in forming an auxiliary at Glendale Hospital and for several years, took responsibility of organizing spiritual services at the hospital.

When Ugandan refugees came here in 1972, the EWO was amongst the first to offer aid and help.

In 1974 it agreed to future sponsorship of the annual World Day of Prayer and in the past two years has also arranged a world prayer gathering in the rotunda at the Legislative Buildings on the first Friday in March, with Jara Smith, now vice-president of the EWO, conducting the service.

Interest has been maintained and support given the Girls' Hostel, the Indian Centre and Crisis Line.

Now, plans are being finalized for the 1977 spring workshop in Metropolitan United Church, next Wednesday, April 27, commencing at 10 a.m. and titled Youth — We Do Care.

Current EWO president, Miss Margaret Thompson, will act as chairman, assisted by Mrs. Smith, the treasurer, Dorothy Parry, and a host of other members.

Major questions will include what help is available when trouble starts, how can the churches help, how can trouble be prevented before it starts, and how can the EWO best make opportunities known to young pople who most need them.

Probation officer Linda Neville, human resources supervisor Gerry Webb and YW-YMCA executive director William Skinner, will lead the discussions.

Those attending are asked to bring with them "a shared box lunch." Tea and coffee will be provided.

All the denominations that joined the EWO back in 1969 are still active, with exception of the Free Methodists.

"However, we would like many, many more," Margaret Thompson says.

Then she issued an invitation to women's groups of any denomination to attend next Wednesday's workshop, with thought of joining this movement that has successfully broken down barriers between religions and in which members are working together to help in community efforts wherever help is needed.

Split Decision

NEW YORK (CP) — For the woman who likes the freshness of summer dresses but also wants the ease of pants, MIF, an Israeli-based fashion firm, casts its vote for the split skirt. It takes a drawstring strapless dress, divides the skirt and teams it with a simple cut, wide-sleeved and patch-pocketed jacket.

CHINA EYES TRADE

CANTON (WP) — China has begun to fulfill its promise of a new era in foreign trade with a spurt of buying at the spring trade fair here, foreign traders report.

At least 6,000 visitors, 20 per cent more than turned out at a similar fair here last fall, have been drawn to this south China city by a series of hints from Peking of renewed foreign trade after the purge last October of an anti-trade faction in the Communist party.

Although they have no solid figure as yet, foreign traders, including Americans, say important contracts are near signature for sales of agricultural, chemical, mineral and perhaps mining equipment.

It is unusual for the Chinese to discuss purchases so early in a fair devoted largely to sales of Chinese goods. But the Chinese traders seem impelled by a decision of a new administration of Chairman Hua Kuo-feng to seek out needed foreign technology.

A front-page editorial in the Chinese Communist newspaper People's Daily Tuesday recalled the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung's advice to "use foreign things to serve China" when the country needed new technology and equipment.

In an interview Wednesday, a vice secretary-general of the fair, Po Shu-sen, repeated the editorial's advice. "We consider that by importing foreign technology, we will fortify our self-reliance and help increase the pace of development of the national economy," Po said.

The reports of Chinese purchases help ease bad news received by traders hoping for good deals in Chinese agricultural products.

No Early Hope for U.K. Pensions

By DAVID MACDONALD
Times London Bureau

LONDON — The shrinking value of British pensions paid to some residents of Canada is unlikely to change very soon, thanks to Britain's parlous economic condition.

This unfortunate situation will continue depsite vigorous efforts by the government of Canada, including a visit to London by Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde.

The problem is that about 23,000 former residents of Britain are now drawing their British pensions in Canada and the value is being eroded annually by inflation. The value has also dropped because of the effective devaluation of the sinking pound in the last three or four years.

Thus these people will be finding it harder to make ends meet while watching Canadians on Canadian pensions benefit from the annual increases they have been getting since Canadian pensions were fully indexed to the cost of living in early 1974.

The numbers of these unfortunates will grow because there are over 300,000 persons now living in Canada who have acquired pension rights under the British state pension scheme.

Naturally, those now suffering and those soon to suffer have been protesting to Ottawa and demanding action. They have also applied political pressure in Britain through their families, which have badgered their constituency members of Parlaiment.

Britain has agreements with about 20 countries, including Finland, Turkey, Spain, Portugal, and Malta, under which British residents there are given pension increases annually to take account of the British rate of inflation. This is the same benefit now given to pensioners resident in Britain.

No such agreement yet exists with Canada and Lalonde came to London to put the case of Canadian residents drawing British pensions. He saw David Ennals, secretary of state for health and social services, who said that while Britain does not object in principle to signing an agreement with Canada, getting the funds to pay the extra pension payments might be difficult in an era of public expenditure cuts.

Britain now pays out about $5 million annually to pensioners resident in Canada and the estimated cost in the first year of indexation would be an extra $2.5 million for Britain.

British and Canadian officials will be meeting in Ottawa in July to discuss details of a possible agreement but the whole exercise will be overshadowed by the baleful influence of Britain's stone-faced treasury mandarins.

No money is available for this in current budgetary projections and any extra would have to be voted for in the House of Commons, raising potential political problems for the British government.

If such an agreement did come into force, British pensioners in Canada would benefit from being compensated for British rates of inflation, now 16.7 per cent, compared to the smaller Canadian inflation rate. But they would get no compensation for the devaled pound and the compensation would not be retroactive.

Lalonde says he has asked Ennals to impress on his cabinet colleagues and the treasury the need for an equitable settlement of the plight of these pensioners.

While Lalonde has been fielding delegations of incensed British pension beneficiaries in Ottawa, a little pressure has also been on the department of health and social security.

This has come in the form of written questions by MPs being asked for action by their constituents.

The most recent one, by Conservative MP Robert McCrindle, on Feb. 16, 1977, referred to Canada's own amending legislation, now passed, which eases the way for a reciprocal agreement on pensions between London and Ottawa.

The answer he got from Ennals was that Canada's legislation would be studied and "consideration" given to modification of the present agreement.

But the last sentence of the answer was pure treasury mandarin and remains today the main reason why no British pensioner in Canada should be too hopeful for early action.

The sentence reads: "I must point out, however, that any modification which would lead to an increase in United Kingdom benefit costs would have to be considered in the light of constraints on public expenditure."

DIFFERENT SENTENCES FOR PROFESSIONALS?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Professionals such as doctors and lawyers who are found guilty of certain crimes often receive different punishment to tradesmen convicted of similar offences, Vic McCallum, secretary of the Law Society of B.C., said Thursday.

McCallum was commenting on the case of a Richmond lawyer who was given an absolute discharge Wednesday after being found guilty of wilfully obstructing a policeman.

In passing judgment on lawyer George Herbrik, Judge H. E. Swayze said he could not remember an occasion in his seven years as a judge where an absolute discharge was given for such an offence. But he said he had to consider Herbrik's record of volunteer work and the consequences a conviction could have on his livelihood.

Judge Swayze said he hoped the public would not think that members of certain professions are shown special treatment.

But McCallum said a judge often considers the disciplinary action an association may take against a professional as a result of a conviction.

He called the professional's dilemma "double jeopardy."

"A conviction could destroy a professonal's livelihood — but that doesn't necessarily hold true for, say, a carpenter or plumber," he said. "In other words, a professional receives a second punishment — and it is because of this that they often receive different punishment than tradesmen."

McCallum referred to another sentencing this week in which a former lawyer, Milton Oliver, received 90 days for fraudulently taking $300,000 of his clients' funds.

Judge Graham Ladner said Oliver had suffered mental torture and lost his reputation and standing in the community.

"Judges are entitled to take anything into account when they sentence people," McCallum said.

Herbrik's absolute discharge means that, although he was found guilty, the conviction is effectively wiped out and brought to the fore only in the event of a repeat offence.

McCallum said the discharge means Herbrik will avoid a law society regulation giving benchers power to discipline Herbrick, through suspension or being disbarred, merely on the basis of the verdict.

"It doesn't mean he escapes our jurisdiction — it means benchers will have to hold a hearing and decide among themselves whether Herbrik's conduct was unprofessional or unbecoming," he said.

Former NDP attorney-general Alex McDonald said the situation is "ridiculous."

He said professionals and tradesmen should be treated the same and should receive the same punishment — a professional's extenuating circumstance should be submitted to his or her particular association when disciplinary action is being considered.

"Justice should be meted equally to all," he said.

Lawrence Goulet, vice-chairman of the B.C. Judicial Council, which oversees the conduct of the 96 provincial judges, said judges do not approach cases with a view of treating professionals any differently to tradesmen.

"It could be that over a series of cases the professionals appear to come off best but each case is dealt with on its own merits — there's no thought of being more lenient to a professional."

VD Apathy Deplored By MOH

VERNON (CP) — The North Okanagan Health Unit needs public support to fight an epidemic of veneral disease in the area, but the public is remaining apathetic, says Dr. M. R. Smart, chief medical officer for the unit.

Smart told a meeting of the North Okanagan Union Board of Health that 260 cases of gonorrhea were reported in the region last year, an increase of 76 cases over the previous year.

If the disease were polio or typhoid the public "would certainly be alarmed," said Smart.

He told the annual board of health meeting that of the cases reported last year, 80 per cent were in the 16-to-29 age category.

A new VD-family planning clinic would be operational within a few months and would be open two days a week here and at Salmon Arm, said Smart.

Once a budget proposal has been drawn up the provincial government will be asked for a grant, he said, adding the clinic would be aimed at the person who is reluctant to go to a family physician.

Moths aren't the only things that will damage the supple splendour of your fur!

Storage in the home environment just can not ensure the right humidity and temperature levels to protect the suppleness of the pelt.

A plastic storage bag is the worst culprit for causing long term damage .... excess moisture damages the pile, excess heat will dry and crack the pelt backing — either can lead to pile loss and eventual bald spots.

Your fur, secure in our vaults, will be safe from theft and vandalism too!

FRENCH-ONLY RAPPED

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bitter opposition has developed to a recommendation from a school board committee that Lavallee School in the St. Vital district be completely French-language.

About 250 people attended a recent meeting, and repeatedly applauded emotional appeals to the school board to reject the recommendation that the English-speaking students at the school be bussed to other schools.

The committee report said Lavellee School should be the division's centre for intensive French programs.

At the moment, the school is a unique mixture of French and English-language instruction.

Board chairman Lawrence Harrison assured the audience the matter was not policy, just a recommendation of the committee. It was tabled for further study.

Co-Op Housing On Increase

GINA (CP) — Co-operative housing associations accounted for almost half of the new co-operatives formed in Saskatchewan during 1976-77, Ned Shillington, minister of co-operation and co-operative development, said.

Out of 69 co-operatives incorporated between April 1, 1976 and March 31, 1977, 28 were housing associations, he said.

Sask. to Buckle Up July 1

REGINA (CP) — Seat belts will be compulsory for persons riding in the front seats of motor vehicles in Saskatchewan after July 1 under legislation introduced in the legislature Friday.

Gordon MacMurchy, minister responsible for the highway traffic board, introduced amendments to the Vehicles Act which make seat belt use mandatory.

A copy of the legislation was not immediately available but MacMurchy explained the amendments to reporters outside the house.

As well as the seat belt provisions, the amendments include authorizing highway speed limits to be changed to metric and that will mean some modest reduction in speed limits when the change is made in September.

"It provides for seat belts in the front seats only, effective July 1, that is the time of proclaimation," he said.

"We will have a three-month non-enforcement period . . . It's similar to Ontario's situation.

"There will also be exemptions for medical reasons . . ."

Steinhauer On Dilemma

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Lieutenant Governor Ralph Steinhauer finds himself caught in the middle of an issue about Indian land claims, but he said he will not resign.

"I won't disgrace the office that way," Steinhauer, who is a Cree Indian, said in an interview.

He said he can help the native cause more by sticking around for the remainder of his term. He has already helped Indians, if not in a material sense, "by bringing their pride back."

The issue arose when the provincial government recently introduced amendments to the Land Titles Act which appear to be aimed at blocking any attempts by Alberta Indians to declare an interest on northern Alberta land, including the Athabasca oil sands.

A caveat had been filed by some Indian chiefs in 1975, but a court ruling on its validity was to be held last month. The provincial government, worried by comments made when the Supreme Court of Canada ruled on a similar point recently, rushed in with amendments to plug any possible loophole that might favor the Indian case.

Bad Weather For Ducks

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Woldlife Federation says extremely dry conditions throughout the southern part of the province could have a disastrous effect on waterfowl.

The federation said geese and ducks returning to the Prairies are looking for customery nesting areas, but the dry conditions could alter the traditional breeding patterns.

The group said the Manitoba government should increase its program of securing waterfowl feeding grounds. It said in recent years, the number of spawning ponds in the Prairie provinces has dropped from six million to about 250,000.

Cattle Hurt By Drought

CAMROSE, Alta. (CP) — Dry winter conditions will have a serious effect on beef production in Alberta says Conrad Gietz, a provincial agriculture department meteorolgist.

Gietz said in an interview that low runoff during spring has led to a shortage of water in farm dugouts.

Low water levels for livestock, or whatever else the water was needed for, "is pretty widespread, and in central and southern Alberta there is a lot of concern."

Farmers were already hauling water some distance in areas where such a move had never before been necessary.

Don Robbins, a market analyst for the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, said the dry conditions were causing a softening in the feeder cattle market.

FREE TREES SHIPPED OUT

REGINA (CP) — The department of tourism and renewable resources has announced it will ship 28,895 trees to regional parks, 55,054 to provincial parks, 4,468 to schools and 51,400 to boy scout groups, for planting as part of the department's annual forestation program.

Most of the trees will be two-year-old deciduous varieties grown at the Prince Albert and Big River nurseries.

HYDRO COSTLIER THAN DIESEL

GLENORA, Man. (CP) — A number of farmers in this southwestern region say Manitoba Hydro rates are so expensive they save money by using diesel fuel to pump irrigation water to their fields.

One of the farmers, Grant Harrison of Glenora, talked with Hydro about installing a line from the utility's main system to his property, and was given an installation figure of $20,000.

The utility also estimated that on top of that, he would pay about $2,000 a year for four months of electricity.

Hydro would charge him wih a demand rate, which is 80 per cent of the peak demand even during days he wouldn't use ellectricity.

"When I pump the water by diesel engine it'll cost me $1,500 for one month of solid, non-stop pumping," Harrison said. "But when I shut the engine off, it doesn't cost me a nickel."

JUDGE DEFENDED BY LAW SOCIETY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Law Society has mounted an unprecedented defence of a New Westminster county court judge to deny allegations the judge was involved in a conflict of interest.

The society held a news conference Friday to deny allegations that Judge David Hinds, while serving as solicitor for Chilliwack municipality, permitted personal interests to conflict with his official duties.

The unanswered allegations, referred to in the legislature by Bob Skelly (NDP—Alberni), were that Hinds owned shares in a company that sought to have certain lands removed from the agricultural land reserve. The allegations were made in February and referred to the period before Judge Hinds was appointed to the bench.

The society said that because of the tradition in which judges never answer adverse allegations, the law society felt bound to speak on behalf of Judge Hinds. A statement by the lawyers said Hinds, who was appointed Queen's Counsel in 1971 and appointed to the bench in January, 1974, became a shareholder in Chilliwack Valley Lands Ltd. in 1957.

"As a result of various developments, in 1964 Chilliwack Valley Lands acquired a minority interest in Sardis Land and Development and Hinds thus had an indirect interest in the latter," the statement said.

It said that because of a pollution control board decision it became necessary in 1972 for a sewer to be built to service Fraser Valley Milk Products' plant at Sardis and the Fraser Valley Frosted Foods plant in the vicinity of land owned by Sardis Land and Development Co.

The municipality was not required to pay any cost of the project. The arrangements made by the municipality of Chilliwack were that Sardis Land and Development would pay 62 per cent while the other two companies would bear the rest.

Prototype Jail At Mission Opened by Fox

MISSION (CP) — Solicitor-General Francis Fox said Friday the Mission medium security institution in this Fraser Valley community is a prototype, the first of nine to be built across Canada during teh next two years.

Fox, at the official opening of the $9.9 milion prison, said that only a particular type of prisoner is wanted there.

Programs at the prison include wood and metal manufacturing shops where prisoners learn skills that will help them when released.

UIC Rules 'Misunderstood'

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The possibility that a 31-year-old woman with a Grade 11 education might not be able to understand Unemployment Insurance Commission regulations was enough for an acquital.

Sally Gillis, 31, was charged with making a statement to the commission that she knew to be false.

"There are a lot of possibilities in this case," Judge George Stewart, said in provincial court Thursday, "but I have a reasonable doubt and don't think she is to be judged by the same standards as counsel's sophistication and knowledge."

Gillis, married with six children, completed seven UIC claim forms that indicated she had not received any money during a four-month period in 1975.

She had been receiving about $150 a week in sickness benefits during this period from a company group insurance policy. The UIC benefits were $97 a week.

Defence counsel Dennis Archambault said the standard UIC form requesting benefits was confusing because the question "did you receive any money?" was preceded by the question "did you work during this period."

He argued that a person who didn't work would think this applied only to money earned.

The UIC had sent a letter to Gillis asking for permission to get information from the insurance company which had paid her sickness benefits.

She returned the letter with a note saying she did not want the company or the commission to release any information on her.

Crown prosecutor Glen Parrett said this showed the motivation of the accused.

Parrett also said it was strange that Gillis didn't think there was anything wrong with receiving $247 a week from the UIC and the insurance company, although she made $150 a week while employed.

WEED-EATER in action on Kalamalka Lake near Vernon is piloted by Scott Hanna of the Okanagan Basin Water Board, whose agreement with the provincial government to remove Eurasian milfoil from Okanagan lakes was approved this week by the Okanagan-Similkameen district. The weed cutter's boom sweeps bottom of lakes which are being threatened by choking weed growth.

Firms Reject IWA Call

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coastal forest companies have rejected a call by the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) that they jointly call the federal government to remove the wage and price controls.

Keith Bennett, president of Forest Industrial Relations (FIR), said Friday that one reason for turning down the IWA request was that the industry has senior people taking part in current talks in Ottawa about the fate of the controls "and we don't want to infringe on what is being done there."

He said that the second reason was the IWA's package of contract proposals for B.C. companies this year that would cost an additional 30 per cent.

"To simply remove controls without proper decontrols would be exceedingly unwise," Bennett said.

He said Canadian Labor Congress leaders, taking part in the tripartite talks, "must feel foolish when one of their biggest affiliates is making proposals amounting to a 30-per-cent package."

"It has to make the federal government extremely reluctant to back off on the controls program," he said.

He said he didn't believe FIR's rejection of the IWA request on the joint telegram would have any adverse effect on coast contract negotiations which opened here Monday.

The talks have been adjourned to May 9, following presentation of positions and exchanges of formalities.

A-G's Department Target Of Telex Directory Fraud

VANCOUVER (CP) — A phoney Telex directory organization operating out of West Germany has attempted to defraud an agency of the provincial attorney-generals department.

The company, giving a return address in Hamburg, sent an invoice to the British Columbia Securities Commission requesting payment of $196.50 as fee for insertion in "The Telex Director.'

The commission, an agency at the attorney-general's department, is a policing body of stock market action in the province, did not pay the invoice.

Clinic Examination

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Anthony Keith Hillman, 22, of West Vancouver was remanded in custody for psychiatric examination when he appeared in provincial court charged with second-degree murder in the April 17 strangulation of Mathew James Smith, 6.

Judge Alfred Watts ordered Hillman to be held at the Crease Clinic at Riverview Hospital near Vancouver, but the accused was refused admission and sent to Riverview's Riverside forensic unit.

Defence lawyer Bob Gardner said Friday that the Crease people got court permission for the move, but "my prime concern was to get him (Hillman) treatment and I'm not convinced this (Riverside) is the place."

School Taxes Cut

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The board of school district No. 24 was told Friday that a 1.89-mill cut in school taxes will be made this year and could mean an average decrease for Kamloops taxpayers of about $20.

Bill Mercer, district finance chairman, said the reduction, which would have to be passed by the city, was made possible by keeping the total budget to $35 million, including Cariboo College, up six per cent from last year's $32 million.

Western Winner

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Kathy Kendall, 26, was one of two $100,000 winners in the Western Express lottery draw Wednesday.

Loans Vote Today

CRANBROOK (CP) — Cranbrook voters head for the polls today to vote in two referendums for $1,090,000 in loans.

A referendum for $720,000 is mainly for road improvement in the Cranbrook city area, with some of the money going to construction of storm sewers, water lines and sanitary sewer installations.

The other referendum seeks $370,000 for parks and recreation, a large part for upgrading of parks and a smaller amount for construction of racquetball and squash courts in Cranbrook.

$187,000 Awarded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Denis Brendon Justin-Mathews, who suffered permanent brain damage in a car accident three years ago, was awarded $187,000 in damages in British Columbia Supreme Court Friday. Justin-Mathews was thrown through the windshield of a van belonging to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Horse Shots Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Horse-owners in the Kamloops - Okanagan-Similkameen area should have their animals vaccinated against equine encephalomyelitis during April and May, a spokesman for the veterinary branch of the Ministry of Agriculture said Friday. The disease is mosquito-borne and can infect both humans and horses, he said, adding that in humans it is called sleeping sickness. He said that in 1976, three cases were reported in horses, but none in humans.

New Energy Vital: Shrum

PENTICTON (CP) — Energy expert Dr. Gordon Shrum says that creation of additional forms of energy is a more realistic approach than concentrating on conserving dwindling reserves of power.

The former chairman of the British Columbia Energy Board told the city's chamber of commerce Thursday that "nuclear energy and coal-produced energy, to a lesser degree, are the only two forms which will be able to solve the problem."

Shrum said that other forms of energy are fine "as long as they last, but cannot be expected to solve the problem forever."

Cuban Cruises

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Cuban officials have granted permission for the resumption of cruise line service between a U.S. port and Havana for the first time since relations between the two countries were severed in 1961, the Carras Shipping Co. said Friday. The authorization cleared the way for Carras luxury liner the Daphne to visit Havana Harbor on May 17.

Firebug Hits Again

An arsonist who has been setting fires in garbage bins in Victoria was at it again Friday night — this time in a bin behind the Harbour Towers Hotel, 345 Quebec.

Firemen quickly extinguished the blaze, spotted at 10:46 p.m., before any damage was done.

It was the 10th garbage fire in the past week.

Commerce Bank Fights Union Bid

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unionization of bank employees on a branch basis would endanger the fiscal fabric of the nation, a bank lawyer told the Canada Labor Relations Board hearing Friday.

Robert Hicks, representing the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said only a national bargaining unit would be appropriate for banks.

The Service, Office and Retail Workers Union is seeking certification of individual bargaining units at 20 branches of four banks in B.C. The board now is dealing with eight Commerce branch applications.

Hicks said there is a potential for 7,000 bargaining units under this method. Industrial chaos is inevitable and it would affect all aspects of money matters in the country.

The bank wants bargaining units coinciding with its centrally controlled personnel policy and highly integrated functions system.

Union lawyer Ian Donald said the employees 'right to collective bargaining is at issue because trade unionists concede a national unit cannot be organized. He urged the board to select "not the best bargaining unit but one that can function."

Hicks argued that the board cannot ask the bank "to indulge in that kind of experiment" given the sensitive nature of the business.

Hicks also said the union may not be able to adequately service its members because it is a small and inexperienced union, not affiliated with any central labor organization.

The decision on the Commerce branches is not expected until after the board panel considers similar applications at some Ontario branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia next month.

Jobless Chilean ... Lawyer To Ottawa

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal immigration department will be asked to make a political decision on Alfonso Miranda's application for permanent residence status in Canada after the Chilean refugee's application was turned down for lack of a job.

John Taylor, counsel for the Miranda family, said Friday that he will travel Monday to Ottawa to hold discussions with immigration officials about Miranda's application.

Taylor said he will take along the files of three Chileans, including that of Ricardo Leiva, who was granted landed immigrant status earlier this year after having to go to Spain with his family to make his application from outside the country.

"The minister (Bud Cullen) has said that the cases of Chilean refugees would be regarded favourably on humanitarian grounds and I'm taking the other files with me to find out how Miranda's case differs from those of the others," said Taylor.

Miranda, 25, and his wife Myrian came to Prince George in February and December of 1975 and, after being found living there illegally, the two applied for political refugee status.

The application was turned down in January and they were told they had to follow regulations and apply from outside the country.

Miranda was emplyed at the time of Northwood Pulp's sawmill at Prince George and his wife worked nights as a cleaning woman. Their two children still are in Chile being cared for by grandparents.

Taylor arranged for the couple to make their application from San Francisco and said immigration officials turned it down earlier this week because they were informed by Northwood that Miranda's vacancy had been filled.

Taylor said immigration officials in San Francisco told the couple that they were not being considered as refugees from Chile, but were being treated as any other person wanting landed immigrant status in Canada.

"If he has no job he can't get into the country," said Taylor. "He's been told that if a job is made available and approved by Manpower there's nothing standing in his way."

Miranda now is on his way to Guatemala where he has been given permission to remain for six weeks, said Taylor, adding the couple's savings are running out.

Ted Drage, head of immigration at Prince George, said Thursday that Miranda has a new passport from Chile. Taylor clarified the report, saying Miranda had to get the passport because the one he had been using had expired.

Miranda, who had held a bank position before the socialist government of Salvador Allende was overthrown in a military coup, has said he would face political persecution if he returned to Chile. He said he had been beaten and jailed by the new government and now feared for his life if he returned.

New Method Cancer Fight By Israelis

TORONTO (CP) — Training a cancer patient's white blood cells to become killer cells outside the body, then putting them back to fight his tumor may one day become the best way of combatting hidden cancers, says an Israeli scientist. Prof. Michael Feldman, of the Weizmann Institute of Rehovot, Israel, said in an interview that researchers are encouraged by the new approach.

He said his research team in Israel is using mouse cells in its laboratory experiments but a team at Stanford University Medical Centre in California is using human cells.

White blood cells attack and destroy foreign tissue such as a transplanted kidney or heart. In this situation, doctors try to suppress this action but in cancer it would be an advantage to make the process stronger to kill the cancer.

He said the system may one day hold out hope for treating deep-seated cancers, such as lung tumors, that are difficult to treat today.

Ex-Victorians Die in Smash

A joint funeral service will be held Thursday for two of three former Victorians killed in an Edmonton accident.

Dead are Dale Holder, Wendy Rackham and Barbara Keleny, all 21. Driver of the car which collided with a train Thursday, Donald Scott of Edmonton, is in an Edmonton hospital with multiple injuries.

Holder is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Holder of 3486 Plymouth Road and had been living in Edmonton for two years. Wendy is the daughter of Mrs. Edna Holland of Victoria.

A service for both will be held at McCall's funeral chapel Tuesday at 2 p.m. Arrangements for the Keleny girl are not known.

Church landmark to be demolished

VANCOUVER (CP) — Centennial Presbyterian Church, a landmark in downtown Vancouver for more than 65 years, will be demolished to make way for an addition to St. Paul's Hospital, the church's pastor said in an interview.

Rev. J. P. Morrison said the church, erected in 1912 at Pendrell and Thurlow streets, has been passed over by the city's heritage advisory board.

Morrison said the most striking feature of the church, the pillars at the front, reminded him of the Royal Bank of Scotland in Glasgow.

Bishop concerned

Activity in Klan counter to faith

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the Roman Catholic diocese of Washington, concerned about reports of Ku Klux Klan activity in neighboring Maryland, says that membership in the Klan is "incompatible" with the Catholic faith.

"Ideology or action which is rooted in racial or religious bigotry, or which seeks to intimidate individuals or groups of people, is a declaration of hostility to God's plan for the salvation of humanity as revealed and fulfilled in Christ Jesus," said Cardinal William Baum.

The cardinal and his two auxiliary bishops issued a statement attacking the Klan in the wake of reports that some Catholics were members of the Klan in Prince George's County, Md., a suburb of Washington.

Church union: New obstacle

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The ordination of women as Anglican priests is an obstacle to the eventual union of the Roman Catholic and Anglican Churches, says Roman Catholic Bishop Emmett G. Carter of London.

Members of Lamanite Generation

Brigham Young's native singers in city May 11

BRIGHAM YOUNG University Indians backed by Latin and Mexican-American talent are out to capture "paleface" and all other audiences in a two-hour program that shows they can compete successfully in the field of contemporary entertainment.

The "Lamanite Generation," drawing top Indian talent from over 500 BYU Indian students representing over 60 tribes, will appear at the Victoria Senior Secondary School on Tuesday, May 11 at 7:30 p.m.

This will be family entertainment for the Provincial Family Month celebration.

The student group will present a contemporary music and dance blended carefully with traditional Indian, Polynesian, Latin, and Mexican numbers. Several contemporary Indian numbers written by BYU Indian students such as "Friendship Fire," and "Go, My Son" will also be performed. The latter is a poignant message for Indian youth, instructing them to get an education and "make your people proud of you."

The "Lamanite Generation" has made an eight week tour of Mexico, Central and South America where they performed to over 55,000 people in live audiences and 83 million on 12 separate television shows. Highlighting their tour were performances in the Teatro Nacional, San Jose, Costra Rica; Teatro Nacional, Panama City; Teatro Saore, Quito, Ecuador; Teatro Municipal, Lima, Peru; Teatro Municipal, La Paz, Bolivia; Teatro Solis, Montevideo, Uruguay and Teatro Opera, Maracay, Venezula.

The "Lamanite Generation" show includes contemporary songs such as "Cherokee Nation." It also features humorous novelty numbers including a spoof on Indians and Cowboys where the Indians finally win. In addition, the songs written by Carnes Burson, a former member of the troupe, and the traditional Indian tribal dances make up an evening of unusual variety.

According to Janie Thompson, creative director of the group, the "Lamanite Generation" is proving that Indian youth have the talent and drive to meet the challenges of contemporary society. "In no better way can they prove this than showing it in the quality of their performances," Miss Thompson said. "When they appear before their own people, they engender in them a feeling of deep pride as well as encouragement, and non-Indian audiences are amazed at the high quality of their talent."

Former policeman asks faith in force

TORONTO (CP) — A former New York City policeman recently told the congregation of Churchill Heights Baptist Church that it is important for people to retain confidence in the police because many are losing faith in their political leaders.

Conrad Jensen, a retired deputy inspector, said Christians must "stand up and scream to the high heaven for law and order."

Jensen, who was the church's special guest on Police Appreciation Day, served 26 years on the New York City force. Much of that time was spent as officer in charge of the 23rd Precinct in Harlem.

He had 400 men under his command, but he also said he used the Bible and the Lord as tools in his fight against the city's crime.

"Three of my men were killed in action in my last four years on the job," he said. "I stabbed back with scripture."

Letter on Sunday sport receives little response

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Prince George Ministerial Association has received little response to recent requests to schedule sports events so they do not conflict with Sunday morning church services, the association says.

In letters sent to 51 sports organizations in central British Columbia, the association says that while it encourages children and adults to be involved in community sports, a conflict does arise when sports events are scheduled on Sunday morning, during Sunday school and church services.

Choral concert Sunday

A choral concert featuring the celebrated Theresa Mass by Joseph Haydn will be persented at 8 p.m. Sunday in St. John's Church. Despite the music's title, the affair is not liturgical but a straight concert.

The combined choirs of St. John's, Glenlyon school and the Cantabile Singers will perform under the direction of the church's choir director, Madeleine Gross. The concert will represent some of her last work in Victoria before taking up residence in Europe.

Paul Halley, assistant organist at Christ Church Cathedral, will accompany the presentation of the mass. There is no charge, but there will be a collection.

RECEIVED INTO the ministry of the Reformed Episcopal Church last Sunday was Rt. Rev. Dr. Gordon R. Stacey, missionary bishop of the Reformed Church, of Vancouver (seated above) who was formerly minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The ceremony at the morning service in the Church of Our Lord was conducted by Rev. Dr. Andrew Mowatt (third from left), and the charge to Dr. Mowatt was given by Rev. W. B. Taylor (right). The sermon at the special service was preached by Rev. Dr. Raymond N. Holliwell of Phoenix, Ariz. A reception followed in the Cridge Memorial Hall. Bishop Stacey has been taking the service at the Church of Our Lord for the past five years, travelling weekly from Vancouver, and he was given a presentation from the congregation in recognition of his services. Dr. Mowatt now takes over from him following his reception into the church.

Coggan, Pope to meet April 29

LONDON (UPI) — The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Donald Coggan, and Pope Paul will participate in an ecumenical service in the Sistine Chapel April 29, according to Anglican church officials.

It will be Coggan's first meeting with the Pope.

The meeting will be part of an April 27-May 4 trip that will take Coggan to Rome, Istanbul and Geneva.

Coggan flies to Rome April 27 and will have a private meeting with the 79-year-old Pope the following day. On April 29, the Archbishop and the Pope will concelebrate the Sistine Chapel service, then issue a common declaration.

Lesson in caring

Family day: 'Because kids grow fast'

By SHIRLEY GALLINA

LOS ANGELES — Monday nights are family night at the home of Cheryl and Roger Hendrix.

Nothing is allowed to interfere with the program.

"For me, it's the time when I'm totally concentrated on my wife and children," Hendrix says.

"It's a time when family members come together and talk about their problems — a time to communicate and enjoy each other's company.

The Hendrixes have three children, Rori, seven; Amber, five; and Roger Jr., three.

There is an obvious sense of family solidarity, and the children feel free to express their feelings.

After dinner, the family assembles, and one of them starts leading a song. This is followed by a prayer, again, led by a different family member.

The Hendrix family is Mormon, and uses a Family Home Evening Manual which is available to anyone as a guide.

It offers suggested lessons that all can participate in Mrs. Hendrix says.

"Sometimes we take on a problem-solving situation, and we all discuss the solution — but there is not always a single right way to solve a problem," she says.

The president of the Vancouver Island branch of the Mormon Church said recently more than 40 municipalities have indicated they will participate in British Columbia Family Month in May. Dr. Howard Biddulph, chairman of the provincial committee co-ordinating activities for Family Month, said local committees had been established to plan for the month and the number of municipalities involved was increasing daily.

"In organizing family-centred activities and programs during May," Biddulph said, "our purpose is not simply to underscore the importance of family relationships, but to induce all social groups to which family members belong to provide communication-building programs and activities to help families."

Most of the lessons have to do with character-building traits, such as honesty, respecting the rights of others, kindness and helping your neighbors, Mrs. Hendrix explains.

Not all family nights are spent at home. In the summer, they go out for a picnic supper, or on a trip. They visit shut-in elderly relatives, and the children pick flowers for them.

Monday nights also are a time to help others, Hendrix says. One time the city had put in trees in the neighborhood, and some kids knocked the small trees down.

"We helped the trees by putting in stakes and picking up the trash," Amber said.

"This is very important as we want our children to know they have a responsibility to maintaining their surroundings, not just their private home," Hendrix says.

He is the institute director for the Latter-day Saints Institute of Religion on the campus at the University of Southern California.

Hendrix is not only the administrator, but teaches basic scripture, the old and new testaments and the Book of Mormon.

He teaches about 20 classes for both Latter-day Saints members and non-members.

"The things we do family night can be done just as well by non-Mormons," Hendrix says.

"The family needs as much time and effort put into it as into any profession.

"As a father, I have a respected image in the home, but I'd better work at it by making sure I know what my children are thinking, so there is no lack of communication."

He believes in a lot of talk at the dinner table. Sometimes, the children don't agree with him but he says he can't force them to his thinking, so they try to discuss the subject.

Hendrix says that if he sets a good example, then the children will follow it.

"It also is important that the father expresses his love and respect for his wife in front of the children."

He believes the family is in the process of disintegration, and that there are many reasons for it.

Hendrix says couples think it's essential to gain high material comfort and to acquire many possessions.

"We think it is better to put that attention on our family structure than on material gain. The material things will come later, but the children won't stay children long," he says.

Hendrix says a child's biggest complaint today is a feeling of neglect and alienation from his parents.

"We're simply not willing to let that happen," he says. "We think the family is the core of civilization."

Workshop will show where to go for aid

Where young Victorians in trouble, or their families, can go for help is the theme of the Ecumenical Women's Outreach spring workshop on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The sessions will be held in Metropolitan United Church.

Miss Linda Neville, a probation officer, and Gerry Webb, district supervisor with the human resources ministry in the Burnside area, will lead the discussion during the morning session. During the lunch period Mrs. Helen Olden will discuss the role of camping.

Afternoon speaker, on the subject of preventive services, will be Pat Downey, head of the Outreach Department of the YM-YWCA.

All interested women are invited to attend and bring a box lunch. A baby-sitting service will be provided, but mothers must provide lunch for their children.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

A few years ago Daniel Jenkins, a British theologian, wrote a book on the condition of the church throughout the world in which he said this: "The trivialization of preaching is one of the chief sources of weakness in the church."

Has preaching, by and large, become a rather trivial enterprise in our time? Will anyone who knows today's church, in its various communions and denominations, suggest that Jenkins is far off the mark, despite much evidence to the contrary? Many of the clergy themselves are inclined to downgrade the sermon, looking upon it as something that some of their more old-fashioned people expect but which has become almost obsolescent.

I recently heard about a young minister who told some of his parishioners that the minister who takes great pains with his sermons and writes them out in full is merely going on an ego-trip.

In 1969 Dr. Robert B. McClure, the medical missionary who at that time was Moderator of the United Church of Canada, said, "My personal opinion is that we should scrap the sermon and have a round-table discussion."

But a study of the history of the church shows that effective preaching has always been a cause and a concommitant of renewal in the church. Perhaps it is not that preaching has become obsolescent in our time but much of the preaching that is being produced is ineffective.

We who preach do have much to answer for. Often we fail to prepare ourselves adequately for our pulpit task. Often we are sinfully timid and hesitant in our preaching, making the gospel message sound almost unbearably dull and inconsequential.

But you who sit in the pews have much to answer for, too. Many of you do like to be coddled a bit. You demand tranquilizer sermons. You don't like it when the preacher disturbs your delicate consciences or ruffles your tender feelings. You generally find dainty little sugar-cookie sermons much more palatable than the rough bread of the Gospel. And when you are given some of the rough bread either you complain that the preacher is not sticking to the simple Gospel or you react like the church-goer described by Bernard Shaw who "prefers a severe preacher because he thinks a few home truths will do his neighbors no harm."

We preachers cannot by ourselves rehabilitate the sermon. We need the help of you who sit in the pews. Don't so overload us with demands and expectations that we have very little time and energy for the disciplines that undergird effective preaching. You won't get adequate preaching in your church if your minister hasn't time for adequate preparation.

Of course, you are right to expect some comfort and assurance from your minister's sermons — but if that is all you expect you are contributing to the trivialization of preaching.

Some principles of our faith do not seem in accord with the fashionable ideas and ideals of the world.

Sometimes your preacher may have to say things that offend your self-regarding sensitivities and jostle your prejudices a little. Don't criticize and condemn your preacher before you have honestly looked in the depths of your own heart. Remember the old saw, "Good listeners make for good preachers."

We're needed, says chaplain

EDMONTON (CP) — The theologian has a vital role to play in hospitals, says Rev. Doug Cossar, head of pastoral care at the University of Alberta Hospital.

"To provide good, human care from my side as a theologian, that's what I think God wants from us," says Cossar, a United Church minister who has been head of the hospital chaplaincy unit for five years.

Stenner
. . . Nazarene church

Crusade begins soon

Evangelist Rev. Gordon V. Stenner will conduct an Evangelistic Crusade, April 24 to May 1, at the Esquimalt Church of the Nazarene, 886 Craigflower Road.

The crusade will begin April 24 at 7 p.m. and will continue each week night through to Friday at 7 p.m. and again on Sunday, May 1, at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Special music for the services is being provided by the Esquimalt congregation and by a number of congregations in Victoria. A free nursery is available for parents with small children.

Stenner has been a director of Youth For Christ and a very successful pastor in the Free Methodist Church. His dynamic, Christ-centred messages appeal to all ages.

Israel trip

TORONTO (CP) — Fifty young members of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada leave May 3 to spend six weeks in Israel.

Sunday pupils increase again

TORONTO (CP) — The popularity of Sunday schools is on the rise again, says Clare Raymond, director of the International Christian Education Association. "Sunday schools in both Canada and the U.S. enjoyed boom years in the 1950s and 1960s. Then, during the late 1960s and early 1970s, many Sunday schools seemed to stagnate."

Troopers Take To Desert

RANSBURG, Calif. — Law and order is coming to the California desert.

Long the refuge of hermits, outlaws, prospectors, dune-buggy enthusiasts, and people just trying to get away from it all, this vast expanse of arid, federally owned land between Los Angeles and the Arizona border is about to come under the control of the nation's newest police force: the Bureau of Land Management Rangers.

With 16 rangers to patrol 12 million acres, there won't exactly be an officer behind every cactus. But the mere prospect of a fully trained, fully armed desert ranger force has brought cries of protest from those who regard this barren land as the last stronghold of true personal liberty.

"These public lands have been the last really free territory in the United States," says Keith O'Hara, a 47-year-old prospector. "These rangers will place us under the gun and make our desert a complete police state."

Trying to head off the rangers, who will take to the bush in July, miners' organizations, off-road vehicle groups and desert rock collectors have initiated lawsuits, letter-writing campaigns, protests and public hearings.

Peter Silvain, the BLM special agent in charge of law enforcement, maintains that his agency has no intention of depriving free public access to the vast federal domain.

"A lot of these special interest groups are very emotional and get off half-cocked," Silvain said. "All we're trying to do is protect the resources. We have to save the legacy for tomorrow."

With the new ranger force -- now in training here and at the federal law enforcement and BLM's training centre in Glynco Ga. — and BLM's new regulatory power, many old desert hands realize that the years of ignoring the federal government are over. Particularly worried are the miners working the wind-swept hills here who see in the rangers and new BLM regulations a threat to their way of life.

"Here we have a government bureau almost totally ignorant of mining," said O'Hara, leader of the militant Western Mining Council chapter here. "They are promulgating regulations that are unenforceable, unreasonable and impossible to small miners. Those guys are wiping us out."

Activists with the Western Mining Council, which claims 2,000 members in 11 western states, warn that attempts by BLM rangers to enforce mine regulations could provoke violent resistance. "I am truly afraid," O'Hara said, "if they try to enforce these regulations some people are going to get killed out here."

Such attitudes have stirred BLM to request small arms and helicopters for the new desert force. Beside the angry miners. BLM officials report seeing scores of drug-running operations and paramilitary activities on the desert.

In January, Los Angeles County and San Bernardino County sheriffs discovered, in a desert bunker, enough arms to supply 200 men. The arms were linked to a splinter right-wing organization. At least one other extremist group also claims to have arms buried in the desert.

Not as menacing, but far more numerous, are the off-road vehicle enthusiasts who pour into the desert every weekend, riding everything from four-wheel drive trucks to dirt bikes and dune buggies. Nearly 4 million off-roader visits are made to the desert every year, according to BLM estimates.

BLM officials maintain that their new regulations are necessary to protect the fragile desert environment from becoming scarred by track marks, oil slicks and rusting hulks of abandoned vehicles.

Miners and off-roaders aren't the only ones threatened by the new BLM ranger force. Thieves have made a lucrative business of selling the rare desert shrubbery at high prices to fashionable landscapers throughout the Southwest. At one BLM station near the Nevada border unarmed rangers last year stood helplessly as over 5,000 plants were taken in over three months.

With the new force, the BLM hopes to stop some of these criminal actions, but in protecting the desert resources the BLM rangers will also be putting an end to a unique, free-wheeling era. For so long the home of desperados and incorrigibles, the desert will soon see police cars and flashing red lights just like those on city streets.

"It's sort of a shame," said BLM agent Bill Rolen. "This all came about because mass society is pressurizing this wild environment. That open life we always haly out there — it's unfortunate it has to go."

Do-It-Yourself Legal 'Supermarket'

VANCOUVER (CP) Two lawyers have opened what they call a legal supermarket here to help clients solve their own problems in court.

"A great fiction exists in the mind of the public that only a lawyer can solve legal problems," said Vic Stephens, who lives in Courtenay. He has opened a Vancouver store-front office with partner Jack Welsh.

"There are many areas of law that you can handle for yourself if you have a little guidance and assistance from a lawyer."

Stephens and Welsh want to guide the public through the maze-like procedures of litigation for a nominal $25 consultation fee. No appointment will be necessary and clients will be handled on a first-come, first-served basis

"The client does the work," said Stephens in a recent interview. "We simply show him how."

5a

Stephens said the service offers assistance in everything from divorces to wills and from insurance claims to traffic tickets.

"The financial saving to the client is considerable, sometimes dramatic," he said. "Sometimes this can be accomplished in one consultation, or it may take several."

An uncontested divorce, for example, would cost about $125 in fees and $30 to $40 for expenses, said Stephens, while handling the matter through traditional channels could cost as much as $600.

Stephens would handle the job for five $25 consultations. The main thing, he said, is not to burden the client with more than he or she can understand in any one session

Stephens said he can also offer considerable savings for clients settling damage or injury claims with the Insurance Corp. of British Columbia.

The average legal fee is between 20 to 30 per cent of the damages recovered, he said, or about $1,000 on a $5,000 settlement.

"You could have one hell of a lot of consultations at $25 for that kind of money," he said. "But we can probably settle the matter in one consultation."

If a legal problem is likely to take more than 15 minutes at one sitting, Stephens will refer the client to a lawyer for traditional representation.

"Referrals are based strictly on our judgment of the most capable lawyers in each area of law," he said. "This service is an integral part of our method and we have another care in selecting the lawyers "

Stephen's service is not the only one available to B.C. residents. The province's bar association offers a $5 referral service for consultations of up to 30 minutes. Stephens will refer for $15.

Stephens said his service is superior because his lawyers are specially-picked, not bar association volunteers.

Stephens said his service may "get some backs up" among members of the law society, but he doesn't believe it's necessary for a lawyer carrying on a honorable business to ask for permission.

"The law society is concerned about the high costs of legal services and has been groping for a solution," he said "We may have the answer."

Stephens said his service is aimed at middle-income groups who don't qualify for legal aid, but can't afford the high costs of traditional legal services.

"Our practice will survive if members of the public accept that they are competent to solve a lot of their own legal problems. Lawyers are going to have to pay a price to save their profession."

The key to his system, said Stephens, is a combination of low overhead and encouraging the client to do his own work.

FOR THE FIRST TIME these youngsters from Ahousat on the West Coast will perform tonight in the Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival, presenting an original Indian play, Tso Eecha Klo-Peech, at Oak Bay Junior Secondary. From left they are John Frank as the Chief; Cyril Adams, Medicine Man; Doreen Frank, Sun Goddess, and Debbie Frank, Chief's Wife. Teacher and director is Amy Shah. (Irving Strickland photo)

Taiwan Accepts Any Name When It Comes to Trade

By PHIL BROWN

TAIPEI (AP) — In a world where the majority of countries recognize the Peking government as China, the rival Republic of China on Taiwan has not done badly in keeping up international trade and exchanges.

Those countries call it simply Taiwan. Canada, ignoring the wishes of the International Olympic Committee, even refused to let it compete in the 1976 Montreal Olympics under the name in which it holds its Olympic membership, "Republic of China."

The nationalist Chinese insisted on principles and withdrew from the Olympics, declaring that they would no more give up their name than the average individual person would give up his.

But in keeping international contacts open, they don't make much stir over the name issue.

In countries such as the United States, which has diplomatic relations with Taipei, the China External Trade Development Council promotes the nation's business.

In some countries which recognize the Peking government, the same job is done by the Far East Trade Service.

Actually, it is the same organization, set up with private funds but sponsored and assisted by the government.

"In countries with which we have no diplomatic relations, we have to be flexible, not diehard. When we want to make friends, we have to understand their problems."

Taiwan does substantial trade with such countries as Japan, West Germany, Australia and Britain, none of which recognize it diplomatically.

In general, said Wu, "countries want to expand trade so we still can expand trade relations with them."

Where lack of diplomatic relations is a handicap is in the areas generally covered by governmental rather than private agreements, such as setting quotas, tariffs and preferential treatment for developing countries, he said.

"In case of difficulties in these areas, we must find an indirect way to contact that foreign government."

K. T. Li, former finance minister and now minister without portfolio, suggested greater recognition for the Republic of China would help it benefit other countries, too.

"We have 20-odd farm teams working outside the country," he said. "They would be more productive if international financing agencies recognized this."

Having just moved through the early stages of development from an agricultural to an industrial economy, Li said, Taiwan is in a good position to appreciate the problems of newly emerging countries and use its experience to help them.

FINALS COMING —AT AGE 88

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Like other university students, Lawrence Swift is preparing for final examinations.

Unlike other university students, the 88-year-old retired cost accountant gets a certain amount of pleasure from studying for his literature examination this spring.

"I've always been fond of literature," Swift said, "I've been a reader all my life."

He decided to continue his formal education in 1975 at King's College at University of Western Ontario. He spent two years at Birmingham University in England before he came to Canada in 1921.

He said he considers the last two terms as successful and recently received a mark of 86 for a 4,000-word essay.

His health is good although he walks more slowly now to counter his heart condition and occasional angina. His eyesight, hampered by a cataract about a year ago, has improved with surgery.

When his son does not drive him to the university for one of his three sessions a week, he takes a taxi.

But he says the weekly taxi bill of $15 is a small price to pay.

Swift said the three-hour final exam will take him more than four hours to write.

"I don't write as quickly as I used to," he said, "And my professor (Dr. Gary Paterson) allows me a little extra time to complete the examination.

He said that after the examination, he will begin preparing for a course next fall on Victorian authors "which are among my favorites."

Nutrition Study Urged for Stock

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — The medical profession should place greater emphasis on disease prevention through nutrition, says a feed mill owner who treats livestock with scientifically developed rations.

Jim Ross, owner of Grand Valley Fortifiers of Cambridge, says he has been able to cure and prevent serious diseases in animals by incorporating special vitamins, minerals and other elements in their feed.

"I feel medical research is too slow in trying some of the preventatives and cures we have developed for animals."

A graduate of Ontario Agriculture College, Ross said livestock feeding has become a science. He analyses available feed on farms, puts the data into a computer service and comes up with the formula for a custom-made premix.

"When the disease isn't the result of an infection or a virus, we invariably find we have the answer in nutrition."

Of particular value is selenium, an element which is poisonous except in controlled quantities, he said. Seafood, whole-grain cereals and wheat germ are good sources of the element.

"The University of Guelph now is working on the possibility that a selenium deficiency in people may be the cause of muscular dystrophy."

Ross said he discovered that the use of vitamin D and B complex prevented and cured the weak-leg syndrome in chickens and turkeys—the equivalent of muscular dystrophy in humans.

In southwestern Ontario during 1960, hogs developed a fatal disease known as mulberry heart—the equivalent of a heart attack in humans. Vitamin E and selenium solved the problem, he said.

The company has also helped eliminate sterility in cattle with controlled diets, he said.

His company, which has been manufacturing the rations for 17 years, has 45 lines of scientific pre-mixes. Twenty are custom-made by Hoffman Feed in Heidelberg, Ont.

"We don't regard ourselves as health nuts but we do believe health and vitality can be improved with good diet, properly supplemented with certain vitamins and minerals.

Weddings

Carr—Arnold

Rev. George Struthers officiated at a double-ring ceremony in First United Church, on March 26, 1977, at 5:30 p.m. when Shirley Anne, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Arnold, Prior Street, exchanged wedding vows with Gordon Richard Carr, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Carr, of Pachena Light.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a Victorian styled layered lace dress with hoop. A floral spray headpiece held her veil of silk illusion tulle. She carried a cascade of red roses and white carnations. The Maid of Honour was Donna Arnold, the bride's sister. Bridesmaids were Sonja Migliarese and Beth Derbyshire. The attendants wore identical gowns of dusty rose crepe satin, trimmed with beige lace. Their bouquets were of white daisies and pink carnations. The mother of the bride wore a turquoise jersey floor-length gown complemented with a double yellow orchid, while the groom's mother chose a two-piece ensemble of polyester knit in peach, with double matching orchid. The groom was attended by his brother Allan as best man; Gary Arnold, brother of the bride, and Lee Middlemiss, served as ushers.

The reception was held at Holyrood House. The toast to the bride was given by Stanley Hobden. Out of town guests included the bride's grandmother of Elk Point, Alberta, and other guests from New Westminster, North Vancouver, Mission, Salt Spring Island, Burnaby, Langley and Kelsey Bay.

The newlyweds spent their honeymoon in Parksville at Island Hall. The couple are now residing in Victoria.

Tait—Zdan

Rev. Donald Nelson officiated at a double-ring ceremony in Grace Lutheran Church on April 9, 1977, at 4:30 p.m., when Debra Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zdan, Victoria, B.C., exchanged wedding vows with Leslie Harry Tait, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Tait, Sidney, B.C. Soloist, Mrs. Anita Humphrey, was accompanied at the organ by Mr. A. Cheffins.

Given in marriage by her father and her mother, the bride chose a floor length white gown and butterfly veil. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Later she presented her bouquet to Mrs. Wm. Morrison, grandmother of the groom. Mr. K. Humphrey ushered the guests. The bride's attendant Mrs. Marlene Murray, chose a floral on blue ensemble. The bride's mother was attired in a floor length Shaheen creation; the groom's mother, a floor length pink Hawaiian print.

The wedding guests enjoyed a dinner at the Parrot House, and later attended a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. Wm. Murray, best man, emceed the party. Toast to the bride was given by Lorne Tait.

Out of town guests: Viola Bang, Kingsburg, California, Della Schmidt, Winnipeg, Bette Zdan, Vancouver, Mrs. C. Christenson, Swaziland, Larry Tait and Mr. and Mrs. G. Rowe, Moose Jaw.

The happy couple are honeymooning in Tahiti. They will reside in Nanaimo.

Harman—Murphy

Father Jolley officated at a double-ring ceremony in Our Lady Star of the Sea, on January 8, 1977, at 6 p.m., when Julie Ann Murphy, only daughter of Mr. George Murphy and Mrs. Diana Murphy, exchanged wedding vows with Leonard Charles Harman, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Harman. Background music was provided by Mr. Alan Bates. The Hawaiian Wedding Song was played during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor length gown of silk over taffeta, featuring a full length cathedral train with lace bordering the edges. Maid of Honour, Miss Rhonda McLeary, wore a floor length gown of peach polyester, while bridesmaids, Miss Edith Rees and Miss Jo-Anne Harman, sister of the groom, wore identical floor-length gowns of soft green polyester. They all carried bouquets of yellow and white carnations. Miss Diana Caddell attended as flower-girl, while Mr. Bradley Knight attended as ring-bearer. Mr. Wayne Simpson attended as best man; and the ushers were Mr. Bryan Harman, brother of the groom, and Mr. David Murphy, brother of the bride

Following a reception at Playland Curling Club, the happy couple left for a honeymoon in Seattle. The newlyweds now reside in Victoria. Out of town guests attended from Hamiota and Decker, Manitoba, Vancouver Alberta, Comox, B.C.

Simmons—Samalack

On Saturday, April 9, 1977, at 5:30 p.m. in St. Saviour's Church, Janet Ann, eldest daughter of Mrs. Vera Samalack, exchanged vows with Jeffrey Charles Simmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Simmons, of Castlegar. The bride was given away by her great uncle, Mr. W. Palidwor, and Rev. John Vickers officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Mr. Richard Uhl was organist, and played "We've Only Just Begun", and "The Wedding Song".

The bride wore a polyester-satin gown, featuring a chapel train and V-neckline. Print-floral voile sleeves and waistband, along with a ruffled hem and neckline, accented the gown made by the bride. A Juliet cap held her waist-length veil, and she carried a bouquet of yellow carnations and baby gladiolus. Mrs. June Mont, the matron of honour, wore a blue chiffon gown, and carried a basket of daisies. Bridesmaids, Laura Samalack and Beverley Simmons, wore blue polyester-silk gowns and carried bouquets of daisies. Mr. Sid Hardy of Castlegar, attended as best man, and the ushers were, Messrs. Merrick Wilton of Prince George, and Richard McCluskie of Burnaby.

Mr. Bob Benson of Burnaby was master of ceremonies at the Wilson Inn reception, and the toast to the bride was given by Mr. Alf Knudson. Out of town guests were from Winnipeg, Salmon Arm, Prince George, Castlegar, U.S.A., and the Lower Mainland. Music was supplied by Crystal Blue. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Simmons left on their honeymoon to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

YOUR MONEY OR YOUR LIFE! Victoria Mayor Young and members of City Council. Another holdup in the City of Victoria on Thursday, April 21 has taken place that possibly might not have happened if a policeman was patrolling Douglas Street on foot at the time. The residents of Victoria will be requesting walking patrols by petition, and it is hoped that the Victoria police strength will be brought up to 160 so as to enable at least 10 policemen for walking patrols. If this is not provided for in the 1977 budget, your City's Watchdog, C. Joe Richards will have to call on a higher authority to provide adequate policing for those people working and residing in the City of Victoria. Please write P.O. Box 154 for any further inquiries.

ARE YOU TIRED OF TRYING to meet the right person? So are we. We're two women who would like to meet men who are interested in a quiet home life, camping, going for drives, dancing. Ages 38-48 preferred. Children welcome. Reply Victoria Press, Box 863.

AVERAGE GUY LOOKING FOR slender girl 30-45, easy going, to share activities, camping, boating, travelling, dancing, water skiing, children welcome, all replies confidential. Victoria Press Box 847.

MALE, EARLY 60'S WOULD like to meet lady in late 50's for companionship and outings. Victoria Press Box 857.

"I'M A LITTLE BIT COUNTRY"

I'm a 1,200 sq. ft. rancher and I'm normally a warm, cozy home with natural wood panelling to highlight my FP, and 3 good-sized bedrooms (master 17'3"x11'3") with H-W floors throughout. I have a large kitchen with built-in stove and oven. My feature window in the LR looks out over the large patio, up and over terraced gardens past a 12'x19' garden shed to a forrested park-like property behind. I have a 250 sq. ft. workshop (wired). My owners are transferred to Florida, and I need another nice family to live with me. $54,900.

COLWOOD

$39,900

A great alternative to the high cost of home buying or escalating rents — a half-duplex. 3 large bedrooms, 1½ bathrooms, family kitchen with diswasher and newly landscaped yard. $2,000 down and $350 per month. MLS 22646.

$59,900

A very attractive 3 year old home, nicely decorated and has a large in-line D.R. and L.R. with fireplace, family cabinet kitchen opening onto sundeck, ensuite plumbing, 4th bedroom in full basement and rec room roughed-in with fireplace. Separate double garage. MLS 23490.

$62,900

Better than new this fine contemporary home enjoys a location in one of Colwood's most attractive neighborhoods. 3 roomy bedrooms, L-shaped L.R. and D.R., and a nicely finished rec room — put this one on your list of must sees.

$65,900

Just listed in Colwood Lake Estates this near new 3 bedroom home offers a Spanish touch, a cool L.R. with fireplace and a double sundeck with sunny exposure and views of golf club. Professionally finished rec room with leather upholstered bar, 3 bathrooms and provision for sauna plus room for expansion.

$74,900

New listing. Located in a hideaway neighborhood near Colwood golf Course this 9 year old home has it all for the modern family. 1327 sq. ft., 3 bdrms, L-shaped L.R. and D.R. 3 bathrooms plus finished rec room and den in full basement. A grand five stem oak tree graces the front yard to add a final touch of appeal to an already remarkable home.

$79,900

Three new homes are offered exclusively by us at this price — choose new Mill Hill Park at 2548 Jeanine, a two storey colonial with 4 bedrooms and a den for the large family (or if you just plain like lots of space) — or take a contemporary classic in Colwood Lake Estates at 2267 Alicia Place. Spanishg styling throughout, a golf course for a back yard with an abundance of trees, 3 bedrooms, in-line L.R. and D.R., separate garage and full developable basement — or select 3129 Lynnlark in a custom designed split level with 3 bedrooms and huge finished rec room. These truly are gems.

NEW HOMES FROM $64,750

A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
—rockwork faced entries, concrete drives —carpeted entry lobbies to most —daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath
—many have 2 finished rock-faced fireplaces
—fancy wallpapers, extra finishing
—walk to busline, shops, all schools.

Prices from $64,750 up to $69,750 and two unique 1½-storey homes nearing completion at $78,900. Low down payments possible to qualified purchasers. Vendor may carry a second mortgage. Interest rates 10 to 10¾%.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A 6 six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday calls. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BONIFACE — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Sharon, who passed away April 23, 1975.
Many lonely heartaches,
Often a silent tear,
But always a beautiful memory
Of one we loved so dear.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by her loving Mom and Dad and brother Dale.

CARMICHAEL — Margaret, who passed away April 23, 1975.
—Ever remembered by husband Jim, daughter Margaret and family.

HALSEY — In loving memory of our beloved son and brother, Peter, who passed away April 23, 1976.
One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home — it was His will;
Within our hearts he liveth still.
—The family.

PRATT — In memory of Dad, (James H.) who passed away April 23, 1972, and to Mum, who passed away peacefully on January 25, 1977. Gone to be with Dad and to be happy always.
—Ever remembered by their son Jim.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

First Degrees At Royal Roads

The first university degrees ever granted by Royal Roads Military College will be conferred by Defence Minister Barney Danson in convocation ceremonies next Friday.

Twenty cadets from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Ontario and Quebec will receive science degrees in physics and physical oceanography.

Until this year Royal Roads was only a two-year college and cadets took their third and fourth years at Royal Military College in Kingston or the College Militaire Royal at St. Jean, Que.

The public is invited to the convocation which begins at Royal Roads at noon. It will be followed by a sunset ceremony at 6:30 p.m. which will include an air show featuring the Snowbirds aerial display team and a naval display by the destroyer HMCS Saskatchewan.

There will be a commissioning parade at 2 p.m. next Saturday that will include a fly-past by aircraft from Comox and Cold Lake, Alta., a 17-gun salute and trooping of the colors.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, April 24

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sharp insights. You perceive, feel pulse of public. You regain sense of values. You know what is real as contrasted to fantasy. One who inspires you also feels more secure as a result of your presence. All will be clarified.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Call or message lets you know assignment is either finished—or adding a new dimension. Relative could figure prominently. Check persons who are to perform special services. Don't permit minor discontent to grow out of proportion to actual dimension.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance, new projects, stimulation of being creative—these are in spotlight. Leo, Aquarius individuals could play key roles. Emphasis on energy, making contacts, improving financial status, protecting valuables.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You're able now to successfully work with available material. One who instructs is an ally, although this may not be apparent on surface. Weigh offer from past associate, but remember that the future beckons with fresh worlds to conquer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Diversify. Social event can lead to glamour, excitement, ultimate travel and publishing project. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals figure prominently. Keep diet, health resolutions. Visitor bears glad tidings. Be recpetive!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Differences that exist with friends are not serious. Know it and check details. Relationship can be constructed on solid base. Aquarius, Scorpio and Leo persons enact key roles in your personal scenario. Relative talks about budget, purchase, protection of assets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Emphasis on communication with one "in command." Change can be made for your benefit if you display courage of convictions. Unorthodox financial arrangement could be featured. Maintain self-esteem, adhere to principles. You'll land on your feet!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): What seemed confrontation, zero hour, test of wills could turn out to be somewhat of a pleasant meeting. Be diplomatic, but don't give up something for nothing. Message will become extremely clear. You'll make adjustment within personal, home environment. Taurus could be involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be confusing emotion with logic. Key is to evaluate, to control impulse, to dig for information. Money, position, working partnership could be at stake. See in practical l ight. Refuse to be intimidated by one who talks a great game.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.) 19): Respect authority, but be aware of your own rights, identity. Older individual is very interested in you, but could be depending on outmoded concepts. Know it and get going on your own. If single, you might be seriously considering marriage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your natural talents, charms surge forward; you snap bonds of restriction. Your unique style, qualifications command attention. Keep promises, resolutions centering on work, health, recreation, conciliatory gesture towards one who shares interests, goals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Creativity dominates. Love is very much in picture. Excitement of change, variety, travel opportunity prevails. Leo, Aquarius and Scorpio persons figure prominently. Speculative venture should be carefully considered, not necessarily approved.

IF APRIL 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are loyal to family, fond of jewelry, sweets, have unusual voice and could be talented in theatre, drama. Taurus, Libra persons play important roles in your life. October will mark a turning point for you. You'll recover lost or stolen goods, make comeback, shake off emotional lethargy. In May, social life accelerates and you get rid of burden you should not have been carrying in first place.

Monday, April 25

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on home, security, basic issues, work schedule. Conclusion of deal, transaction is on agenda. You learn value of property; you know where you stand andgain insight into long-range possibilities, potential. Another Aries is in picture, along with Cancer individual.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New approach calls for versatility, especially in dealing with close neighbors, rela- Take notes on dreams. Give ors. Imprint style. Accept compliment proferred by attractive member of opposite sex.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Protect valuables. Take inventory. Check insurance, auto, home payments. Accent on money and how it gets that way. Follow through on hunch. Learn by teaching; give full play to intuitive intellect. Business associate wants you to succeed — and proves it. Cancer is in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Popularity increases; you win friends, allies. Diversify. Take intiative in making fresh contacts. Expand horizons. You receive news of valid opportunity which could involle publishing, travel. Gemini is likely to be in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Check with auto club, other organization geared to aid in processing papers, resolving problems. Visit to hospital could aid in bringing meaning to a situation or relationship that had become chaotic. Scorpio, Aquarius individuals figure prominently.

VIRGO (Auf. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on pleasure principle. You enjoy what you do, including relating to epople, gaining plaudits for creative munication, variety and trav- efforts. Change, com- Please, however, do clean up el are part of active agenda. those files!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Spotlight on arrangement which enables you to bypass red tape, to advance, to communicate with one who can aid in achieving goal. Business enterprise is favored. Money comes your way as result of service associated with added comfort, luxury item.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spiritual qualities surge to forefront; you know what should be done — and don't hesitate. Long-range plans, long-distance communications, special studies are featured. Set up writing schedule — and stick to it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Activities are intensified: one who means much to you have demands — they are justified. Bring meaningful events into focus; legal matters need attention, including partnership, leases fees connected with legal questions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Matters pertaining to agreements, legal ties command more-than-usual attention. You get chance to improve image, to codify various aspects of project, to cement ties with partner, mate. Favorable conclusions are highlighted.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stimulation comes as result of being with those who share work-security interests: You can take more independent, creative path. Greater self-assurance indicated as you believe you are not alone. Yes, Leo will be with you!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A child could lead you. Accent on youth, offspring, affairs of heart, speculative venture. Cancer individual figures in important way. Love, change, variety, gain from written word — these are spotlighted. The number "11" figures prominently.

IF APRIL 25th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are introspective, a spiritual person, striving for perfection is a strong part of your makeup. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You are sensuous, affectionate, possess "tender" feelings, have need to ponder metaphysical questions. September should be your most significant month of 1977, a year during which you organize priorities, go into busiess, accept more responsibility and earn more money. If single, you marry. If married, there could be an addition to family.

OLD-FASHIONED porch swing is a great alternative to air conditioning. And if your porch faces the front of the house, there's a bonus. You can keep an eye on all the neighborhood goings-on. You make this swing by using ¾-inch redwood, large eyebolts, and chain that's capable of supporting 200 pounds. To give the finished product the look of fine furniture, seal with shellac, then sand, and complete the job with a coat of exterior polyurethane mat varnish. Every Gardener Can Use a Coldframe jack beastall

Many home gardens do not include a coldframe in the layout, although it is a garden accessory which can be put to valuable use throughout the year.

On the other hand there are coldframes in gardens which are never used for the purposes intended.

Most home gardeners have a definite mental picture of a coldframe usually linked to a structure seen in a commercial plant nursery, and are quite correct in saying they would have no use for such an elaborate piece of equipment, nor the space to accommodate it.

But a coldframe need not be elaborate to be useful. To prove this statement we should consider its basic purpose.

It could be defined as a structure designed to create an artificial environment for the growing of plants by providing some measure of protection from the atmospheric conditions considered adverse to plant growth.

Any structure providing the necessary environment and protection could be classed as a coldframe.

This means that a planter on a balcony or a window box, half filled with compost and covered with one or more pieces of glass constitutes a coldframe. A packing case or large box, 12 inches deep also forms a frame, as does a hollow in the centre of a compost heap with the sides left to support a glass cover.

A semi-permanent fixture can be made with pieces of 2 by 6 planking if space is available, but the permanent frame of brick or concrete such as found in a commercial establishment is not needed in a home garden.

When glass is mentioned for the frame covers the home gardener suggests a preference for plastic film because it is cheaper and not so liable to be damaged in handling.

These apparent attributes of plastic film are open to question. In the first place, the film is not a substitute for glass because the two materials have different properties, the most important being the ability to retain warmth. Retention of warmth during the hours of darkness provides the artificial environment we are seeking.

Warmth, or heat, is extracted by solid objects from the short waves of light emanating from the sun. These short waves can pass through glass and plastic film to be absorbed by the frame and the plants and soil within.

After the solid objects have absorbed sufficient short waves of light to raise their temperature above that of the air within the frame, heat is radiated in the form of long waves, or heat waves.

These long waves cannot pass through glass, therefore are confined until the framework is cooled by the night air to a point where it is considerably lower than the enclosed air, after which the inside air gradually cools. This means that a glass covered frame is slow in cooling and the plants do not suffer sudden temperature changes.

Plastic materials offer no resistance to the passage of either the short waves of light or the long waves of heat, so the temperature within the enclosure drops to that of the outside air within approximately an hour after the sun has left the structure, and our purpose of creating an artificial atmosphere is defeated.

Secondly, plastic covers have to be held in place with screw hooks and eyes, wires, or ropes to prevent lifting in wind, whereas the heavier glass covers will remain in place in winds reaching the velocity called "strong".

Thirdly, as to damage, plastic film will tear or split with far less force than is needed to break glass, especially small panels set in a wooden frame.

It also becomes brittle when exposed to sun. The 5-mil. film normally used by home gardeners needs replacing every fall to ensure the safety of plants over the winter.

Growing plants successfully in a coldframe is something one learns better from experience than from the written word, but there are a few operational procedures worth mentioning that may keep the beginner from becoming frustrated.

While the artificial atmosphere we are attempting to create involves maintaining greater warmth than present in the outside atmosphere, fresh air is essential to plant growth. Success will depend on how much air is admitted to the frame, remembering that fresh air going in means warmth going out. The art is to balance the two.

The frame covers should be free so that any corner or edge away from the wind can be raised on a block to provide ventilation. Also, the frame covers have to be adjusted to suit prevailing weather conditions. In our climate this may involve changes every hour or so. A coldframe is not a structure that can be left unattended for days at a time.

Glass frame covers should be raised on stepped blocks whenever the outside temperatlre is in the range suited to the plants being grown, a condition which often prevails in rainy periods. Many home gardeners forget the frame when skies are cloudy or overcast, or rain is falling.

The heat maintained in a frame must never be sufficient to damage the plants, nor cause the need for frequent watering, because water rapidly cools the soil and causes a check to growth. When needed, it should be done early in the morning before the plants and soil become heated by the sun.

Excess humidity within the frame must be avoided to prevent troubles with fungus diseases and plant rots. It is better to allow the excess moisture to escape by removing the covers for an hour or so than to keep it trapped in a high temperature.

Plants growing in a coldframe of any type are using up the nutrients contained in a relatively small quantity of soil.

This soil is not in contact with a mass of surrounding soil therefore becomes depleted more quickly than the same area in the open garden. Frequent removal of this spent soil and replacement with screened compost is one of the keys to success with coldframes.

Probably the most useful structure in a home garden is a portable coldframe that can be set up and taken down in a few minutes.

The front, back, and two end pieces are made separately and of a convenient size for the purposes it is intended to serve. A length of six feet and width of three feet is a convenient size for one person to handle.

Near the ends of the front and back sections two battens form a slot to fit snugly to the end pieces. To erect, two stakes are driven to support the back, the two end pieces are fitted to the slots, the front fitted to the end pieces, and two more stakes driven to hold the front in place.

It can be set against a warm wall or fence over winter; on a raised bed for early vegetable sowings in February; over three rows of vegetables for the first sowings in spring; on a piece of ground in summer for okra, sweet peppers and other semi-tropicals; in part shade for indoor plants or late summer cuttings; over late vegetables in the fall; truly a versatile piece of equipment that can be stored on the garage wall if ever it is not being used.

Most frames can be made from scrap lumber and discarded window sash, the outlay being minimal compared to the returns.

While many home gardeners manage well enough without a frame of any kind, those who have mastered the fine points of operation and planned year-around uses truthfully say they would never again attempt gardening without a coldframe.

WORK FOR WEEK

Lilacs are related to privet and have same mass of greedy surface roots. Never dig around but provide one-inch deep mulch of old manure, compost or dry grass each May. Soak soil before and after application if any signs of lack of water. Water well during summer, particularly after flowers are finished.

Don't rush planting of gladioli and dahlias. Neither will form roots in soil that is cold and wet. Light, loose or sandy soils will be just right now, but those with clay base will need to wait until May for quicker results in rooting.

Prune forsythia when most flowers are finished. Cut off the flowered portion of each branch; leave new unflowered canes.

Flowering-currant is pruned by cutting off the flowered section of each branch.

Move home raised tomato plants into 5 or 6-inch pots.

Cowpoke's Range Is Air

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — "If I can help save even one life, it's well worth it," says the Badlands Cowpoke of his citizen's-band radio activities.

"I've helped quite a few people out of 30-below weather. I got rescue units to them."

The 28-year-old Cowpoke — Lonnie, when he's not on the air — became legally blind in August, 1975, the result of diabetes. The Dickinson, N.D., CBer asked that his last name not be used.

"For me, CB is the greatest thing in the world," he said in a telephone interview. "I don't have time to feel sorry for myself.

"I started out on this just as a pastime. I always enjoyed visiting with truckers and most truckers have radios. I figured if I started talking with truckers and a bunch got to know me, it would break my monotony up and break theirs up, too."

He said he has talked with hundreds of truckers and recognizes many by their voice or handle.

"I love wrecker calls," the Cowpoke said. "It makes me feel good helping out someone on the other end."

Lonnie, who got his CB radio last year, said he keeps it on 24 hours a day.

"If somebody hollers at me in the middle of the night, I take that, too."

Monday, April 25
through Saturday, April 30

Mrs. Packard will be in attendance
1:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. Daily

Mrs. Packard displays a high degree of efficiency in most all the varied forms of art, but sculpture has always held a top position in her affection and she has developed into one of the foremost Lyrical Sculptors in the west.

A native Victorian, the artist made the family stable at her parents home, her first studio, developing it over the years into a gracious home where she still lives.

Mrs. Packard has broken with the trend to modern art returning to the fundamentals of the human spirit—using man's oldest means of emotional expression . . . the human figure. Her sculpture bespeaks that which is as old as mankind yet as new as the wonder of a newborn babe.

An accomplished vocalist, pianist and portrait painter as well as sculptor, Mrs. Packard leads a fully diverse and busy life; yet still remains an approachable, warm, modest personality; vitally interested in all that goes on about her.
Mrs. Packard will appear on the Ida Clarkson show on CHEK TV, Monday, April 25 — 12 to 1 p.m.

'Wizard' of Wine Uses Science to Keep Magic in Bordeau

By PAUL MAJENDIE

BORDEAUX, France (Reuter) — Before that bottle of Bordeaux lands on your table, the "wizard" of wine may well have waved his magic wand over it.

For Prof. Emile Peynaud is one of the world's most famous oenologists, masters of the art and science of chemically treating wine to bolster its taste and color.

From a small office in University of Bordeaux he runs the Institute of Oenology, whose list of alumni spans the globe. His intimate knowledge of the noble grape has been imparted to winegrowers from Chile to California and South Africa.

He also acts as a consultant for many winegrowers in Bordeaux, and this is where he practises what he preaches—prevention is better than cure.

"For example, a winegrower comes to see me complaining that his wine is too harsh, contains too much tannin, or takes too much or too little time to mature," he said.

"So we go back to the harvest stage and see exactly how ripe the grapes are when he picks them, how much he crushes them in the presses, the fermentation temperature. All these are factors."

That to him is the true role of oenology. Act before rather than afterward, when only a limited range of permitted chemicals can correct the balance. More than 60 rules and regulations in France cover such "tampering."

Peynaud is not a chauvinistic defender of Bordeaux. "I return humbled from abroad and tell the Bordelais that they won't always be the world champions," he said.

Globetrotting has convinced him that for a sound wine industry a country with a strong economy is needed together with people who can and want to buy good-quality wines.

"Chile and the Argentine certainly make good wines but they don't have clients to pay for better-quality wines," he said.

"The United States has good wine consumers and great economic strength. Californian wines will eventually rival European wines.

Peynaud is one of the few people in this wine capital to have welcomed the 1974 "winegate" scandal, when leading traders were condemned for mislabelling or doctoring wine. The case sullied the reputation of Bordeaux wines.

Oenologists discovered that the wines had been mixed with humbler stock from the mass-production Midi region, and Paynaud commented: "The trial showed that we could catch the crooks.

"Instead of discrediting Bordeaux, it should have shown how well we defended our wines."

For Peynaud French legal safeguards, to cover wine treatment are adequate. He went further, and said: "In Europe wine is the best-protected food product."

His lifelong love affair with the world's vineyards is still going strong because for him "wine is like finding a woman you thought you knew well, only to discover she is full of surprises."

Amin Ruthless, Sane—Priest

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Idi Amin may look to the world like an irrational, blood-letting tyrant, but the statement fails on one major count.

"Amin is sane. He is very shrewd, aware of what he is doing and accountable," says Rev. John Thompson, 40-year-old Anglican priest who spent two years under the Ugandan regime of the ex-infantryman.

Thompson, who is touring Anglican dioceses in support of the Church of Uganda (Anglican), said in Victoria this week he is often asked whether Field Marshal Amin is crazy.

He said he has only met the self-styled president once but has to conclude from those who know him that the outlandish statements and behavior are deliberate and calculated to screen outrages committed elsewhere.

Amin, he said, lusts solely for power.

"He is a man who wants to hold power at any cost."

And to this end he is determined to root out any who oppose him or possess any potential for leadership.

Educated people and the organized church are prime targets, which would make Thompson a doubly marked man if he returned to Uganda and his teaching post at the central Anglican theological school, Bishop Tucker College at Mukono, near Kampala.

Thompson and his family came back to Canada last August, before the current wave of persecution and murder of church leaders. He has been taking post-graduate courses in adult education in Toronto and wanted to return to Uganda but the Anglican Church of Canada would not consent to the reposting in such a dangerous social and political climate

Instead, the priest is speaking on behalf of the Church of Uganda and trying to interpret to Anglicans here what it happening to the church there.

Thompson said Ugandan Anglicans are taking their faith more seriously than ever, feeling deeper commitment because of the oppression they face, taking heart from the martyrdom of those who have been slain.

He said the Christians of Uganda — about six million or half the population — "are so infused with the spirit of God they still describe themselves as being joyful in the Lord."

They meet at least twice a week, often Thursday in addition to Sunday, and witness and reaffirm their faith to each other.

"To them, adversity is not a time of destruction, but of testing, or reaffirming their faith."

Canadians who sent Easter cards and expressions of encouragement to the bishops of Uganda have done a lot to lend moral support to the Christian cause.

Thompson said this campaign will continue another 30 days, to Whitsunday, officially the end of Easter, which the church regards as the most significant festival.

"Jesus is triumphant over everything there is," Thompson said, and Ugandan Christians interpret the blood of Amin's atrocities as the propogating seed of their faith.

What else can Canadians do?

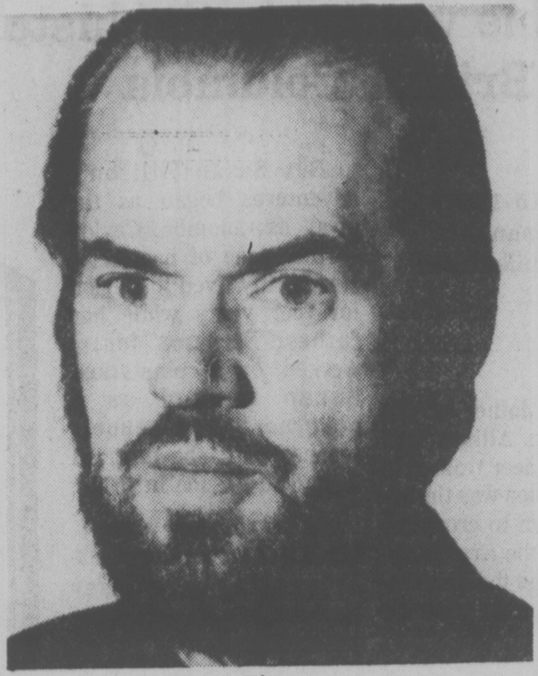
Thompson carries a list of eight suggestions, starting with prayer. Next is support of the Canadian government's intention to seek an independent inquiry into violation of Ugandan human rights by writing to the prime minister, minister of external affairs and MPs.

If cards are written to Ugandan bishops, there should be no political comment because mail is censored.

People may also become better informed about Uganda and take part in discussions about the church crisis there; Amnesty International is one agency with advice on violation of human rights.

And finally, money may be given in aid of Ugandan refugees being cared for by the church.

Thompson sees no violent reaction to the regime developing. It is well-protected py the State Research Bureau and segments of the armed forces loyal to Amin.



Rev. Thompson

Remarkable women in the history of British Columbia

Susan Allison (1845-1937)
to settle in the Similkameen

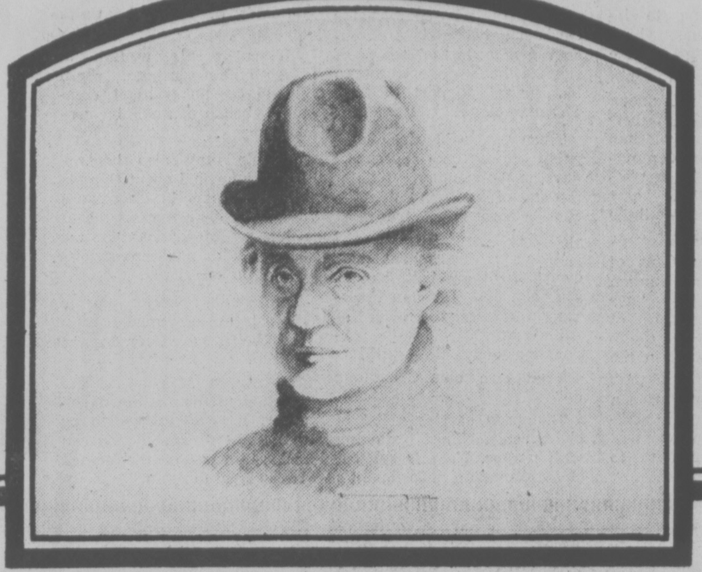
Known as "The Mother of the Similkameen", Susan Allison was one of the earliest pioneer women in B.C. In fact, Mrs. Allison was the second European woman to cross the Hope Mountains and the first European woman to settle in the Similkameen Valley in 1868 near present-day Princeton.

But Susan Allison's adventures began as far away as Colombo, Ceylon — the place of her birth. Her family lived in Ceylon for four years while her father, Stratton Moir, worked on a plantation. Susan worked as a governess and schoolteacher until she married John Fall Allison in 1868.

As a pioneer woman, Susan had the arduous task of running a pioneer household in an extremely isolated area.

In addition she worked in a trading post store and ran the post office.

Between July 1869 and August 1882, Mrs. Allison gave birth to fourteen children — without any medical assistance and aided only by her husband and an Indian woman. All fourteen children, incidently, reached maturity.



Besides being a busy mother and housewife, Susan somehow managed the time to master the Chinook language so that she could communicate with the native people. She also undertook the education of all her children.

EATON'S

This woman began a writing career after the turn of the century when most of the Allison children were grown, and published in the Princeton Star (Similkameen Star), the Okanagan Historical Society Reports and later in the Vancouver Sunday Province.

In retrospect, Susan Allison is as remarkable today, as she was yesterday. Truly a mother of great achievements for B.C. and our very own heritage . . .

KNOCKOUT ROBBERY

A stumble-footed burglar early this monring knocked himself out trying to escape from Esquimalt police.

A police spokesman said investigating officers found the man in Esquimalt Legion, 622 Admirals, wedged in a three-foot deep shaft in an upstairs closet.

He apparently fell after darting into the closet when he heard police approaching.

Two officers on patrol just after 4 a.m. noticed a window above the front door of the legion had been smashed. When they went to investigate they heard someone inside.

They called for reinforcements to surround the building and two officers went inside — only to make one of the easiest arrests of their careers.

Police said the man had about $600 in bills and several dollars in change stuffed in his pockets. The money had been taken from three float trays and two cigarette machines.

The man was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he is in satisfactory condition.

Police said the man has been charged with breaking and entering and theft.

REMEMBER CLOCKS GAIN, SLEEPERS LOSE

Everybody knows daylight saving time arrives tonight, don't they?

At 2 a.m. officially, although hardly anyone stays up just to celebrate that moment.

The question is: which way to turn the hands of the clock, back an hour or ahead?

Just remember: spring ahead, fall back.

Put another way, you're about to lose an hour's sleep.

CONSUMER, PRODUCER LOSE

Plumptre Raps Food Politics

Beryl Plumptre, former vice-chairman of the Anti-Inflation Board, said here today government policies on agriculture and food are often based on political expediency rather than the needs of consumers and producers.

Ina speech to the British Columbia Home Economic Association spring conference at the Queen Victoria Inn, Mrs. Plumptre said there is a "definite trend towards authoritarianism" which stifled the initiative of producers and limited market forces.

Mrs. Plumptre, a long-time proponent of a national food policy which would provide an over-all strategy for food production, processing and marketing, attacked an allegedly excessive use of marketing boards for farm produce.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan is a big supporter of marketing boards.

"Marketing boards certainly have a place in a national food policy in so far as they provide farmers with useful information on markets and agricultural research," she said.

"But marketing boards with monopolistic powers have no place in a national food policy or in our economy, no more than has monopolistic industry."

Mrs. Plumptre, who also headed the defunct food prices review board, said some claimed Canada has an agricultural policy that serves as the national food policy.

"But an agricultural policy is far too limited, and indeed, I doubt we do have a national agricultural policy."

She said some policies encourage production, others limit output; some subsidize farmers to stabilize income while others leave farmers to bear the effects of bad weather on their crops.

Mrs. Plumptre said one example is the dairy industry in which government policy "oscillated between policies to limit or to expand production." It was impossible for farmers to plan production efficiently under those conditions, she said.

Mrs. Plumptre spoke from a text released in advance in Ottawa.

Guerrillas Get PoW Status

GENEVA (UPI) — The Red Cross has ruled that guerrilla fighters captured by the enemy must be treated as prisoners of war and not as terrorists.

In revising the 1949 Geneva War Conventions to bring them into line with modern warfare, the Red Cross humanitarian law conference Friday adopted an article extending prisoner-of-war status to guerrillas.

But the fighters will be required to "distinguish themselves from the civilian population" and "carry their arms openly" in combat, military manoeuvres preceding an attack or while being watched by the enemy.

Up to now captured guerrillas have been considered terrorists because the 1949 war accords do not give them prisoner-of-war status, which forbids summary executions and guarantees food and medical attention.

The conference vote was 66 in favor, 18 abstentions and two against — Israel and Brazil.

Israeli delegate Meir Rosenne, whose country has been attacked repeatedly by Palestinian guerrillas based outside its borders, argued the change "encourages acts of terrorism."

"Civilians are now entitled to take part in combat which is against all the rules of war," Rosenne said.

A delegate from the Palestine Liberation Organization found the change "on the whole satisfactory," but complained it hampers guerrilla infiltrators.

"It recognizes liberation movement fighters as prisoners of war, but with the restriction that he has to show his arms even before the attack," he said.

British delegate David Hugues-Morgan abstained because of objections to the requirement that guerrillas must carry their arms openly while they are visible to the enemy.

"Many armed forces today have electronic devices which enable visual observation to be carried out during hours of darkness and in other conditions of poor visibility," Hugues-Morgan said.

$780M Drained By Ottawa

VANCOUVER (CP) — Economic Development Minister Don Phillips says Confederation will cost British Columbia $780 million this year and "it's still growing."

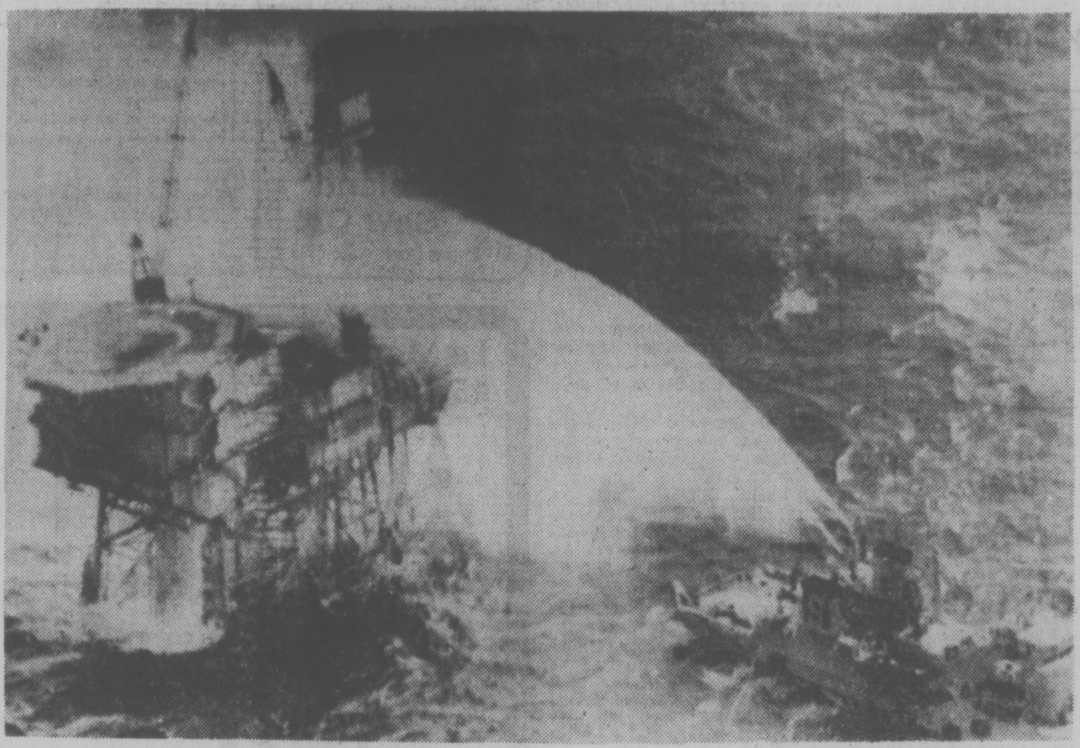
Phillips said Thursday the cost of membership to B.C. was derived from a study by his ministry.

"During the last several years, federal revenues have been 25 to 30 per cent higher than federal spending and has resulted in a direct loss to the British Columbia economy which has averaged $500 million a year since 1971," Phillips told a meting of the Canadian Association of Equipment Distributors.

"When that sort of money is going out of the province, we lose tremendous economic opportunities.

"I don't think anyone objects to the concept that in a vast country such as Canada, the rich provinces should help the provinces not so fortunate. But there has to be reason and there has to be constant adjustment, or the rich provinces will no longer be rich."

The minister suggested that B.C. was being stuck by the federal government with more than it could afford to pay.



Blowout scene has fireship spraying water on spewing oil platform

Massive Oil Well Blowout Spewing Into North Sea

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — Officials trying to plug a 4,000-ton-a-day oil leak in Europe's largest offshore oilfield said today even a tiny spark by workers could set off an explosion and turn the platform into a "torchlight."

The leak, which began Friday night, has sent an 18-square-mile oil slick drifting toward the western coasts of Norway and Denmark and prompted oil company officials to summon oilfield troubleshooter Paul "Red" Adair to the site.

One official said Adair, a leading American expert on oil blowouts, will have to approach the platform in a small rubber boat.

"A helicopter cannot land on the platform, neither can a ship go near it," said a spokesman for the American Phillips Petroleum Co., which operates the platform 150 miles northeast of Scotland in the Ekofisk field.

"The exhaust could be enough to set it on fire and turn it into a torchlight."

The 112-man crew of the "Bravo" platform in the North Sea was evacuated when the blowout began.

A phillips spokesman in London said the rig was being "worked over" — undergoing routine maintenance — and the device that prevents leaks, or blowouts, had been removed. When this is done, he said, heavy mud is poured down the hole to maintain pressure.

"But it looks as though there was a sudden upward movement in the pressure."

Norewegian authorities warned all North Sea countries about the disaster, and asked for chemicals and special oil nets to help contain the slick. High seas and strong winds prevented early attempts to control it.

The fire vessel "Seaway Falcon" sprayed water on the platform to reduce the fire hazard, while British Petroleum's fire-fighting ship "Forties Kiwi" rushed to scene to assist.

The Ekofisk field is the largest offshore project in Europe. Discovered in 1969, it now averages 350,000 barrels of oil daily.

The chairman of the Norwegian Fisherman's Association said the accident was "something he had expected to happen sooner or later. We fear severe consequences for the fisheries."

CABBIE COLLARED, PAIR FACE CHARGES

Two men were charged today in provincial court with attempted robbery with violence after a taxi driver was grabbed by the neck in a secluded Colwood area Friday night.

Brian Gordon Bain, 19, of Haney, and Dale Kenneth Parker, 20, of no fixed address, were remanded in custody to Monday for plea.

Colwood RCMP said two men flagged a C & C cab near the Johnson Street bridge at about 10 p.m.

They asked driver Gurnam Sinan Bajwa, 27, to take them to Colwood.

When they arrived one of the men grabbed Bajwa around the neck and started to strangle him while the other attempted to reach for the cabbie's wallet.

Bajwa broke loose and called to a passer-by for help. The passer-by called police.

The two men jumped out of the cab and fled.

Bajwa was taken to Victoria General Hospital and released after a check.

DOG DAYS IN PARIS

PARIS (UPI) — The dogs of Paris won a limited victory Friday when Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac decreed that they would have their own special toilet space on every street.

The victrory was not complete, however, since Chirac's dog plan is a far cry from an expensive 1975 project to set up flower-decorated private flush toilets for the four-footed. That idea never got off the ground.

From now on, Paris dogs will have at their disposal an area of 6 feet by 6 in the gutter of every block. The strategic spot will be indicated by a big white cross on the pavement and by an arrow and a dog figure printed on the sidewalk at the appropriate place. It will be off-limits to parked cars.

In an earlier plan, Paris officials, anxious to encourage dog owners to curb their pets, offered cleanliness medals to all dogs who were reported as law-biding to the chief of police.

The idea never really caught on and only 100 dogs a year out of the thousands that roam the Paris streets in increasing numbers were ever awarded the medal.

The new dog places have received no official name as yet. They are currently being tested in the 6th district of Paris.

What remains to be seen is how the old dogs of Paris will learn this new trick and how the people who live in houses in front of the dog spaces will react.

Jobless Soars to 30% for Metis

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The unemployed rate among Metis and non-status Indians in rural communities runs as high as 30 per cent, a pilot survey by the federal manpower department has found.

Preliminary figures tabulated for the survey, not yet officially released, show the 30 per cent rate was hit in northern British Columbia. The Lower Mainland of the province is not far behind. It had a rate of 26.3 per cent.

The survey was conducted by the manpower department in 1975 and 1976 after urging and pressure from the Native Council of Canada (NCC), which speaks for the country's 750,000 Metis and non-status Indians.

Fred Jobin, secretary-treasurer of the NCC, said the council has been concerned that Metis unemployment problems were being overlooked by federal officials.

He said the bureaucrats have ignored the problem because the government had no figures to give it a lead on the gravity of the situation and would not look at information compiled by the NCC.

Some indication of this situation came to light when the first allocations for the $250 million Canada Works emergency job creation program were announced.

Manpower Minister Bud Cullen set aside over $9 million for job creation projects on Indian reserves, while ignoring the specific needs of Metis communities, which do not fare well when competing with rural white communities for government funds, Jobin said. The unemployed situation for both reserve Indians and Metis is horrendous but reserve Indians number only 250,000 compared to the 750,000 Metis.

The Native Council is hopeful that Ottawa will come up with at least $11 million for Metis job creation this year in rural communities.

Jobin said Cullen has agreed to designate money for Metis communities, but no specific amount has been announced.

A request by the NCC to be involved in working out the formula that will decide the Metis allocatio nwas ignored by the manpower official in charge, Jobin said.

The pilot survey suggests that if all Metis eligible, including married women, were in the labor force the unemployed rate in most regions of Canada would run between 40 and 50 per cent.

Many older workers and new entrants, the survey noted, are so discouraged they have given up looking for work.

Alberta had the lowest Metis unemployed rate of all regions surveyed. It was 11 per cent. In neoghboring Saskatchewan the unemployed rate climbed to 21.2 per cent and in Manitoba it was 15.4 per cent.

CanCel Plans Mill

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. plans to build a $7.7 million smallwood sawmill at Castlegar, company president Ron Gross told the company's annual meeting Friday.

Gross said the mill should create 50 jobs in the West Kootenay region.

He said the new mill is included in $75 million in capital expenditures the company plans for this year, more than the total capital expended by CanCel during the last four years.

Gross said a substantial part of the company's expenditure program is centred around Prince Rupert.

Three-Way Talks 'Positive' On Phase-Out of Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Government, labor and big business — traditional antagonists cautiously entered a new cooperative relationship Friday.

Following a top-level economic meeting between the three groups, Prime Minster Trudeau said initial talks were "extremely positive."

The government found "a great deal of assistance and help" from labor and business leaders in drafting a discussion paper on methods for ending the federal wage and price controls program, Trudeau said.

Labor and big business are opposed to the conttols program, but the government is reluctant to lift it early unless there are guarantees there will be no fresh outburst of inflation.

Joe Morris, president of the 2.3-million-member Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), said Friday's meeting was "a good start" towards continued three-way consultations on major economic problems facing the country.

A sub-committee was established to decide on the form future talks should take. In the meantime, top labor and business leaders are to meet Tuesday to discuss common economic concerns.

Ian Barclay, director of British Columbia Forest Products Ltd., said business and labor representatives at Friday's meeting were concerned particularly about the lack of investment in the country and high unemployment.

Barclay said in an interview that if the major economic decision-makers could not reach a decision on an end to

Without agreement on an end to controls, high inflation, unemployment and a slack economy-operating well below its potential — would continue, Barclay said.

Waterland May Cancel Spraying

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Friday the provincial government's program to spray a section of the Fraser Canyon with pesticides to halt infestation of the western spruce budworm may be cancelled.

In an interview after addressing a meeting of the Cariboo Lumber Manufacturers' Association, the minister said he would listen to both sides of the controversial issue.

The government plans to spray pesticides orthene and seven-4-oil over 10,000 acres of forest infested with the budworm, but Waterland said the government "is certainly not inflexible" and the spraying may not go ahead.

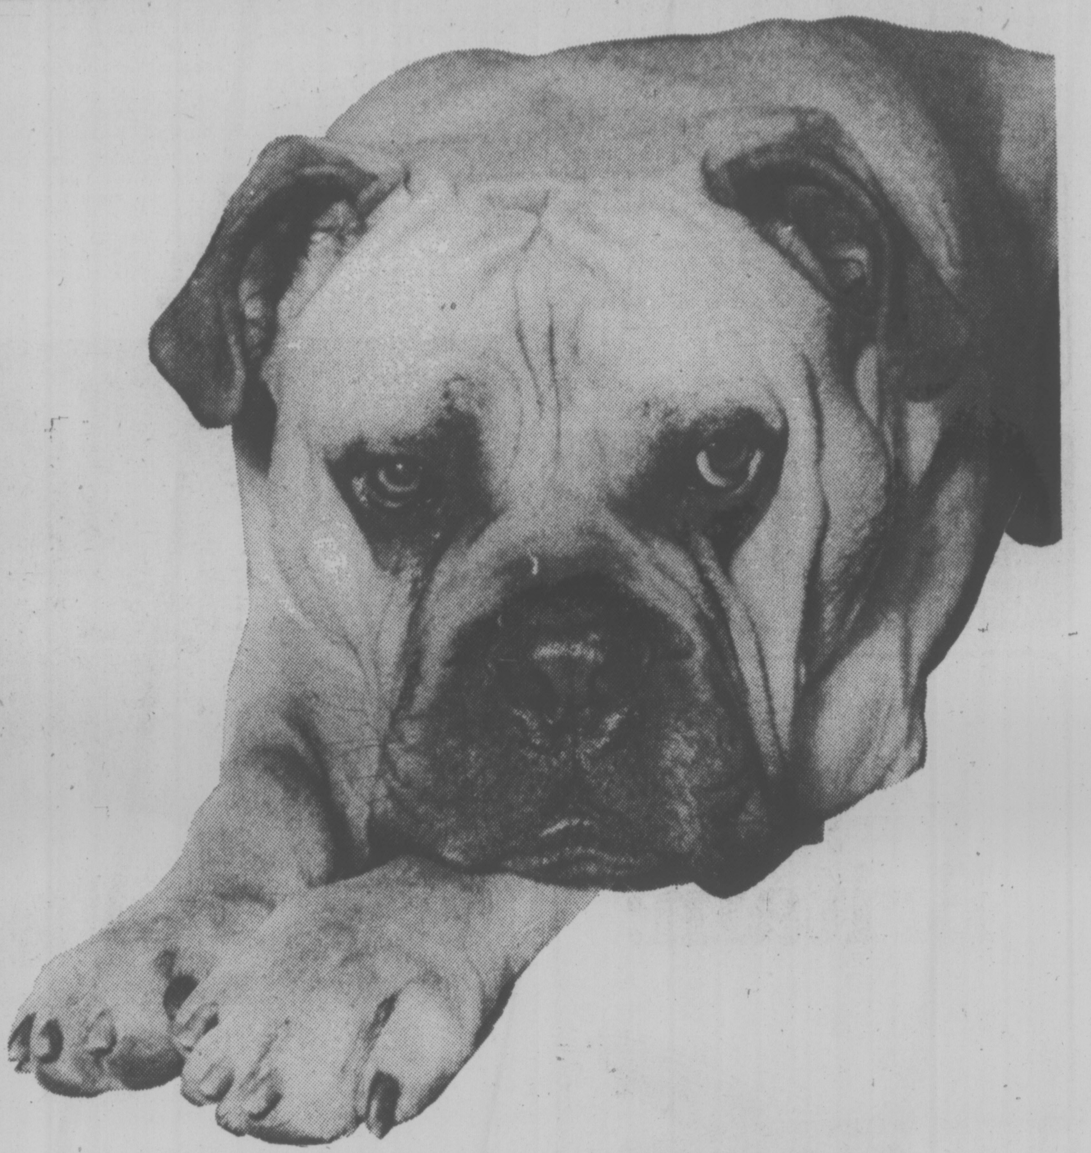
The Dog Zapper

Penetrating Sound Waves Bring Uneasy Truce Between The Postmen and Harassing Dogs

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff



'Darn posties and their new-fangled gizmos'

Who'd have thought it possible?

A softening in Israeli-Palestinian relations ... detente progressing between Russia and the U.S. ... dogs and postmen living in peaceful coexistence.

Dogs and postmen? Wait a minute.

But it's happening, thanks to modern technology and a dog's super-sensitive hearing.

The technology comes in the form of a Dog Chaser, a pocket-sized gadget that produces high frequency sonic waves that when beamed at a menacing dog, stops him dead in his tracks, and usually sends him packing in the opposite direction.

"Normally once is enough," says Victoria Post Office delivery manager Marv Glover.

The high pitch is barely audible to humans, but causes momentary discomfiture in dogs. It's so effective that dogs, which at one time daily harangued letter carriers, are now docile tail-waggers, or else head for cover at the sight of a uniform.

Some even accompany the letter carrier on his rounds.

But dog-lovers shouldn't be alarmed. The Dog Chaser is not used indiscriminately. A letter carrier has to convince his supervisor a dog is harassing him, and then he is allowed to take the postal station's single Dog Chaser with him for a day or two until the dog is "trained." The sound it produces is harmless — it just persuades a dog to switch rather than fight.

For all its magic, the Dog Chaser isn't the only tactic devised by postmen during the protracted dog wars.

Al Bennett, the letter carrier supervisor for the Victoria Post Office, recalls the time he was on a beat in Esquimalt a few years ago.

It was a fairly doggy route, as routes go, and Bennett wisely befriended three burly mongrels who followed him around his route.

They became his bodyguards, and faithfully fended off other dogs who hankered after a chaw of postman.

The irony of it all was that non-dog owners would shout at Bennett to keep his mutts off their lawn. "I didn't even know whose dgs they were," he says.

A Sidney postman had a confrontation with a German Shepherd every day on the route. None of the recommended solutions worked, so one day he brought along a lacrosse ball.

Today they're great friends, the dog playfully gallops around the route chasing and chewing lacrosse balls instead of the postman.

One of the Victoria area's 19 (out of 252) women letter carriers keeps a box of dog biscuits in her satchel as a peace offering.

There's a woman in Oak Bay whose otherwise friendly dog (as is often the case) has it in for the letter carrier. The only way he can get by the dog is to offer a biscuit.

The woman recognizes this imposition and gives the letter carrier the biscuits that he in turn gives her dog.

Bennett one time had a route where the dog wouldn't let him deliver the mail — that was the dog's duty. Every day Bennett would come to the gate, hold out the mail, and the dog would grab it and take it up to his mistress on the porch.

And woe betide the day when Bennett had no mail for the woman. In an ironic reverse, the dog wouldn't let Bennett continue his route unless he left some mail.

Bennett always carried spare empty envelopes in his satchel for such days. The dog was none the wiser.

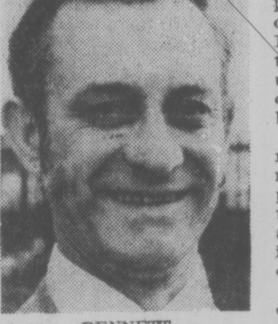
Not all the devices used by posties over the years have been successful.

A spray bomb called Halt! is sometimes carried by postmen. It spews a yellow mustard and pepper foam at the dog.

A few years ago, Glover was giving last-minute instructions to nine new postmen who were awaiting inspection the day a new route was being started in a northern communit

The lesson was on the proper use of Halt! Glover pressed the lever, yellow foam blasted out, was caught by the wind and covered the postmen. Suddenly there were nine coughing, sneezing postmen with yellow foam all over their new uniforms.

Another postman tried Halt! on an attacking dog and later filed a report: "Just thought I'd let you know one full can of Halt! lasts 30 seconds. Could I have another can? The dog likes the taste and wants more."



BENNETT
... he's survived

But for all the tricks and gadgets, dogs do get in their licks — some serious, others funny.

Not long ago in Victoria, a letter carrier complained he was being menaced by a large dog.

As his supervisor, Bennett went to investigate.

He found a St. Bernard at the address, cautiously approached the house and asked the dog's mistress to keep her dog inside at mail delivery time.

"Oh my goodness," the surprised woman said. "Of course I'll keep him inside if he scares the postman, but look," and she pried open the dog's mouth where there wasn't a single tooth to be found.

On top of that, the dog was so old and arthritic, it could hardly walk.

"The best it could do was gum someone to death," Bennett said.

Once when Glover was the postmaster in Victoria, someone brought the mountain to Mohammed. A customer in the downtown post office tied up her huge dog to the railing outside the door to the lock boxes.

The girl went inside. the main post office, and for the next 10 minutes, users of the post office boxes were either trapped inside the lock box area, or prevented from gaining access, by the ferocious canine Horatio at the door.

Dogs aren't the only offenders. Cat attacks are not that uncommon. Bennett remembers walking up to one house where he knew the dog to be friendly.

But there happened to be a strange cat on the porch. The dog cornered the cat. The cat escaped by clawing up one side of Bennett, across his shoulder and down his back.

Bennett set — what must be a record by being a letter carrier for nine years — covering virtually averey Victoria route — without ever being bitten by a dog. The cat scratches are his only scars.

Another Victoria letter carrier was ambushed from above by a cat who leaped on him from an overhead rose trellis. (Casting Persians on posties?)

But the serious attacks tend to dampen the humor of the funny ones. Earlier this week a postman in Victoria was severely bitten three times by a dog that he's known and petted daily for years.

Little mongrels seem to be the worst offenders, not Shepherds and Dobermans as one would expect, Bennett says. This is partly due to the fact that owners of large dogs usually keep them under control.

A postman in Trail took over the route of another who was sick. At this particular house, there was no mention of the German Shepherd on the carrier's log book, because the dog was always chained in the back yard.

However, on the new letter carrier's first morning, the child of the house had been playing with the dog before going to school. She left it unchained.

The letter carrier was bent over stuffing the mail through the screen door. Without a bark of warning the dog hit, sinking his jaws into the postman's rear.

The impact sent him through the screen door, cutting his ear and forehead — and he needed three stitches in his buttock.

A few winters ago, a Victoria postman was startled by a sudden canine attack. He slipped on the ice and cracked his head. His equilibrium was disturbed and he had to quit work not long after. The dog had never actually touched him.

Last year in Surrey a letter carrier required 52 stitches to close a wound.

There were about 10 disabling dog bites involving lost time and medical treatment in Greater Victoria last year, and 236 in all the B.C. and Yukon postal district. This is down from 319 in 1974-75.

Dog owners are liable for all costs incurred by the Post Office, Workers' Compensation Board and department of labor, resulting from a dog bite.

The average cost is $500 per attack, excluding court settlements.

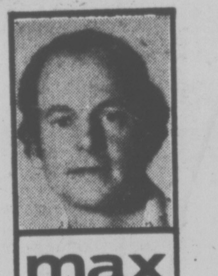
He Thinks of Happy Things—How?



It's amazing, and rather wonderful, how some people can smile through it all.

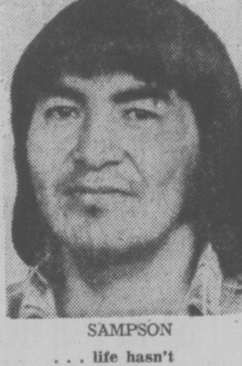
Through tragedy, through ill-fortune and even through the hurt that discrimination brings.

But it angers me, to find that a local family which lost its home, possessions and savings in a fire has met not with compassion but with rejection — simply because its members are Indians. Talk about kicking someone while he's down!

Seven weeks ago, Chuck Sampson left his home on the Tsartlip Indian Reserve in Central Saanich and a couple of hours later it burned to the ground.

Chuck and his wife Marguerite and their five children — Maureen, 13, Maria, 11, Marion, 9, Francis, 8, and 3-year-old O.J. — lost everything. Like many of the homes on the reserve, theirs was not insured. (Because of a lack of fire regulations and the fact most of the reserve's buildings don't meet Central Housing and Mortgage Corporation standards, fire insurance premiums are beyond the reach of most residents).

But Chuck Sampson is in a much worse position than most. A shipwright for 17 years, he badly injured his back in an accident while working for Philbrooks Shipyard in Sidney and hasn't worked for the last four years. Taken off compensation some time ago, he and his family now struggle along on welfare.



SAMPSON
... life hasn't been too kind

After the fire, the Friendship Centre (which aids native peoples) donated some blankets, pillows and towels and there were two anonymous donations of $35.

"We even got a couple of $50 donations from people in Vancouver and that helped a lot," says Chuck.

But the material help hasn't made up for the blockades Sampson has run into while trying to put a decent roof over his family's heads.

He has searched and searched for a place to rent while his name goes to the bottom of the list of families waiting for a hope to build on the reserve. Nothing. Three times the Sampsons have moved and each time to something more cramped.

Right now, Marion and Francis are living with Chuck's mother on the reserve but the other five in the family are squeezed into two tiny rooms of a Brentwood motel. And the Indian Affairs Deptartment will only pay for that until the end of this month. After that, they must move again but where?

"Well, we don't know," Chuck says, manging a grin. "But I'm hoping my cousin can get us a trailer and have it moved on to the reserve."

It's all rather disgusting, but Chuck Sampson did have a house lined up — until they found out he was an Indian.

"There was a good place we knew of in Brentwood so I phoned and the agent (for the owners who live in Campbell River) told me 'Sure, it's available; just nip down and take a look and if it seems okay, it's yours'," Chuck explains.

"There was a five-month lease on the house and it was $325 a month. But then I made the mistake of telling him my name and that we were burned out in the reserve fire and suddenly he started saying things like 'oh well, the owner will probably be coming back soon so this wouldn't suit you' and things like 'the water tank leaks and the place isn't too nice anyway.'

"This agent promised to find me something else and call me back but, of course, he never did."

Yet Chuck Sampson isn't bitter.

"It happens all the time to us," he says a little sadly. "Once I quit a job because of discrimination. I was the only Indian there and they gave all the whites a 75-cent-an-hour raise. They gave me a nickel raise and I couldn't believe it!

"Their argument was that the quality of my work wasn't good enough but I knew that wasn't true because I was a leadhand at the time and none of my boats ever came back for repairs. I took a little longer over it and the workmanship was better. So I just packed up my gear and walkout out."

The evil of discrimination lingers everywhere, though, says Chuck. His own children get a tough time from the other kids and even from some of the teachers at school in Brentwood, he adds, and his nephew has complained bitterly of forever being referred to as "Broken Arrow" or "Wagon Burner" at Saint Michael's University School in Victoria.

Life really hasn't been too kind to Chuck Sampson.

As well as being discriminated against, injuring his back and having his home burn down, his second wife Gwendolyn died during a gallbladder operation when she was only 17, and he, himself, needed more than 20 stitches to patch up his head after a bad car accident last October.

Yet Chuck doesn't believe in bad luck.

"Things just happen," he says with a smile.

He smiles a lot, really, and prefers to think of happy things; of the sports he loves (he's a nut and named his son Owen Joseph so he could call him O.J. after American football star O. J. Simpson), of all the kids he coaches in floor hockey, basketball and softball, and of his family.

"I try to be happy all the time," he says simply.

19 Get Help, 25 Refused Civic Grants

Each year there's good news and bad news for a wide variety of organizations which seek financial help from municipal governments in Greater Victoria.

Because there are more good causes than money, Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt councils turn the job of apportioning available funds over to an inter-municipal committee. With municipal budgets being set, this is the time of year the hard decisions have to be made.

Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell, one of the committee members, says many applications are turned down because the organizations fail to supply comprehensive financial statements.

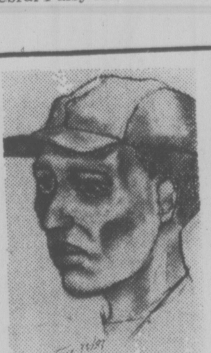
Committee recommendations still have to be approved by the individual councils but this is largely a matter of form. Where grants are approved, costs are shared roughly 41 per cent by Victoria, 11 per cent by Oak Bay, 39 per cent by Saanich and nine per cent by Esquimalt.

Six organizations which sought a total of $141,912 in cash grants are recommended for a total of $71,444. Thirteen other groups which asked for a grant in lieu of taxes are being supported by the committee.

A total of 25 groups asking for $239,233 were refused. Two others turned down were told to apply directly to municipalities.

Groups recommended for cash grants were Need-Victoria Crisis line which sought $12,000 and got $10,700, Victoria Celebrations Society which asked $12,000 and got $10,000; Victoria Conservatory of Music ($20,000) $9,962 plus seven per cent; Bastion Theatre ($34,912) $15,651 plus seven per cent; Art Gallery of Greater Victoria ($60,000) $43,093 plus seven per cent; Salvation Army Christmas Bureau ($3,000) $2,738 plus seven per cent.

Groups recommended for grants in lieu of taxes were Canadian Red Cross, YM-YWCA, G. R. Pearkes Clinic, Fernwood House Society, St. John Ambulance, Goodwill Enterprises, Garth Homer Achievement Society, the Salvation Army, Boys and Girls Clubs, Island White Cross Rehabilitation Centre, Greater Victoria Association for Retarded, Girl Guides and the Cerebral Palsy Association.



Suspect's Sketch Released

Victoria Police Friday released a sketch of the suspect in Thursday's robbery of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Douglas and View.

The man is described as about 25 years old, dark olive skin, about five feet 10 inches tall and 145 pounds.

Witnesses said he wore a green cap and a blue zippered jacket.

'$100,000' Tea Set Stirs Up the Museum

There are tea sets and there are tea sets but the one on display at the Provincial Museum is not, repeat not, worth anywhere near the $100,000 reported earlier this week.

Dan Gallacher, curator of modern history, said Friday the set is worth only about $500 ... and that's tops.

The earthenware set, made in Northern China in the early part of the century popped into the news recently when Grace Leon of Vancouver announced the set in the museum had been stolen from her home two years ago.

A closer examination proved it wasn't so.

Gallacher said Mrs. Leong had put a value of several thousand dollars on her set.

"It seems everyone who heard the story started adding zeros."

He said when news broke the set was worth $100,000 the museum was flooded with calls. He said three of the callers indicated they had identical sets and were anxious to have them appraised.

The museum acquired its set from a private donor in 1972. It includes a tray, teapot, waterjug, and cream and sugar bowl.

In terms of quality and workmanship, said Gallacher, the set isn't particularly noteworthy but is valued by the museum because it represents an important item of import to B.C. 70 years ago.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me why Leonard Nimoy wasn't the host of this year's Telethon in Vancouver's Queen Elizabeth Theatre, and if he will be hosting next year's? I'm sure he was missing by a lot of fans.

A. TV show Star Trek's pointy-eared Mr. Spock missed the Telethon this year because he was on tour with an acting company in the U.S. The Vancouver Variety Club says Nimoy may be back in the future, depending on his availability. We were reminded that he also missed the telethon last year because of other commitments.

Old Courthouse Goes To Province for $1

The provincial government and the city of Victoria have signed a formal agreement guaranteeing a home for the Maritime Museum in the old courthouse building in Bastion Square.

The agreement, worked out in January, 1977, was signed this week by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy and Mayor Mike Young.

The site is being transferred from the city to the province for $1.

Under the agreement, the province will take over responsibility for the maintenance of the museum building.

The city has long-contended that the cost of upkeep on the building and deferring both rent and taxes on the site have cost it about $60,000 a year for what was essentially a provincial, rather than a city, museum.

The province has agreed to pay the city its normal grant in lieu of taxes for the museum site.

It is possible that the museum may have to move sometime in the future, but McCarthy said it will stay where it is for now.

Appreciation From Europeans

TORONTO (CP) — It takes a European to appreciate true Indian culture, says Margaret Cozry, an Ojibwa Indian from Parry Sound, Ont., who wants to restore authenticity to native crafts.

"It's an unpalatable fact that Europeans are more interested in Indian crafts than Canadians," says Miss Cozry, owner of The Algonquians, a Toronto craft store devoted entirely to Indian art. "We're so used to seeing cheap imitations of native arts from Japan that the crafts have lost their value."

Miss Cozry, who feels she has a duty to educate both white Canadians and Indians on the richness of the Indian heritage, criticizes many so-called native designs which are actually white inventions.

Even the use of beads, often associated with Indian culture, was in fact introduced by the white man in the 16th century, she said.

"If a German tourist comes into the store, he knows exactly what he is looking for," she says. "Sometimes it's embarrassing. If he wants a buckskin coat for example he will ask for one with quills instead of beads because he knows that quills were what the Indians originally used."

Miss Cozry who blames much of the perversion of the Indian culture on the school system, said she was appalled by the shoddiness of the goods available when she first opened her store almost two years ago. The materials were cheap, the craftsmen had lost their sense of design and they were limited in the colors they could use by the availability of beads.

For months she researched authentic Indian designs, then began supplying craftsmen with quality materials and gave them instructions on colors and designs.

"Designs like the beaver, which we associate with Indian work, were really introduced by the white man 60 years ago," she said. "I wanted to get back to original designs, like the thistle."

Meanwhile, Miss Cozry has revived the art of making quill boxes by encouraging young native women to learn from her grandmother and two aunts. The boxes are made from birch bark and decorated with porcupine quills—a process that may take a day and a half.

Students Tossed From Gallery

QUEBEC (CP) — Ten Laval University students were escorted from the visitors gallery in the Quebec national assembly after they threw leaflets on to the assembly floor and shouted demands for money to compensate for loss of summer employment. A recently-ended professors' strike has forced extension of the school year into the summer.

ON THE PROWL for literary nuggets, buyers at used book sale in Hillside Mall Friday even poked through cartons under tables. Sale was held by the Oak Bay Parents Association and is expected to raise about $400 for variety of band projects. Association raised over $20,000 last year. (Bill Halkett photo)

Millionaire Offers To Buy Orient Express

By ADRIAN DARMON

PARIS (Reuter) — When the French railway announced that the famed Orient Express train would end its career in May, a millionaire telephoned from Texas and said: "OK, I'll buy it."

The magnate—his identity was not disclosed—was unaware that the celebrated train which started to run from Paris to Constantinople in 1883 had been reduced to one car.

The single car contains 11 compartments, a Compagnie des Wagons Lits spokesman said.

"The train has become a legend because of writers like Agatha Christie and Paul Morand," he said.

The original Orient Express, which was carpeted throughout, its carriages decorated with velvet, crystal chandeliers and expensive furniture, disappeared on the outbreak of the First World War.

For more than 30 years, it was the meeting place of kings, nobles, millionaires and diplomats.

The First World War disrupted operations and by the time peace came another train, the Simplon-Orient Express was carrying high-society travellers between Paris and Istanbul.

Paul Morand wrote that the Orient Express had lost its trappings with the rise of a new generation of diplomats and the fall of the old aristocratic class.

A third train which crossed through Switzerland and Austria, the Arlberg-Orient Express was inaugurated in 1924. In the 1930s only part of the old Orient Express reached Istanbul after a stop in Budapest.

After the Second World War, the route to Turkey was abandoned by the Orient Express. The expansion of airlines forced the French railway to cut down the number of sleeping cars, and modernization erased all traces of the "belle epoque" era.

In 1962 a new express train, the Direct Orient, was introduced but only one of its cars reached Istanbul. It is this sleeping car, described as the last relic of the original Orient Express, which will make its last trip to Turkey next month.

When Belgian engineer Georges Nagelmackers started the Compagnie des Wagons Lits, he did not know his Orient Express train would become a legend.

From 1883 to 1889 the trip to Constantinople took 81 hours and 30 minutes. The train stopped at Varna, a Black Sea resort in Bulgaria. From there, travellers transferred to a ferry to reach the Turkish city.

In 1889, the trip was reduced to 67 hours and 35 minutes with the 246-foot-long train reaching Constantinople via Sofia.

This train was the one which founded the legend, with its 2,-000-mile journey, its luxury and its distinguished travellers.

The Orient Express was also called "the train of kings." When Leopold II of Belgium travelled, the company added an extra car for his mistress, Cleo de Merode.

Abdul Hamid, the Sultan of Turkey, always brought his harem with him and no ticket collector ever dared to check the car booked for his wives.

Despite May's official closing, the Orient Express may well live again. A Swiss company last year organized a special trip from Zurich to Istanbul aboard carriages dating back to 1925.

Some 75 passengers paid $750 each for the return trip and received lavish treatment with dances and dinner parties.

Sex Pill Dropped

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A mail-order company has agreed to stop marketing a pill they said would "rejuvenate sexual drive and potency," but which turned out to be plain Vitamin E.

Our major industries are in trouble.

People are leaving to work in Alberta. Businesses are leaving to re-locate in Washington State. Over 100,000 people are unemployed.

High unemployment means we have to pay more than we should in unemployment insurance and welfare costs.

It means that workers lose their jobs, and their homes.
It means $540,000,000 in lost productivity.

ICBC rates went up 100-300%. The sales tax went up 40%. Business went down.

But, the Socred regime did give a $32 million tax break to the millionaires, by abolishing succession duties.

The economy of B.C. is in trouble. And the government does nothing.

For small business, they've done nothing. And there's been no major capital investment in 16 months.
There is no planning, and no economic strategy. We call it an economic emergency.

They call it "pay-as-you-go".

Pinball Machine Secret Rests on Ego Trip

CHICAGO (AP) — The success of a pinball machine is making the player feel he's on an ego trip; an industry designer says.

"It's all psychological," says Jim Patla of Bally Manufacturing Corp. "You've got to build up a player's ego, give him enough skill shots so he feels he's a real pinball wizard even if he's not.

"The fact is a lot of it is just luck. But you don't want the player to know that. For them, the bells, the flashing lights, the real high scores—it's all a big ego trip."

Another Bally designer, Greg Kmiec, says the industry is gearing up to switch from mechanical to electronic machines because such models are cheaper to manufacture and easier to maintain.

"I'm not saying it won't work out, but I've always loved the feel, the thump of the game, and you just don't get that with electronics," said Kmiec.

A true pinball player won't be drawn into playing any game because of flashing lights or nifty artwork, Kmiec said. He looks at the machine for a fair number of skill shots requiring deft use of the flippers and a steady ball-plunger hand.

"A good game is self-explanatory. If players have to pore over the instruction card, it's not good. I like to give them immediate gratification in my games. If I turn on a light, and the player hits it, he gets something for it right away. And if I see a player get mad at a game and give it a whack, I know it's good."

Kmiec, 27, designed the playfields for the two hottest-selling games ever. The Wizard and Captain Fantastic.

"Maybe one in 10 designs will be a real dog," he said.

"I got the idea for a game we call The Night Rider when I was driving along and came to an expressway underpass. I was dazzled by the sight of all the stoplights turning amber in sequence."

Norm Clark, Bally's chief design engineer, said the company designs about 10 new flipper games a year.

Clark said manufacturers get weekly dollar reports from arcade owners about how much each game takes in. If one company's machine is getting especially good play, it's not unusual for a competing firm to send someone out to spy on it.

Clark recently flew to San Jose, Calif., to hang around a hot machine reported there. He said he watched the players, talked to the manager and tried to determine what was so great about the machine.

"Most of the time people know they like a particular game but they don't know why," said Clark. "The sound of the play is very important and flashing lights have some effect.

"But the most important thing is to design a game that is just tough enough so the players can get close to making the specials, but not so close they feel they can beat it."
